School Books Are Searched For Traces of Communism

Committee of 3 Named; Maurer, Georgetown, to Head Group.

He Wrote Volume On 'Constitution'

Report May Not Be Made Until After Yule Holidays.

The problem of so-called communistic textbooks in District schools was thrown yesterday into the hands of a Board of Education committee headed by a professor of Georgetown Law School, Robert Adam Maurer.

To the committee, the board president, Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, also appointed Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith and Dr. J. Hayden Johnson.

Board officers immediately turned over to the trio copies of three textbooks used in the senior high schools, "An Introduction to American Civilization" and "Changing Civilizations in the Modern World," both by Harold Rugg, and "Modern History," by Carl L. Becker.

May Take Several Weeks.

Maurer preferred not to estimate when the study would be completed, and Dr. Frank W. Ballou, school superintendent, had already pointed out that the communism sections of the books would not be reached in the course of study until after the Christmas vacation.

No deadline was set by Mrs. Doyle for the report, Maurer pointed out. Elsewhere it was predicted the study would last several weeks.

"We're going into it very carefully and deliberately," Maurer said last night. "We're going to go over every section that was criticized."

Inquiry Limited.

The study, he added, would embrace also eight supplementary readings suggested in the Becker book. But, "not unless the board tells us to," he said, would the committee go into the other textbooks used in the schools.

"There must be 35 to 50 books in the courses," he remarked.

The three books first turned over were the ones formally attacked by the Federation of Citizens Associations, through a special committee that appeared before the board on Wednesday.

The federation then asked that the persons responsible for the introduction of those books into the schools be revealed.

The board committee has only been instructed to study the books and file a report.

Maurer an Author.

Not only is Maurer, the chairman, a member of the board of education and a university professor, but he is the co-author of a textbook now used in the senior high schools in the eleventh grade, "The Constitution of the United States."

His co-author was George J. Jones, head of the history and social sciences department of the white high schools. The book was published in 1925.

From it, George E. Sullivan, attorney and member of the citizens' group, quoted approvingly in the course of his attack on the other books. Sullivan had charged that Rugg failed to credit constitutional guarantees of freedom for part of the high standard of American living. He quoted Maurer's book as follows:

"The Constitution is not a thing set apart and far removed from the people. Its guarantees are not remote. They touch the individual person directly and vitally in matters that affect his daily life. They do in reality establish justice, promote the happiness and welfare of the people and secure the blessings of liberty to all."

Says We're Indifferent.

"In the same unthinking and unquestioning spirit in which we enjoy the sunshine, we may now take these constitutional liberties very much as a matter of course. The rights other men struggled to ob-

"Is Roosevelt More Popular Than New Deal?"

The Literary Digest reports this week the first returns of a Nationwide poll on the popularity of the New Deal. First returns indicate that the New Deal has lost considerable ground.

But what about Mr. Roosevelt? Is he more popular than his New Deal?

In Sunday's Washington Post the American Institute of Public Opinion will make its second monthly report on the current strength of President Roosevelt. In the light of recent elections in New York, Pennsylvania and Kentucky, this scientific analysis of the current political status of the 48 States is illuminating.

Tragic Story Revealed By Mother of Corinna

Mrs. Loring Describes Events Leading Up to Finding of Bride-to-Be's Body on Lonely Ridge; Girl Had No Enemies, Bereaved Parent Asserts.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Copyright, 1935, by The Washington Post.

For the first time, Mrs. George A. Loring told a reporter in her own words yesterday the story of events leading up to the mysterious disappearance of her daughter, Corinna, 27-year-old bride-to-be, the night of Monday, November 4.

In an exclusive interview the gray-haired mother described the suspense between the time of the girl's disappearance and the finding five days later of her battered and garroted body on bleak Saddleback Ridge, less than half a mile from her home at 3110 Beech street, Mount Rainier.

She told of efforts she made during those five long days to find her daughter; of the way she learned the body had been found.

But now, more than a week after Corinna's burial, Mrs. Loring still has no idea as to who may have murdered the girl only two days before the time appointed for her wedding to Richard Tear, attendant at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

"I can understand how someone might have a grudge against me, but Corinna had no enemies," the slain girl's mother declared.

She was sitting in the neat little living room of the Loring's white bungalow with Mr. Loring close by. Her cheeks were slightly flushed from the crisp air out-of-doors. She had just come in from hanging her washing in the back yard.

The grim, harassed expression so evident on the day of the funeral was gone. The lines of her mouth were soft. Frequently her cool blue eyes crinkled in an attempt at a smile. Her thick gray hair, brushed back softly from her forehead, framed a face that was pleasant in its expression.

When she referred to her daughter, Mrs. Loring frequently used the present tense as if the girl was alive and on her honeymoon instead of in a crypt at Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Occasionally the mother shook her head and said:

"It all seems like a bad dream. I just can't believe this terrible thing has happened. I still expect to see her walk through that front door as she used to."

Calmly Mrs. Loring reviewed that

New Assaults Are Launched On U. S. Laws

AAA Taxes, Utility Control Attacked in Courts; Davis Aids Foes.

By Robert C. Albright.

Laboring under a staggering burden of New Deal litigation, the Government yesterday faced a new battery of business opposition to AAA processing taxes, watched additional suits take form in the lower courts, and heard the vast power industry openly defy utilities act legislation.

The new challenge to processing tax collection came from a group of lawyers headed by John W. Davis, former Democratic Presidential nominee, and member of the American Liberty League. In behalf of three corporations, Davis asked Supreme Court permission to join Hoosac Mills in testing processing tax validity.

Another group of reputed "friends of the farmer"—the League for Economic Equality—at the same time asked the right to intervene on the Government's side, while Solicitor General Stanley Reed appealed to the Supreme Court not to deny temporary injunction to Southern rice millers protesting processing tax collections.

Meanwhile, with only 9 days left in which to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the utilities act, the Consolidated Gas Co. of New York, and its subsidiaires, disclosed their intention not to register. All of the other large utility groups also are holding off, and defiance of the registration requirements may be general.

Other developments in the New Deal's legal clash with business over the constitutionality of laws were:

Vast Surplus To Stay Intact, Reserve Says

U. S. Money Experts Hold Danger of Inflation Is Slight.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Unanimity of opinion exists within the Federal Reserve system that the situation created by the unprecedented level of excess reserves, or idle money, is not one which calls for any affirmative action at the present time, it was reliably learned last night.

This was revealed following a two-day session of the Federal Reserve Advisory Council. The council, composed of 12 industrialists and financiers, each representing one of the Federal Reserve Banks, adjourned without making any recommendations to the Federal Reserve Board, which it was created to advise. The council, however, later may submit its attitude in writing to the reserve board.

The council met for several hours with the reserve board yesterday, discussing the reserve position of the system and proposed regulations governing bank loans on securities, under the 1934 Stock Exchange Control act. These regulations have not yet reached the stage of a tentative draft, although the reserve board's experts have been working on them for more than a year.

The council and board, with the latter's technical experts, discussed chiefly whether the formula or standard prescribed by Congress in the 1934 act for regulating loans on securities should be followed in applying the proposed restraints to the banks or whether a straight-out limitation or marginal requirement should not be prescribed.

The board used the standard specified by Congress as the basis for its

Hull Defends Trade Pact; Hits Critics

Reciprocal Agreements Held Only Alternative to Regimentation.

Hoover Attack Answered in Sharp Statement by Secretary.

Restoration of foreign markets through reciprocal trade agreements is the alternative to a straight and steady regimentation of American processes of production, transportation and distribution, Secretary of State Cordell Hull last night warned the country in defending the trade pact just concluded with Canada.

In a spirited statement, flaying "log-rolling lobbyists" and the Hawley-Smoot tariff act as attended by "reeking national scandal." Secretary Hull replied indirectly to the criticisms raised against the Canadian pact by former President Herbert Hoover.

He did not mention Mr. Hoover's name, but he undertook a detailed refutation of the latter's contention that the pact was another instance of "this hasty economic planning without full consideration of consequences." Mr. Hoover further complained that no opportunity had been granted for either public debate or adequate hearings on the pact's provisions.

Sharp Statement.

Secretary Hull, striking out against the "log-rolling method of the past," as exemplified in the Hawley-Smoot act signed by Mr. Hoover, explained that in the preparation of each trade agreement "hearings are given to all interested persons," with all invited to submit data and arguments covering every tariff item in question. He pointed out that it has taken from 6 to 12 months to negotiate each of these agreements. In particular, he recalled that work started on the Canadian pact last January.

But the Secretary of State did not stop by assailing the Hoover contentions. He reminded the country that unless it was willing to engage in foreign trade it must "inescapably restrict" its production to the domestic consuming capacity, with new waves of unemployment and "a permanent dole to many millions on a steadily increasing basis."

The tone of Secretary Hull's statement was surprisingly sharp and brittle, perhaps one of the sharpest statements ever to issue from the State Department, which is not in the habit of speaking outright and with sleeves rolled up.

Hits Professional Politicians.

He contended that the protests against the Canadian agreement recorded so far were confined "almost entirely to professional partisan politicians, or to some of the specially privileged individuals benefiting from excessive tariff rates." He noted that among the latter, however, there was "a noticeable division of opinion."

Hull contended that no one questions "the broad economic benefits which will result to the Nation as a whole" and that "from the standpoint of both agriculture and industry the soundness of this trade agreement is clear." He further claimed that the reciprocal trade program had the support of "probably 85 per cent of the press of the Nation."

The Hull statement clearly indicated that the Administration is determined to defend not only the Canadian pact but the entire reciprocal trade program and that the controversy will not go by default to those fighting the reductions in the American tariff wall. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace has been as ardent in his defense of the pact as Secretary Hull.

Mr. Wallace, having issued detailed statements regarding the pact on Monday and Wednesday, yesterday told the country's farmers in a radio broadcast not to be misled in this matter by the "enemies of agriculture." He described the pact as one of the "most hopeful and help-

Sea Flares Revive Hope for 2 Fliers

Plane Sent to Island Seeking Kingsford-Smith.

By the Associated Press.

Singapore (Friday) Nov. 22.—The captain of the Steamer Pasha wirelessed early today he had sighted flares on Sayer Island, shortly before midnight last night, giving rise to hopes here that they might have been lighted by Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, missing Australian flier.

Sayer Island is off the west coast of Siam in the Bay of Bengal, and it was believed the Australian and his companion, J. Thomas Pethybridge, who were lost November 8 while on a projected London-to-Australia flight, might have been forced down there.

Western Montana Hit By Severe Earthquake

Helena, Mont., Nov. 21 (U.P.).—Western Montana was rocked for several seconds by one of the heaviest earth movements felt here since the major quake of October 31.

The quake was timed at 9:01 p. m. (M. S. T.) Furniture danced and buildings creaked alarmingly. No damage was discernible immediately.

Cairo's Police Quell Rioters; 50 Are Jailed

Yesterday's Rioting.

Seven native policemen were injured and 50 rioters arrested in Cairo demonstrations on the anti-British "day of mourning."

Arabs battled British traffic policemen in Jerusalem at the funeral of three alleged gangsters. Four were seriously wounded.

Anti-Jewish rioting in Budapest spread to the provincial towns after police had used sabers to disperse a mob. Many were wounded.

Anti-Czech demonstrators in Warsaw smashed 11 windows in the Czech legation. Police, meanwhile, sought to curb student activities directed at Jews.

By the Associated Press.

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 21.—Fifty rioters were arrested and seven native policemen injured in short-lived disorders today on Cairo's anti-British "day of mourning."

Tram windows and street lamps were smashed and some shops damaged by several thousand hooligans and a few students. For three hours paving stones were tossed about freely, but order was restored tonight and the rioters vanished.

Students, who called the "day of mourning" for their comrades slain in last week's anti-British riots, failed, however, to effect a hoped-for general strike.

Egyptian Nationalists did not join in the demonstrations as groups. A projected lawyers' strike failed, many barristers doing business as usual.

In the native quarter, some merchants draped their doors in mourning and when an American correspondent drove through the district his Arab dragoman was kept busy shouting: "American—not British!"

Cairo's famed bazaar also was shut down.

Britain Shows Power.

Off Alexandria, Great Britain's mighty armada staged one of the greatest naval displays in the history of the Eastern Mediterranean, but instead of a gesture of war, the maneuvers provided a thrilling show for Egyptian officials.

Premier Nessim Pasha and his cabinet, Prince Mohammed Ali and other dignitaries saw an impressive parade by the battle squadron of five battleships, six cruisers and two aircraft carriers. Fifty planes dropped smoke bombs and 18 destroyers laid down a 15-mile smoke screen.

The battleships smashed targets 11 miles away, each ship hurling 20 tons of steel out to sea.

Native police fired several times over the heads of ruffians intent on closing shops in side and back streets, and dispersed the mobs many times with stout clubs.

Police Stoned.

Some merchants closed their shutters and windows in other shops were broken as the hooligans demonstrated against British domination and the stand of Premier Nessim.

Several national police were stoned outside the headquarters of the leading nationalist society, WAFD.

Although 5,000 native police and soldiers were stationed throughout the city, ready for any trouble, British police who fought last week with students kept in the background and it was understood Premier Nessim had given orders today's demonstrators were not to be fired upon.

A close check of hospitals disclosed no casualties tonight. Shops and bazaars reopened and police reported all was quiet. Gay crowds returned to the streets.

Freezing Weather Due Here Tonight

Season's Low in Prospect, Says Forecaster.

Washington can expect winter temperature sometime tonight. The Weather Bureau last night predicted the mercury would go below anything recorded this season. Below freezing temperatures are expected.

The forecast for today was fair and colder, with temperatures sliding toward the freezing point at sundown.

Over a wide area of the Middle West winter appeared to have set in a month ahead of time. The Associated Press reported snow and biting temperatures in a half-dozen States.

North Dakota had the lowest temperature, 12 below zero at Minot, and the most snow, enough in some places to make highways impassable. Southern Minnesota got some snow and in northern Iowa the fall was 2 inches. Snow flurries dusted the ground in the Chicago area, where the forecast was for temperatures in the 20s tonight.

Ethiopians Rout Foes; Il Duce Reduces Army; Cut Off Oil, Ickes Urges

Asks Producers to Halt Shipments of Product to Italians.

U. S. Edges Closer To Rome Reprisals

Interior Head's Action May Involve America in Sanctions.

By Felix Bruner.

Secretary Ickes, oil administrator, yesterday called upon American oil producers to halt voluntarily their shipments to Italy.

Explaining that he had "no authority at all," the Secretary of the Interior nevertheless added that producers "should comply both in letter and in spirit to the efforts of the Government to prevent shipments of munitions to belligerents."

Simultaneously, Ickes made public a report of the Bureau of Mines showing that exports of motor fuel were higher in September than in August and explaining that this indicates "that the stimulation in this trade is due to the war scares and other factors," which the bureau said outweighed the usual seasonal decline.

The bureau added that for this reason the estimate of exports of gasoline for December has been raised to 2,400,000 barrels from the estimate of 2,310,000 barrels in November.

Ickes' statement is in line with the recent statement of Secretary Hull, referring to shipment of oil, copper, trucks and iron to belligerents as being "directly contrary to the policy of the Government."

From Rome the Associated Press reported that well-informed sources said the United States is edging ever closer to inclusion in Italy's list of nations to be dealt with by economic reprisals.

May Cripple Army.

The dispatch said that official comment on the request of Ickes was withheld pending details. It added that spokesmen did not disguise the Government's feeling that suggestions of this sort tend to place the United States in the "sanctionist" category.

Rome observers were said to believe that if United States oil is cut off, Italy will have trouble in obtaining fuel and lubricating oil for the machanized army in Africa. Between January and September of this year Italy imported 467,299 quintales of lubricating oil, of which 404,347 quintales came from the United States. America supplied little of Italy's gasoline, but this country is the chief source aside from the sanctionist countries.

An Associated Press dispatch from Houston, Tex., reported a general disposition among oil companies to heed Ickes' appeal. Officials of the Humble Oil & Refining Co., Shell Petroleum Corporation, Gulf Oil Co. and Tidewater-Seaboard Co. were quoted to that effect.

From Geneva the Associated Press reported that Ickes' request to the oil industry was considered in League of Nations circles a helpful step toward realization of an embargo on oil.

"Genius of Each Nation."

The League's committee of 18 on sanctions will meet next week to consider the possibility of fixing a date for an embargo on the exportation to Italy of oil, coal, iron and steel.

In a radio talk last night Attorney General Cummings referred to the neutrality policy as a "true reflection of the national thought."

"Each nation, of course, must approach this problem within the genius of its own institutions," he said, "in the light of its own growth and according to the will and temper of its people.

"So far as ooncerns our own country, I think our Government has given a true reflection of the

AMBASSADOR ARIYOSHI.

Tokyo Cabinet Faces Ouster In China Crisis

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Friday), Nov. 22.—Sources close to the government said Japanese militarists and opposing civilian leaders faced a showdown today over the North China situation, with the life of the cabinet possibly in the balance.

The issue was expected to be debated by the cabinet, with Foreign Minister Koki Hirota leading the civilian group, and Gen. Yoshiyuki Kawashima, minister of war, representing the militarists.

Hirota, informed sources said, favors a compromise which would allow the Chinese national government to retain a considerable degree of authority in the five northern provinces.

This plan was recommended by Akira Ariyoshi, Ambassador to China, who consulted with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, Chinese National government leader, in Nanking yesterday.

The proposed declaration of autonomy by the five provinces has been "postponed for the time being" in response to the urgent instructions of Chiang Kai-Shek, the Rengo (Japanese) News Agency reported from Tientsin.

This decision, the agency continued, was "reached at a conference of northern leaders convened in Tientsin by Gen. Sung Chen-Yuan (commander of the Peiping-Tientsin garrison), who arrived hurriedly from Peiping."

The newspaper Asahi said when Ambassador Ariyoshi submitted his compromise plan to Tokyo, he said: "This is likely to be my last service to the Emperor," indicating he would resign if militarists have their way. Ariyoshi has been accused by militarists of being too soft in dealing with the Chinese.

An official source said the independence plan was held up when the army high command here issued an order saying officers participating in Chinese separatist movements were exceeding their

Raiders Dispersed By Italian Askaris

100,000 Furloughed by Mussolini to Fight Economic Siege.

The War Crisis.

Ethiopia's southern forces in an offensive south of Daggah Bur were reported to have captured four Italian tanks and many prisoners.

Italian native Askaris routed a band of Ras Seyoum's raiders in the north.

Premier Mussolini ordered furloughs for 100,000 soldiers in order that they might return to the farms and factories to aid the fight against sanctions.

Secretary Ickes asked oil producers not to ship to belligerents. Rome interpreted the request as indicating the United States is showing an inclination to join sanctionist nations.

Jijiga, by telephone to Harar, Nov. 21.—Spurred by a daring airplane visit of Emperor Haile Selassie, Ethiopian troops today launched an offensive south of Daggah Bur, and under heavy bombardment captured four Italian tanks and many prisoners.

The king of kings exhorted his soldiers to win the Ogaden campaign or stand responsible for Ethiopia's complete defeat. The answer from Dejazmatch Nassibu was a command to hurl back the Italian columns advancing up the Fanfan Valley toward Jijiga.

British Go to Front.

After bidding farewell to Nassibu, E. A. Chapman Andrews, British consul at Harar, and Capt. R. H. R. Taylor, military observer, left for Daggah Bur to watch the fighting. They will be the only Caucasians in the war area except Dr. Robert Hockman, of Wheaton, Ill., and his two British assistants, who are maintaining a Red Cross field hospital at Daggah Bud under severe bombardment.

The most serious clash of the war to date was anticipated near Jijiga soon. Huge clouds of smoke were seen rolling skyward, apparently either heavy bombing beyond Jijiga or exploding ammunition dumps.

Today, the Emperor conferred at length with his officers at Nassibu's headquarters and then left by automobile for Harar. After a brief visit to the scene of his earlier governorship, he continued to Diredawa, where he entered his plane and returned to Addis Ababa.

The Emperor, dressed in a khaki uniform, woolen puttees, black shoes and a cloak, was accompanied by Abbe Behana, high priest and ranking second abunda of the Coptic Christian Church. He gave his benediction to the troops on the eve of the battle.

Arrives in Touring Car.

Haile Selassie arrived at Harrar from Jijiga under the cover of night, unheralded, riding in a touring car with his chief of staff. Bodyguards rode before and after the Emperor's machine in two trucks.

After praying, the Emperor visited the tomb he is building at Harar for his father's remains, then went to the hospitals, where he spoke to each man.

"It is a good fight for your country," he told the wounded. "You are good Ethiopians!"

He received the soldiers before departing. They prostrated themselves and kissed his feet.

It was understood the Emperor's visit to Ogaden headquarters will be followed by a similar one to the northern front in a final effort to bolster his troops' morale, demanding that his warriors take the offensive and deal the Italians a staggering blow.

Ex-Sailor Arrested in Swindles Of Prominent Washingtonians

A former Navy enlisted man was held on Federal charges last night in a series of swindles by which Japanese and Chilean embassy officials and others prominent in Washington were duped into surrendering their cash.

The arrest in New York City on a charge of violating the Federal impersonation statute was announced last night by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation. Hoover at the same time gave a list of victims of the swindle. They were:

Hirosi Saito, the Japanese Ambassador; Benjamin Cohen, counselor of the Chilean Embassy; J. Harry Covington, Washington attorney and former justice of the District Supreme Court; George Thomas Dunlop, also a prominent Washington attorney, and Mrs. Custis R. Perry, wife of a Navy Yard draftsman, whose daughter is the wife of Lieut. William Lewis Benson, U. S. N.

Hoover said the man operated in New York and among socially prominent residents of Newport, R. I., as well as in Washington. Victims there Hoover announced as:

Mrs. James B. Duke, Newport social registerite; Dr. William Darrach, dean emeritus of the Columbia University Medical School; James H. Caldwell, a New York City attorney, and Maj. K. Iida, of the office of the Japanese army inspector at New York.

Hoover said the man was Carl Scheland, jr., 31, a native of Orange, N. J., where he attended the Orange High School before starting a life of adventure that included several years at sea both in naval and merchant vessels, gold prospecting in the Philippine Islands and, ac-

Mother of 16 'Sorry in a Way,' Yet 17th May Win $500,000

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, Nov. 21.—A 36-year-old mother of 16 children, who thinks "birth control is a wonderful thing," entered herself today in Toronto's $500,000 "baby race."

She is Mrs. Arthur Hollis Timleck, who claims to have given birth to nine babies in the last nine years. A tenth is expected within a few months, she said. Thirteen of the 16 children she bore are living.

Under the will of the late Charles Vance Millar, half a million dollars will be awarded in October, 1936, to the Toronto mother who has borne the greatest number of children in the previous 10 years.

Mrs. Timleck's husband, who is 38, is employed in motorboat work. The Timlecks have had to go on relief occasionally during the last few years.

"I think birth control is a wonderful thing," she asserted. "I'm sorry, in one way, birth control information was not available for people years ago. I know mothers who would have welcomed such knowledge."

The Timlecks think they have a good chance to win, or at least tie, for the fortune. They said Mrs. Matthew Kenney's claim of 11 eligible children is disputed by other candidates.

Mrs. Joseph Bagnato and Mrs. John Nagle each report nine children in the ten-year period, and Mrs. Stefano Darrigo, Mrs. Ambrose Harrison and Mrs. Gus Graziano, eight apiece.

If she wins the money, Mrs. Timleck said she would use it for the advancement of her children.

"I'd like to have a housekeeper to help with the smaller ones," she explained. "Thirteen children is too much for one woman to handle."

Borah Is Mum As Ex-Senator Indorses Him

Roscoe McCulloch Adds His Support; Norris Center of Dispute.

By the Associated Press.

William E. Borah yesterday was importuned by a former Senate colleague—Roscoe McCulloch, Ohio Republican—to run for President, but the Idahoan declined publicly to declare himself.

"Matters stand about as they were," Senator Borah reported after his talk with the Ohioan. His statement recalled to observers that last week he replied "I can't say I won't" when asked whether he would enter Presidential primaries.

Borah, himself, handed this statement to newsmen in behalf of McCulloch:

"I have had an interview with Senator Borah and, of course, it was in regard to Presidential politics. Senator Borah has a strong support in Ohio for the Presidency. Nothing has been determined definitely as yet. I am one of a great many who would like to see him make the race."

Meanwhile Chairman James A. Farley, of the Democratic committee, and Charles Michelson, publicity chief of the committee, sped toward California. Farley, as Postmaster General, will inaugurate the transpacific air-mail service of the China Clipper. He will join President Roosevelt in Georgia next week.

Townsend Plan Wins.

On another front Chairman Chester Bolton, of the national Republican Congressional committee, announced "full support" would be given Burner W. Main, Republican, nominated for Representative from the Third Michigan District on a platform including enactment of the Townsend old-age pension plan.

"We understad that Mr. Main's nomination resulted from various factors," Bolton said. "He will be given the full support of our committee and his victory at the election seems assured."

Dispute on Norris

North Platte, Nebr., Nov. 21 (AP).—Keith Neville, of North Platte, Nebraska's Democratic national committeeman, said today Senator George W. Norris, veteran Nebraska independent Republican is not entitled to Democratic support if he seeks re-election as a Republican or an independent.

"Should Norris enter the Democratic Party and be nominated he would be entitled to the support of the Democrats," Neville said, "but he is not entitled to that support if he runs as an Independent or a Republican against an able and honorable Democrat who represents the views of the Democrats of Nebraska on present-day issues.

Governor Disagrees.

Other State Democratic leaders, however, including Gov. R. L. Cochran, heartily indorsed the Democratic move in behalf of Norris. J. C. Quigley, of Valentine, State Democratic committee chairman, said he would be glad to welcome Norris into the party, but asserted he was "only the hired hand of the State committee."

When it was recently reported Senator Norris might not be a candidate for re-election, President Roosevelt said that if he were a Nebraskan, he would insist that Norris return to the Senate.

Norris has supported numerous New Deal measures.

Kurtz, Missing Flier, Found Safe on Ranch

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 21 (AP).—Frank Kurtz, 21-year-old cross-country flier, object of a two-day search, was found safe today, having landed in the face of howling winds on a ranch soon after his Tuesday take-off from Cheyenne for the West.

As searching parties set out anew by plane, automobile and saddle horse, a farm woman telephoned that the missing flier was at the ranch of Hugh McPhee.

Kurtz, who has made several transcontinental and Canada-to-Mexico flights, said he was unaware he was believed missing and so made no effort to communicate sooner with friends.

Two Condemned Men Are Granted Reprieves

Olympia, Wash., Nov. 21 (AP).—Gov. Clarence D. Martin granted last-minute 60-day reprieves today in the death sentences imposed on Marritt Hunter, jr., 21, Olympia, and Carl Patterson, 20, Wapato.

Hunter, convicted for the slaying of Lillian Kanda, 19, his Japanese-American sweetheart, and Patterson, sentenced for killing William Simpson, Wapato farmer, were to have been hanged shortly after midnight.

Utilities Look in Legal Shotgun: Is It Loaded? Hoffman's Amendment; Political "It."

—By Raymond Clapper

UTILITIES have begun a "general strike" against the new utilities act. Some of the largest of them are announcing that they will refuse to obey the law, which requires that they register with SEC by December 1. This is preliminary to testing the constitutionality of the new act in the courts.

Could anything more clearly emphasize the stupidity of the system we have, which requires supposedly law-abiding citizens to violate the law, to defy it, in order to find out whether it sticks or is unconstitutional?

No one can give you an intelligent reason why this sort of thing must go on. They just tell you it must be that way. It does make business for the lawyers, and that is its only merit. But why permit such cockeyed legal boondoggling in the courts, where the millions of dollars at stake in many constitutional cases are made a judicial football?

Imagine a more illogical piece of business than this:

The directors of United Gas & Improvement, the oldest utility holding company in the country, and one of the largest, an $800,000,000 concern, meet in Philadelphia. Former Senator George Wharton Pepper, a distinguished lawyer, appears.

"Gentlemen," he says, "we have made a close study of the law and because we are convinced that it cannot be sustained we have no hesitation in advising the United Gas Improvement Co. and its subsidiary holding companies to refuse to register under the act."

Other companies are doing likewise.

Of course, if they are guessing wrong, they may go to jail. They could go ahead and conform to the law, reorganize their businesses and then find out later, perhaps, that it was all a mistake. It doesn't matter much which course is pursued. It is ridiculous that either one should be necessary.

This hocus-pocus is a good deal like having to look into a shotgun barrel while you pull the trigger to find out whether it is loaded.

Amid the agitation over the sanctity of the Constitution, one sensible idea has been put forward by Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey in an open letter to Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee.

He proposes that Congress submit a constitutional amendment which would require that all laws be submitted to the Supreme Court for a decision as to their constitutionality before they become effective. The suggestion is so simple and goes so directly to the point that probably it will go unappreciated by our best legal minds.

Gov. Hoffman's proposed amendment reads as follows:

"That all laws enacted by the Congress and approved by the President, or enacted by the Congress over the disapproval of the President, shall be submitted to the Supreme Court of the United States for a decision as to their constitutionality before they become effective. Any law held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court shall be null and void."

Gov. Hoffman says he is assured that the Supreme Court in its present form is able to carry out the terms of this amendment.

An alleged voting scandal in the recent corn-hog referendum is reported from the Unionists and Public Forum, published at Sioux City, Iowa, in the current bulletin of the American Liberty League.

An editorial in the Iowa publication says that in one township votes of the farmers were obtained by personal canvass by the corn-hog committee members. Ballots, the editorial states, were marked and collected by these personal visits. Farmers going to the polling place reported it was closed.

The editorial concludes: "The election officials merely took out of their pockets the votes they had secured in their canvass of the township from house to house and counted them, and announced the result without the trouble of going to the polling place. If any person desires to question these facts, let him call on us for the proof and we will furnish it."

Former Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, eliminates himself as a Republican Presidential possibility with the explanation that he lacks "political sex appeal."

That is too bad, because, among conservatives, Senator Reed ranks as one of the ablest. However, ability is a minor element in political sex appeal. It is desirable but not essential.

One trouble with the former Senator was that although he was a gentleman he was unable to lie like one. For instance, after his State voted for the late Bill Vare, Senator Reed, who had a low estimate of Vare, rose in the Senate and declared that the voters of Pennsylvania were a lot of "dunderheads."

Political sex appeal is a thing someone else will have to define. It takes many forms. "Silent Cal" Coolidge, who in private was quite garrulous, had it. Big Bill Thompson held on as Mayor of Chicago on the strength of a threat to "punch King George in the snoot" if he ever set foot in Chicago. Sockless Jerry Simpson in Kansas gathered votes by throwing away his socks. Whatever it is, Dr. Townsend has it, even at his age.

With politics, as with love, there seems to be no formula for success. You either have "it" or you don't. The only difference is that in politics, if you don't have it, not even your best friends will tell you. And few—Senator Reed is almost alone—ever find it out for themselves.

Judge, FERA Differ On Drinks for Needy

Chicago, Nov. 21 (AP).—Relief clients who are not teetotalers were warned by Municipal Judge Robert J. Dunne today that:

"One or two drinks a day should be sufficient."

He ordered jailing of two men arrested after a spree on cash from relief checks.

The county relief administration, however, went farther than the judge. It promptly ruled that reliefers cashing checks in taverns or handbooks would get no more cash.

Sloan Acquires $1,200,000 in Motor Stock

Transfer of 30,000 G. M. Shares Is Revealed in Securities Report.

By the Associated Press.

Purchase by Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president, of 30,000 shares of General Motors common stock, whose market value approximated $1,200,000, was disclosed yesterday in Securities Commission reports.

Sloan's report did not show the price paid for the stock. But on the basis of market quotations August 6, date of the transaction, the shares have gained about $500,000 in value.

Sloan's report also disclosed total holdings at the end of August of 770,984 shares of General Motors common with a current market value of about $45,000,000. He claimed direct ownership of only 50,406 shares, however, disclaiming "beneficial interest" in the balance.

"Beneficial interest" officials said, means that a corporation official contends he receives benefits from his holdings.

The shares in which he disclaimed beneficial interest were held through part ownership of other companies which in turn held General Motors stock.

Other reports disclosed little market activity by officers and large stockholders. Gifts of some $600,000 in August and September were shown. Previous reports have shown many millions in gifts and yesterday's filings were only supplemental.

The Sloan report gave no indication of the extent to which he may exercise control through his holdings.

Bladensburg Aviator Forced Down by Ice

Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 21 (AP).—Ice forming on the windshield of his 400-pound airplane forced Edward W. Stitt, of Bladensburg, Md., to land today at nearby Woodville, interrupting an attempted distance record flight from Davenport, Iowa, to Washington.

Stitt said he hoped to better a 529-mile record for light ships established by a French flier in 1929. Unfavorable weather kept Stitt from continuing his flight immediately.

MRS. LOUISE CLEWS VANNECK, whose mother, Mrs. Henry Clews, widow of the multi-millionaire New York banker, has announced that her daughter will wed Ian Douglas, nephew and heir to the Duke of Argyll. The marriage will take place in Europe this Saturday. The heiress was divorced a year ago.

Experts Studying Cotton Export Plan

By the Associated Press.

Senator Lonergan (Democrat), Connecticut, said yesterday there was little likelihood of action by Government officials on his proposal to subsidize cotton textile exports until after February 1.

Lonergan has suggested the Government sell to cotton manufacturers Federally held cotton at 7 cents a pound, with the stipulation that it be made into cloth for export only. A committee of Agriculture Department experts now is studying the plan.

Lonergan explained February 1 marked the expiration of pledges of cotton producers who had accepted Government advances. He said he had been told by officials of the Agriculture and Commerce departments that any plan for sale of Government cotton before that date would be unwise.

Officials Deny 'Tugwelltown' Strike Threat

Only 10 Men Have Quit at Berwyn Project, Not 50, Says Lansill.

Reports of a strike threat by relief workers at the $5,000,000 Berwyn Heights, Md., housing project were ridiculed yesterday by Government officials.

Of 826 men on the unskilled labor pay roll, said John S. Lansill, of the Resettlement Administration, 10 have quit instead of 50, the number named as participating in the walkout by John Revere, leader of the discontented workers.

Lansill said he did not expect a substantial number of men to give up their jobs. He added there had been no pay cut, as contended by Revere.

Instead, Lansill explained, the administration continued its practice of deducting $15 for subsistence from the $45 monthly wage of men who worked 88 hours.

An opportunity has been afforded for the men to work 136 hours, or 17 days a month, he pointed out, if they want to receive subsistence without any deduction from the $45. The employes, he said, are under "no obligation" to live at the lodge.

Most of those concerned, he said, came from District transient relief rolls. Jobs also have been given to Prince Georges and Montgomery County unemployed.

'Mind Your Business,' Luther Tells Nations

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 21 (AP).—Dr. Hans Luther, German Ambassador to the United States, today declared nations should learn to "mind their own business."

Dr. Luther, who was heckled in Minneapolis and St. Paul by Jewish organizations protesting Nazi treatment of German Jews, addressed the Rotary Club.

"The people of one nation," Dr. Luther said, "should not attempt to interfere in the internal affairs of any other nation."

Jersey Insists Hauptmann's Trial Was Fair

Lie Detector Used to Test Veracity of Prisoner Planned by Doctor.

By the Associated Press.

New Jersey asked the Supreme Court yesterday to let State law take its course in dealing death to Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the kidnapping and murder of the Lindbergh baby.

A 30-page brief, filed by Joseph Lanigan, assistant State's attorney general, contended the Bronx carpenter had been given all his constitutional rights and hence there was no reason for the high tribunal to review his conviction.

"The State, through its courts," the brief said, "has retained jurisdiction over him and has accorded to him the fullest right and opportunity to be heard according to the established modes of procedure and now holds him in custody to pay the penalty for the crime of which he has been adjudged guilty."

May Act December 9.

Because of the State's speedy reply to Hauptmann's application for a review, the Supreme Court may announce as early as December 9 whether it will pass on the case.

If the court refuses to review the controversy, the death sentence will stand unless set aside by further proceedings. Defense counsel could ask for a new trial on the basis of new evidence (if any is found) or appeal for a commutation of the sentence to life imprisonment.

Should a review be granted, the case would be set for argument perhaps in February or March.

The conviction following the celebrated trial at Flemington was unanimously affirmed by the 13 judges on the court of errors and appeals, the highest State tribunal. Hauptmann now is in the New Jersey "death house" at Trenton.

Replying to contentions of Hauptmann attorneys that the Flemington trial resembled a "circus" and "a hysterical mob spirit prevailed," the brief prepared by Lanigan and by David T. Wilentz, New Jersey attorney general, asserted:

"His allegations of hostile public sentiment and disorders in and about the courtroom, and improperly influencing the jury against him, are supported by no evidence and should be rejected as lacking in fact."

May Use Lie Detector.

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 21 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, fighting for his life at the tribune of final appeal, the United States Supreme Court, will be given a lie detector test to determine the veracity of his testimony at his trial, Dr. William M. Marston said here today.

A psychologist and discoverer of the test, Dr. Marston said he had been requested to make the experiment on the convicted slayer of the Lindbergh baby by Lloyd Fisher, Hauptmann's counsel. Both Hauptmann and his wife are eager to have it done, the doctor added.

No date for the test, in Hauptmann's death house cell at Trenton, N. J., has been set.

"By using the lie detector," commented the doctor, "we may learn new facts about the kidnaping and killing."

Col. Norman Schwartzkopf, of the New Jersey State police; David Wilentz, prosecutor of Hauptmann, and Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey, have approved of the test for the condemned man, Dr. Marston said.

"Never Wanted to See Jafsie."

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 21.—The Rev. D. G. Werner, of New York City, Bruno Richard Hauptmann's spiritual adviser, said today Hauptmann told him he never had asked to see Dr. John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

Dr. Condon, who testified he paid the Lindbergh ransom money to Hauptmann, said yesterday in Boston Hauptmann had sent for him three times.

A statement today by Dr. William M. Marston at Rochester, N. Y., that a lie detector test had been approved for Hauptmann received no confirmation from Attorney General David T. Wilentz, the trial prosecutor, and C. Lloyd Fisher, defense attorney.

Fisher said he "never heard" of Dr. Marston.

"I will agree to a lie detector test under certain conditions," Fisher said. "They are that the State agree to abide by the test and if it shows Hauptmann is not lying that they set him free. Another is that I be present, and the third condition is that a medical man be present."

Roosevelt Arrives in Georgia

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Roosevelt in Warm Springs, Ready for a Busy Vacation

Paralysis Victims Cheer President as He Returns for Traditional Holiday With Them; Will Tackle Budget Problems.

By the United Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 21.—President Roosevelt tonight settled down for a three-weeks' stay in his temporary White House amid Georgia's pine-clad hills with plenty of unfinished Government business to occupy his time. He arrived here at 4 p. m. from Washington.

His southland sojourn is in keeping with the tradition established when he was Governor of New York State, that the Thanksgiving holiday be spent with the patients at Warm Springs Foundation, the sanitarium he helped create for infantile paralysis sufferers.

Some of those patients were on hand to welcome him when his special train pulled into the little Warm Springs station. They shouted a welcome and he smiled and waved back in characteristic fashion. Then he was driven to his cottage, "Little White House" of Georgia.

The President brought with him several boxes filled with matters relating to the 1937 budget, routine correspondence and official papers of one kind or another upon which he will work. With the exception of a conference Monday on buget estimates for three departments, Mr. Roosevelt's stay was expected to be unusually quiet.

The Monday meeting will be with Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the budget, and Chairman Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee.

By the Associated Press.

Pembroke, Ga., Nov. 21.—Gov. Eugene Talmadge renewed his attack on the National Administration in a speech near here today as President Roosevelt arrived in Georgia for a Thanksgiving vacation.

Addressing a rally of citizens from southeast Georgia at Jenk's Bridge, the Governor assailed the Government's agricultural program, charged a waste of taxpayers' money in "teaching ballet dancing and the like" and urged repeal of the Federal income tax.

Talmadge declared that "in Norris, Tenn.," the Tennessee Valley Authority town, "they won't allow a church built in the town."

"You preachers check up on that," he shouted.

Witness Tells Of Fictitious Bank Deposit

The first of nine alleged fictitious deposits in the defunct Park Savings Bank made by the late Robert S. Stuntz, former vice president and executive officer of the bank, in collaboration with Benedict McNeil and his father, Alexander McNeil, was described to a jury in District Supreme Court yesterday by Eugene Sauer, special investigator of the Department of Justice.

Benedict McNeil is being tried on charges that he conspired to steal from the bank.

The deposit involved $845.93 and was booked on February 17, 1931, as being to the credit of the A. M. McNeil Co., Sauer testified. There was no accompanying cash deposit to show for the account, the witness said on being questioned by Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson.

Wilson said he would attempt to show eight additional cases in which fictitious deposits credited to persons were not made legitimately. The Government expects to complete its case today.

Mexico to Arm Rural Teachers Against Killers

Dozen Slain in Month for Socialistic Doctrines, States Charge.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, Nov. 21.—The federal secretariat of education, alarmed by the growing number of killings of rural school teachers, asked the war department today to allow teachers to arm for protection against violent measures of the opponents of socialistic education.

More than 12 such killings have been reported in the last month, most of them in the States of Puebla, Morelos and Jalisco.

Several days ago two women teachers were attacked in Puebla by rebels, who cut off their ears and threatened them with death if they continued giving socalistic instruction.

Dispatches from Puebla yesterday reported the leader of a band suspected of killing six teachers in the Texiutlan district in a single day last week had been captured and shot by federal troops.

Body Put on Display.

Convinced that vigorous measures are necessary to halt the slayings, authorities placed his body on display in the plaza in Texiutlan as a warning to other enemies of the official education.

Officials said the attacks on teachers were inspired by "fanatics."

Two killings in Morelos have been attributed by officials to "El Tallarin," insurgent leader who has evaded federal pursuers for more than six months. He is accused of numerous raids on towns in Morelos and Puebla. Federal troops have nearly captured the elusive "El Tallarin" many times and wounded him at least once. But he always managed to escape.

Socialistic education, which became compulsory through a reform of the constitution more than a year ago, has been rigorously opposed by certain sections of the populace.

Gives Child Free Choice.

The government has contended that socialistic education does not attack religion, but leaves the child free to choose whatever religion suits him and that parents are free to impart to their children any religious belief whatsoever.

The purpose of socialistic education, government officials state, is "to destroy the superstitions which prevent a child from really understanding the world, and to give him a realistic and rational idea of things as they are."

Claude Ballard Dies in Store

Veteran of U. S. Service, 67, Stricken Hour After Leaving Office.

Claude M. Ballard, 67, chief of the publication division of the United States Forest Service, died of a heart attack in a downtown store yesterday within an hour after leaving his office.

An employe of the Government for 35 years, Mr. Ballard's public relations and welfare work in the Forest Service and the Department of Agriculture had given him a wide acquaintance throughout the Federal service. He was responsible for placing depositories in Government offices for the collection of clothing for the needy.

Coming to the Forest Service in 1909 after ten years with the Government Printing Office, Mr. Ballard was known to chiefs of the service from Gifford Pinchot, former Governor of Pennsylvania, to F. A. Silcox, the present chief.

Mr. Ballard lived at 543 Randolph street northwest. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary B. Ballard, and two daughters, Mary Louise Ballard and Mrs. Gayle B. Anderson, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in the S. H. Hines funeral home, at 2901 Fourteenth street northwest.

Aid to Handicapped Children To Be Will Rogers' Memorial

'Best Way to Perpetuate His Kindliness to Man,' Says Young; Committee Accepts $1,000,000 Hospital, $500,000 Maintenance Fund.

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 21.—Handicapped children will be the principal beneficiaries of the Will Rogers Memorial Fund now being raised throughout the Nation, the memorial committee announced tonight.

Simultaneously, the committee announced acceptance of a gift of a $1,000,000 hospital and $500,000 in cash to maintain it for five years—a subscription apart from the rapidly growing national fund.

"Handicapped children always were a concern of Will Rogers," said Owen D. Young, an official of the fund. "The committee, after considering hundreds of suggestions, decided that aid for handicapped youngsters would be the best way to perpetuate Will Rogers' kindliness to mankind."

The hospital and maintenance fund were given by the National Variety Artists Fund, Inc., and will be known henceforth as the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital. It is at Saranac, N. Y., and will be used for members of Rogers' stage and screen profession.

The maintenance fund will be paid, $100,000 each for five years, by five major theater circuits—Loew's Inc., Fox West Coast Theaters, Paramount Theaters Service Corporation, Warner Brothers Theaters Circuit and the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation.

Financial affairs and management of the hospital will be in the hands of the Will Rogers Memorial Commission.

It was announced that California and Oklahoma, Rogers' two home States, each would receive from the national memorial fund a sum not less than that raised in those individual States for Rogers memorials within their own borders, regardless of where the rest of the money is spent.

Record Flight In Stratosphere Is Made Official

Aeronautics Board Gives Balloon's Altitude as 72,395 Feet.

Two Army balloonists yesterday won official recognition for their record stratosphere flight of almost 14 miles on Armistice Day near Rapid City, S. Dak.

Stevens and Anderson shattered all altitude records, official and unofficial. Their effort surpassed the unofficial mark of 72,200 feet claimed for three Russian balloonists after their craft crashed and killed them January 3, 1934.

The Stevens-Anderson mark far outdistanced the best previous official record—61,237 feet—set November 20, 1933, at Akron, Ohio, by Lieut. Comdr. T. G. W. Settle and Maj. Chester Fordney.

Experts predicted the new record would be approved by the Federation Aeronautique Internationale in Paris, as it was based on Bureau of Standards calibration reports from the balloon's sealed meteorograph.

In the past the international organization has accepted records submitted by the National Aeronautics Association.

Coroner Frees 2 In Traffic Deaths

Two men were exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday after inquests into the traffic deaths of William A. Brooks, 66, a baker at the National Training School, and James Baldwin, 50, of Baltimore, Md.

William C. Harne, 53, 1116 Orren place northeast, was absolved from blame in Brooks' death when witnesses testified Brooks' car was being operated without headlights. Brooks died Sunday from a brain hemorrhage after the crash at Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

In the second verdict, the jury released John Southworth, 59, 914 Sixth street northwest, motorman of the street car which ran down James Baldwin at Pennsylvania avenue and John Marshall place northwest Monday night. Testimony revealed Baldwin stepped from a loading platform into the path of the street car.

Fleming Named To Will Rogers Memorial Post

Banker Is Appointed Active Chairman of Drive to Raise Funds.

Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, has been appointed active chairman of the Will Rogers Memorial, District of Columbia Commission, the treasurer of the commission, Jesse H. Jones, announced yesterday.

Fleming is considering names of persons suggested for local chairmen of committees to be established in every city and town to encourage friends and admirers of Will Rogers to contribute to the memorial fund.

The campaign will close Wednesday. After the sum has been totaled a group of prominent men, with the help of public suggestions, will decide on the form the memorial is to take.

The commission has declared it will sponsor no cold shaft of marble for the warm, friendly man that was Will Rogers. Plans call for the establishing of living, continuing memorial in tribute to the charitable and beloved cowboy humorist. In keeping with his love of flying and his interest in aviation, the expenses of gathering the fund are being borne by the aviation industry.

The group which will administer the fund includes Dr. J. C. Bushyhead, of Oklahoma; Amon G. Carter, Harry Chandler, James M. Cox, Charles Curtis, John W. Davis, Charles C. Dawes, Henry Ford, John N. Garner, Harbert Fleischhacker, Will H. Hays, Harbert C. Hoover, Patrick J. Hurley, Jesse H. Jones, Alfred E. Smith, Fred Stone, Owen D. Young, Gov. E. W. Marland, of Oklahoma; Gov. Frank F. Merriam, of California; George Young, and Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

In celebration of the founding of its first religious project in the Georgetown area ten years ago, and the more recent establishment of a united church for residents along the canal, at the end of Key Bridge, the Georgetown branch of the Salvation Army will hold services at 1075 Jefferson street northwest Sunday.

Capt. Jackson Martin, who is in charge of the work in that district, will be aided by Maj. and Mrs. James Asher, leaders of the Salvation Army in Washington.

Autoist Gets 90 Days After Double Accident

James C. Harris, 305 G street northwest, accused of overturning two automobiles after a collision at Fourteenth street and Constitution avenue Wednesday, was sentenced to serve 90 days in jail when arraigned before Police Court Judge John McMahon on a charge of driving while drunk.

The accident occurred after a chase of Harris by Policeman Spottswood Gravely, of the Fourth Precinct, when Harris is alleged to have run through a red light.

Ethiopia Seizes Many Troops, 4 Italian Tanks

Emperor's Daring Visit by Plane Spurs Natives to New Offensive.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Nov. 21.—Premier Mussolini, in a new move to oppose economic sanctions against Italy, ordered three-month furloughs tonight for about 100,000 of Italy's 1,000,000 home troops.

The temporary reduction, it was stated officially, has no international significance. The government said the action was due to increasing farm and industrial production, because of the economic siege of Italy, and the desire to send men home to the families that need them.

The soldiers will be told to be ready to return on an instant's notice.

Farmers will be sent home first, then men who are believed most needed by their families, and then those who have records of good conduct during at least eight months of service.

Others to Stand Ready.

Many othess have been virtually instructed to be ready for a call to the colors. They are from the classes of 1901 to 1914, inclusive, who were exempted for illness or disability. They have been ordered to submit to re-examination, and those found fit must then be listed in their classes and respond to any calls for men of those years.

Il Duce recently announced he would have 1,200,000 men under arms in Italy and abroad. But informed observers, placing the home army at 1,000,000, have expressed the opinion the total force is much higher than Mussolini's figure.

The premier, directing Italy's anti-sanctions program, found time to talk with King George of Greece, who was in Rome on his way to Athens to reascend his throne. Earlier George had received the collar of the Order of Annunziata from King Victor Emmanuel, thus becoming an honorary cousin of the Italian monarch.

Signs Several Protocols.

Mussolini signed several protocols of an Italo-Hungarian trade treaty, which diverts some of Italy's former trade with countries now applying sanctions to Hungary, which supported Italy at Geneva.

Fascist leaders advocated daylight working hours as much as possible, and advised automobile owners to use as little gas as possible.

Italians also were asked to eat less meat, raise many rabbits, "buy Italian," and otherwise "throw off the foreign yoke."

Well-informed quarters said they expected little to result from Anglo-French peace talks in Paris until Italy gains a more decisive victory in Ethiopia, making Emperor Haile Selassie "easier to deal with." Then, these quarters said, Britain and the League might make the best of a bad bargain.

England Will Bury Jellicoe by Nelson

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 21.—King George and Queen Mary sent a teegram of sympathy tonight to Countess Jellicoe as the empire learned its "Nelson" of the World War would find a final resting place a few feet from Nelson of Trafalgar beneath the dome of St. Paul's.

Earl Jellicoe, hero of the battle of Jutland in 1916, died yesterday. The funeral will be held Monday and his body will be placed in a niche of the crypt which is the national Valhalla for British war heroes.

Admiral William H. Standley, U. S. N., chief of Naval Operations, sent the following message to the First Sea Lord of the Admiralty on behalf of the American Navy:

"I express our deep sympathy to our British colleagues in the death of Earl Jellicoe, admiral of the fleet. Naval officers under whatever flag will deplore the passing of this gallant officer who exemplified the attributes of a great leader, scholar and seaman.

"ADMIRAL STANDLEY."

Ickes Calls on Oil Producers To Halt Shipments to Italians

national thought in the recent steps that have been taken to promote peace and to protect our Nation against involvement in controversies in which the United States has no legitimate part.

"We are beginning to realize that war has become so all-inclusive in its sweeping disasters that there can be no peace except a peace common to all the world, and no lasting prosperity unless shared by all."

Meanwhile, the monthly report of the Commerce Department on exports and imports showed that in spite of the increase in motor fuel exports in September there was a sharp decline in November. The department has not yet broken down its figures according to nations and therefore it could not be determined how much oil was shipped to Italy. This breakdown is expected to be available in a few days.

The report showed that during October the value of petroleum and products exported was $19,648,000, as compared with $23,119,000 in September. For the first ten months of this year exports of petroleum and products amounted to $200,640,000, as compared with $191,112,000 during the corresponding months of last year. Declines also were shown in exports of metals and manufactures, machinery and motor trucks. Aircraft shipments declined under last year.

Exports Out of Line.

The report showed a further dwindling of the balance between exports and imports with the former only $31,975,000 higher than the latter during October, as compared with a trade balance of $76,778,000 in October, 1934. For the first ten months of this year the export balance was $96,707,000, compared with $397,557,000 during the same period last year.

Experts in the Commerce Department indicated that this country's favorable trade balance for the year may be the lowest in 25 years. Total exports during the first ten months of this year were $1,788,889,000 and imports totaled $1,692,182,000. The same period last year showed exports of $1,767,435,000 and imports of $1,371,878,000.

The end of the year, it was pointed out, usually shows an increase of exports but it appeared doubtful whether the increase would be sufficient to bring the balance to a point exceeding the 1910 low. Not since that year has the trade balance fallen below $200,000,000.

Imports Rise Sharply.

The figures showed that the total exports during the first ten months of this year were only $21,000,000 above the same period last year while imports rose $321,000,000. The export gain for October of this year as compared with October, 1934, was $14,000,000 and the increase in imports was $60,000,000.

Commodities showing an increase in imports included grains and preparations, coffee, raw silk, wood pulp and newsprint. Notable export increases were shown in unmanufactured cotton, unmanufactured tobacco, electrical machinery and apparatus, industrial machinery and automobiles.

While economists always have placed strong emphasis on an excess of exports over imports as a means to prosperity, emphasis in connection with reciprocal trade agreements has lately been placed on a large volume of both exports and imports.

Talmadge for President, Cries Pittsburgh Mayor

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Mayor William N. McNair, of Pittsburgh, today said he would place the name of Gov. Eugene N. Talmadge, of Georgia, for President on Democratic ballots in Pennsylvania for the April primaries.

"Talmadge is the Presidential hope of the country," McNair said, adding that if Roosevelt receives the nomination Pennsylvania will return to the Republican fold.

authority. It appeared to be one of the rare instances when the views of civilian leaders prevailed over plans of the military.

It was understood the high army command ruled that Japanese troops in Manchuria would not be permitted to cross the Great Wall unless given an imperial order to do so. An imperial order is issued only in the gravest emergency.

Continue Campaign.

Military officers in Tokyo and north China continued a campaign of publicity designed to justify an eventual armed Japanese intervention in north China.

Interviews emanating from the war office stressed that the Japanese army must oppose forcibly any attempt of the Nanking government to send troops to that area.

Newspapers indicated the army is ready to send troops into China at the first indication of disorders menacing lives or property of Japanese residents. Such an expedition into Shantung Province in 1927-28 resulted in bloody fighting between the Japanese and Chinese Nationalists.

British Aid Seen

London, Nov. 21 (AP).—Informed sources hinted tonight that Great Britain has played a strong diplomatic hand both in Tokyo and Nanking to check the move for an autonomous north China.

Just what had been done was not officially clarified, but there were indications British influence had been used both to curb the activities of Maj. Gen Kenji Doihara, Japan's "Lawrence of Manchukuo," and to stiffen the resistance of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, military overlord of the Chinese Republic.

At the same time, it was believed the British told the Japanese they have no desire to interfere with normal and pacific economic penetration of north China by Japan.

Optimism over the reported collapse of the separatist movement was expressed in authoritative quarters. These sources felt a pacific settlement of the Sino-Japanese difficulties now was much nearer.

However, officials were keeping a close check on developments, which already have led to consultations with the United States.

Britain, it was pointed out, has kept both China and Japan steadily informed of the British viewpoint—a policy, it was understood, of maintaining peace and quieting unrest so all nations may pacifically develop mutual, legitimate interests under stabilized conditions.

Duce Gives Flier Sons Yule Holiday at Home

Rome, Nov. 21 (U.P.).—Premier Benito Mussolini's sons, Vittorio and Bruno, on duty with the air corps in Ethiopia, will be granted short furloughs to spend the Christmas holidays with their parents and brother, Romano, and baby sister, Anna Maria, at Vill Torlonia.

Vittorio and Bruno will return to the war front immediately after the holidays, accompanied by Vito Mussolini, their cousin. Vito, editor of Il Duce's newspaper, Popolo d'Italia, published at Milan, recently was made a lieutenant in the air corps. He is a son of the dictator's late brother, Arnaldo.

The rowdies were dispersed by police, wielding truncheons, and quiet was restored later in the day, the Palcor Agency reported. Moslem shops remained closed.

Two of the traffic policemen were wounded seriously by the demonstrators, estimated at 2,000. Two rioters were wounded.

Police said an alleged terrorist arrested in yesterday's skirmish in which five Arabs and one British constable were killed, had disclosed the existence of a secret armed band which roamed Palestine and incited against British rule.

The Jewish Telegraph Agency said the prisoner confessed this band of so-called Moslem Arab patriots had been organized secretly at Haifa to kill Jews and Englishmen for the honor of Islam and the fatherland.

Budapest, Nov. 21 (AP).—Anti-Jewish rioting spread tonight to provincial towns after police, swinging sabers, had broken up a demonstration at the Budapest Conservatory of Music and had wounded a number of the rioters.

After attempting a demonstration at the closed University of Budapest and seeing 100 of their number arrested, students marched through the Jewish district and attacked the conservatory. Brisk fighting raged in and around the building, but the police gained the upper hand.

Warsaw, Nov. 21 (AP).—Anti-Czech demonstrators smashed 11 windows in the Czechoslovakian legation today, while authorities sought to curb student excesses directed at Jews.

Minister of Education Chrylinski was quoted by the Jewish Telegraph Agency as saying he would take immediate measures to restore peace in the schools and universities here and at Lwow.

Italians Rout Ras Seyoum's Tribe in Hills

Cunning Ethiopian Chieftian Eludes Trap Set by Il Duce's Troops.

By the Associated Press.

Asmara, Eritrea, Nov. 21.—Defeat and rout of cunning Ras Seyoum and his Ethiopian warriors by four Italian battalions in a mountain battle, was reported today to the Fascist high command.

In full flight and carrying their dead, the tribesmen melted away into the Tembien fastnesses. The battalions and a squadron of Italian horsemen pursued, hoping to encircle the enemy before Seyoum could rally his men.

Ethiopian losses were not known. The Italian losses were described as "small."

From their lofty mountain positions the Ethiopians opened up a sharp machine-gun fire, but after some hours of fighting, fled when they realized the superior strength of their foes.

An aviation reconnaissance over the Mai Mescic Valley region disclosed, meanwhile, that Ethiopian forces, scattered by Monday's air raid, were concentrating again in the same locality.

The tribesmen were using every possible means to shelter themselves from another such aerial raid, but the Italian observers said their efforts were crude.

(Italian sources said there were 2,000 killed or wounded in Monday's bombardment, but the Ethiopian authorities asserted their losses were meager.)

Mystery Note Found in Files Of Miss Loring

'Tuesday Night at 8:—Parlor F,' Says Paper Uncovered in Inquiry.

A cryptic note, scribbled by Corinna Loring on a scratch pad, was found among her shorthand books and ledgers yesterday in the office she used at 1343 H street northwest.

The note read:

"Tuesday night at 8:—Parlor F."

Corinna disappeared Monday night, November 4, from her home in Mount Rainier, Md., two days before she was to be married. Her beaten and strangled body was found the following Saturday afternoon on Saddleback Ridge, a quarter of a mile away.

Police planned to go through all her accounts and stenographic notes in the hope of finding a clew. Her dictaphone records in the office were found to be blank.

State's Attorney Alan Bowie announced in Upper Marlboro last night that another Baltimore detective had been assigned to the Loring case by Charles T. Gaither, police commissioner of Baltimore. He is Sergt. Leo T. Vogelsang, and will arrive this morning to assist Lieut. Detective Joseph H. Itzel, in charge of the inquiry.

Late yesterday, Lieut. Itzel scotched a rumor that had traveled like a prairie fire through Washington and nearby Maryland. As it spread, telephone switchboards in newspaper offices were swamped with calls.

Was it true, the callers wanted to know, that someone had been arrested and had confessed?

"Nothing to it," Itzel declared.

In the desk Corinna used in the Peoples Life Insurance Building, investigators found a Gregg shorthand book, on the fly leaf of which was written this couplet:

"Life is one fool thing after another;
Love is two fool things after each other."

Persons employed in the office said that, while the book was on Corinna's desk, they did not think it belonged to her.

A Busy Stenographer.

Corinna's ledger indicated she was a busy stenographer and scrupulously careful in keeping her accounts. She had listed 15 Washington business and professional men for whom she did part-time work, taking their dictation and typing their letters and briefs.

Her ledger also bore the name of Mrs. M. Virginia Devine, partly blind widow, of the Dresden Apartments, to whom Corinna read The Post every day from 10 to noon. The ledger showed she received something over $1 for every reading.

Robert W. Hicks, District investigator, who has been analyzing evidence in the case, cruised around within a 3-mile radius of Mount Rainier yesterday collecting paper napkins at barbecue stands.

Threw "Clew" Away.

He said he wanted to compare these with one found at the murder scene, the idea being that he might be able to determine whether Corinna visited a particular barbecue stand before she was murdered.

However, there seems to be some doubt that a paper napkin exists for Hicks "confirmatory analysis."

Police Chief Eugene Plumer, of Mount Rainier, said a paper napkin was found on Saddleback Ridge, but that he threw it away, feeling that it was without value as a clew.

Bori, Crooks, Tibbett To Open 'Met' Season

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Two American artists and a third American by adoption will participate in the Metropolitan Opera's traditionally glamorous opening December 16.

The opera will be Verdi's "La Traviata," and the principals will be Lucrezia Bori, Richard Crooks and Lawrence Tibbett, the latter two natives of the United States. "Traviata" is being remounted for the occasion, with new sets and costumes by Jenel Jorgulesco.

The opera also will introduce the American ballet, the Metropolitan's newly acquired feature, as well as the ballet's director, George Balanchine.

Mother of Corinna Reveals Circumstances of Tragedy

fateful Monday night when Corinna disappeared.

"Dick (the girl's fiance) brought her home in his car some time between 6:30 and 7," said the mother. "I don't remember the exact time, but I remember she was late—she usually got home about 6—and I had gone ahead and eaten my supper. When she came in I warmed hers up for her. She was excited and happy because she and Dick had been buying things that afternoon. She showed me a couple of small purchases and then took them up to the attic where she kept all the things they had bought for their apartment."

Soon after Corinna got home her sister, Florence, the latter's husband, Leo LoJacono, and their baby daughter dropped by for a visit, Mrs. Loring said.

"While they were visiting I got dressed for church," the mother continued: "Florence and Leo didn't stay long—I learned afterward they hadn't had their supper—and about ten minutes to eight they left. Corinna had got out the ironing board and iron and was sprinkling a few pieces. I don't know whether she ever actually turned the iron on or not. I was sitting here by the radio waiting for time to go to church, but I got interested in a serial love story and so I was a few minutes late getting to services. I remember looking at the clock in the church right after I got there and it said seven minutes past eight."

Found Note on Door.

When Mrs. Loring returned to the Beech street bungalow "about a quarter to 10" from a testimonial meeting at the Mount Rainier Methodist Church, she found a note attached to the front door. It was from Richard Tear who had called at 8:40 to keep an appointment with his fiancee. He had found the house locked; it apparently was empty.

The note explained that he waited until 9:15 on the front porch and then had to go to work.

"When I first saw the note," said Mrs. Loring, "I thought it was a notice of a telegram. Then I took it inside and read it. My first thought then was 'Well, it wouldn't have hurt him to wait a little longer.' Then I got to thinking it over and I decided the note was a blind; that Dick had become impatient and talked Corinna into getting married that night instead of waiting until Wednesday."

And so Mrs. Loring got ready for bed, fairly secure in the thought her daughter had eloped. She admited yesterday that she went into the girl's room several times in the course of the night. Early the next morning she went to a next-door neighbor and called Tear's home.

"When Dick came to the phone," the mother continued, "he said he hadn't seen Corinna the night before; that he had had to go to work. But I thought he just didn't want to tell me they'd got married. I thought she was over there with him.'

But ten minutes later Mrs. Loring's "blood turned to water." She realized "something" had happened to her girl.

Found Purse in Bed.

"I went in to straighten Corinna's bed—she had mussed it up a little when she came in Monday evening—and there under a thrown-back cover was her purse. That's when my blood turned to water. I knew something was wrong if she went out without taking her purse with her."

After this discovery Mrs. Loring got a neighbor to drive her to the LoJaconos. Corinna was not there. They had not heard from her since the brief, informal family gathering of the night before. Mrs. Loring had them take her immediately to the Twelfth Precinct, where she told the police of her daughter's disappearance.

That was Tuesday morning, November 5.

"The Civic League was to meet at my house in the afternoon," said Corinna's mother, "A couple of neighbors came over and took charge of the meeting. I couldn't stay there. I had to look for my girl."

And so the search, which ended the following Saturday with the finding of Corinna's body, was begun.

How They Broke the News.

"I'll never get over the way they broke the news to me," said the mother. "Sometime Saturday afternoon—I don't know what time it was—a policeman came to the front door. I opened it and said, 'What do you know about this story of a taxicab cruising up and down the street the night my daughter disappeared?' The policeman said, 'I've got bigger things than that on my mind. The body of a murdered woman with her head bashed in has just been found over on the ridge.'

"It was my girl," said Mrs. Loring simply.

If ever the guilty person is found no punishment can be too severe for him, the mother said. But after a moment she added:

"Still, that wouldn't bring Corinna back."

She has not read early newspaper accounts of the crime and probably never will, she said yesterday.

"I read about the funeral and the papers since then," Mrs. Loring explained.

For a moment her eyes flashed anger.

"And this talk about Corinna's insurance—of course, she had it made out to me. Any girl would be likely to have her insurance made out to her mother. But I'm not going to touch it until all this talk and fuss has died down. The agent was here the other day, but I told him I didn't want to do a thing about it now."

Again Mrs. Loring's face settled into a kindly expression.

"I haven't been out of the house alone in the evening since this awful thing happened," she confided. "I'm nervous. Sometimes I wonder if I'll ever have the courage to go out alone again."

What about staying on in the white bungalow, still filled with reminders of Corinna?

"I'm not ready to say anything about that yet," she said.

The LoJaconos are still staying with her. Mr. Loring is still at home, though he may be called back any time to his job on the Eastern Shore with the Maryland State highway commission.

Mrs. Loring suddenly leaned forward and said:

"Would you like to go through the house? Would you like to see the things we're supposed to be hiding? Oh, I know all the things people have said about us. You're welcome to go all over the house."

After a moment she continued:

"I can't understand how people can be so cruel. And morbid. Why, they even tried to carry off the flowers from the funeral for souvenirs. I wanted to stay with my girl a little longer in the chapel at the cemetery. But I couldn't bear those people. I couldn't stand their morbid actions and their evil thoughts."

New Deal Loss In Five States Shown by Poll

Literary Digest Reveals 21,342 to 18,711 Are Against Policies.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 21.—The Literary Digest current poll on New Deal acts and policies shows a majority in five States voting against it, the magazine published tomorrow will reveal.

A total of 40,053 ballots was received for the initial tally from Georgia, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma.

On the question "Do you now approve the acts and policies of the Roosevelt New Deal to date?" 18,711 answered "yes" and 21,342 "no."

In Georgia and in Oklahoma the majority was favorable, in the other three States it opposed the present status of the New Deal.

The magazine says the tabulation showed 53.28 per cent no and 46.72 per cent yes, and that a previous poll on the same issue addressed to "practically the same voters" in the spring of 1934 resulted in a 61.15 per cent favorable sentiment and a 38.85 per cent opposing vote.

The initial tally by States:

	Total Votes.	Yes. Votes.	No. Votes.
Georgia	3,947	2,778	1,169
Iowa	17,156	7,309	10,447
Kansas	4,218	1,884	2,334
Missouri	11,779	5,515	6,264
Oklahoma	2,353	1,225	1,128

'Ecstasy' Ban Upheld.

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—The Circuit Court of Appeals dismissed today the appeal of Eureka Productions, Inc., from a Federal court ruling banning from America the film "Ecstasy" on the grounds it was "obscene and immoral."

Governmental Unit Goes Over Top for Chest

Last-Minute Gifts Send Fund Up, but Exact Figures Wait on Audit.

Eleventh-hour gifts yesterday enabled the governmental unit to be the first of the five major divisions to exceed its Community Chest campaign quota.

While the drive proper ended Wednesday, the Federal employes among the canvassers continued soliciting until they raised beyond 100 their earlier quota percentage of 98.44.

"We haven't the exact figures," said Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, unit chairman, "but we are sure we've passed our quota of $678,504."

Volunteer workers in other units also resumed their "clean-up," but delayed making their reports.

Herbert L. Willett, Chest director, announced a final campaign audit would not be completed before December 6 so all post-drive gifts could be included.

Meanwhile, Dr. William McClellan, general chairman, congratulated the canvassers on their "fine help" and encouraged them to contact any potential subscribers who so far have failed to donate.

His letter to all solicitors in part follows:

"Officially the campaign is closed, and I want to express to every worker my personal appreciation of the time and energy and enthusiasm that you have put into it. I only wish that I could say it to you personally.

"Actually the campaign is finished only for those who can conscientiously say that every possible source of contribution has been tapped.

"Campaign headquarters at the Willard will be closed. But the unit chairmen and secretaries will be on the job at the Chest office, 1101 M street, Metropolitan 2284, ready to help you achieve the glorious completion of the work that I know is possible for practically every worker."

Grayson Is Granted Sixth Delay of Trial

The sixth postponement of the trial of John Cooke Grayson, former Treasury Department official, was granted in District Supreme Court yesterday.

Grayson is under indictment on a charge that he warned the late Robert S. Stuntz, vice president and executive officer of the Park Savings Bank, of impending visits of National bank examiners.

United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett sought the delay because many of the Government's witnesses were engaged in the current trial of Benedict McNeil, former assistant cashier of the same bank.

"The court reluctantly grants the motion of the District Attorney," Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue said.

"When the case comes up January 13, the court expects it to take precedence over any other appointments of the District Attorney and defense counsel."

THANKSGIVING PLENTY
BEYOND THE DREAMS OF THE PILGRIMS

EVERY woman naturally demands that her Thanksgiving dinner be a glorious example of how varied, how rich, how delicious a meal she can serve. That's why, in thousands of Washington homes, holiday dinners are planned on this rule: Good things are better when made of Chestnut Farms–Chevy Chase quality products.

"SEALTEST" GRADE-A MILK★—Fresh creamy milk to add authentic richness in cooking. Delicious to drink. Its quality and purity are assured by "Sealtest Protection."

"SEALTEST" TABLE and WHIPPING CREAMS★—Rich, thick and golden. Luxury at low cost for coffee, desserts, and special cooking.

CREAM CREST BUTTER—A brand-new top-quality butter, slightly salt, made of the finest sweet cream. Good breads and vegetables are better with it. Marvelous for cooking, of course—and amazingly low priced to make this use possible.

ARLINGTON BUTTER—A splendid high-grade butter, distinguished by a Certificate of Quality from the U. S. Government.

CREAMED COTTAGE CHEESE—Delicious, healthful, and really nourishing. Comes fresh and ready to serve—as a salad, a spread, or a dish in itself.

FANCY CHEESES—Famous, zestful cheeses celebrated all over the country. Favorites are OLD ENGLISH, SHARP NEW YORK CHEDDAR, ROQUEFORT and SWISS. Unequaled for salads, desserts, spreads.

C. of C. to Close New Deal Poll; 9 Refuse Vote

'Trick Questions' on Ballot Draw Fire; Local Groups Announce Stands.

By the Associated Press.

Polls close at midnight Saturday in the referendum on "recent trends in Federal legislation" conducted by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Employes of the national chamber said yesterday they have received several hundred returns from local chambers and trade associations throughout the Nation.

Letters containing the marked ballots, they said, are being placed unopened in a safe as fast as they are received, and will not be inspected until the counting begins Sunday.

For that reason, employes said they were unable to estimate how many local chambers have refused to vote on the four referendum questions, based on a report highly critical of the New Deal, submitted by a special committee of directors.

Nine Refused to Vote.

At least nine local groups, however, have announced locally their refusal to vote. The Bristol, Tenn., chamber was the latest to take such action, its directors announcing on Wednesday the questions were so worded and so broad in scope as to make satisfactory replies impossible.

Another report on Wednesday said only one-fifth of the 500 members of the Springfield, Mass., Chamber had voted. One member there, in returning his ballot unsigned, said the questions were "palpably worded to discredit the Administration."

Directors of the Decatur, Ill., Chamber also declined to participate in the referendum, after receiving a committee report which criticized "trick questions" and added:

29 Vote Against "Trends."

"Public announcement of the inevitable results will be interpreted as a continuation of the unfortunate and destructive misunderstanding recently existing between the Administration and the United States Chamber of Commerce, detracting uselessly from the prestige of both."

Others announcing their refusal to participate include chambers at Jacksonville, Fla.; Knoxville and Chattanooga, Tenn.; Des Moines, Iowa; Grand Forks, N. Dak.; Salt Lake City, and Columbia, S. C. The Columbia Chamber resigned from the national organization, its board of governors charging the United States Chamber of Commerce with "anti-New Deal proclivities."

At least 29 chambers have voted overwhelmingly against the reported "trends," the latest to report their actions locally being those at New Orleans, Rockford, Ill., and Columbus, Ohio.

The only chambers which have announced approval of the trends are those at Helena and Kalispell, Mont.

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—John W. O'Leary, chairman of a United States Chamber of Commerce committee, whose study of Federal legislation led to polling of member chambers on their attitude toward legislative trends shown by the last two Congressional sessions, said tonight that failure of some chambers to vote might restrict the chamber from acting on the results.

By-laws of the national organization require that a minimum number of votes be cast before a poll can be the basis for a group expression, he said. He asserted he did not recall the details of the requirement, nor did he know how the poll was running.

Hull Statement on Trade Pact

Text of Secretary of State Cordell Hull's statement defending the American-Canadian trade agreement and indirectly replying to criticism of it by formr President Herbert Hoover was as follows:

The reaction of the country to the trade agreement between the United States and Canada has been overwhelmingly favorable. I have noted a number of protests, confined almost entirely to professional partisan politicians or to some of the specially privileged individuals benefiting from excessive tariff rates, with a noticeable division of opinion, however, among the latter. Such protests as have been made are confined almost exclusively to a very few particular interests. No one questions the broad economic benefits which will result to the Nation as a whole. From the standpoint of both agriculture and industry the soundness of this trade agreement is clear. A few months of practical operation will demonstrate the value of the agreement in terms of increased trade to the mutual benefit of both countries.

I had the experience of closely observing the conditions and circumstances attending the consideration and passage of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill in 1909, and all subsequent tariff measures. I have seen the Capitol overrun with highly paid lobbyists representing most tariff items. They were to be observed in virtually every corridor, passway and dark corner from the House to the Senate end of the Capitol. Through log-rolling and similar insidious methods they harassed Congress and succeeded in securing their own abnormally high rates, especially in the notoriously unsound Hawley-Smoot act of 1930, which, more than any other factor, was responsible for our loss of exports to Canada, aggregating $600,000,000. The reeking national scandal thus attending the passage of this act is well remembered.

This Administration, in striking contrast with the log-rolling method of the past, is at present carrying on in the most careful manner a temporary program to meet the depression emergency by seeking to restore the large volume of trade between this and other countries lost during the years of depression. This extremely important program is being conducted in a strictly nonpartisan manner and thus far with the support of probably 85 per cent of the press of the Nation. It means mutually profitable trade, greater employment of labor and a fuller and more stable measure of domestic prosperity.

The methods employed in formulating agreements and the conduct of the program are open, careful and thorough. In the case of each agreement hearings are given to all interested persons. Invitations are submitted to all to submit data and arguments concerning every tariff item in question. During the succeeding six to 18 months in which trade proposals are being studied each detail pertaining to each tariff item is, in the light of the data submitted, of independent study and of informal consultation, fully and carefully examined by capable, nonpartisan specialists from the various Government departments concerned.

Consideration of the Canadian trade agreement began in January last and its preparation comprised more than ten months of strenuous labor and consideration. Scores of briefs and statements were submitted, both at the oral hearings and in writing at other times. All received the most careful attention. The final outcome represents a judgment based largely on this material. Few legislative hearings have afforded such ample and systematic opportunity for effective presentation of all views and interests.

Our agricultural exports slumped from $1,884,000,000 in 1927 to $694,000,000 in 1933. In other words, we lost markets for some $1,200,000,000 of our farm surpluses. Either we can seek a restoration of most of these foreign markets or we can abandon the idea of increased sales of surpluses and move straight and steadily along the pathway of a regimentation of our processes of production, transportation and distribution. If we cannot sell surpluses abroad we must inescapably restrict our production to our domestic consuming capacity. This means new waves of unemployment, and a permanent dole to many millions on a steadily increasing basis.

The many millions of wage earners thrown out of employment from 1929 to 1933 and of farmers thrown into conditions of bankruptcy during the same period, who know their present improved and steadily improving condition, will, I imagine, think twice before giving heed to the small but powerful Hawley-Smoot wrecking crew that dominated the agricultural, business and economic affairs of the Nation during the years prior to 1933.

Hull Statement Assails Critics Of Trade Pact

ful things for American agriculture that has happened in a long time."

Secretary Wallace suggested to his farm audience that "when anyone says it is going to harm agriculture, ask him to supply the evidence—all the evidence, and ask him to include in that evidence the general welfare of the whole United States."

He contended the pact would "benefit agriculture as a whole" and that it did not injure any producing group. The "enemies of agriculture," however, may attempt to "stir up certain farm groups to act against their own and the Nation's long-time welfare," he asserted.

Meanwhile the opposition to the Canadian agreement took another turn when former Senator C. C. Dill (Democrat), of Washington, now a lawyer here, suggested that the lumber interests, which he claims have been sharply hit by the pact, join with other industries to test the constitutionality of the reciprocal trade agreements act, under which the pact was concluded.

Discussing the situation facing industries hurt by tariff reductions in the agreement, Dill said they could either seek legislation by Congress imposing excise taxes to overcome the tariff reductions made by the President, or they could seek court action to test the legality of granting power to the President "to make treaties without ratification by the Senate." He thought the President would veto any act imposing excise taxes to nullify the terms of the agreement.

WPA to Aid Map Project In Maryland

17 Persons to Be Assigned to Work as Plans Are Co-ordinated.

Approval of WPA aid for the proposed co-ordination of all mapping projects in the State of Maryland, was given yesterday by Francis H. Dryden, State WPA director.

In a letter to Prof. S. S. Steinberg, head of the department of civil engineering at the University of Maryland, Dryden promised that 17 persons would be assigned to the work. The project will be sponsored by the university and the Maryland Planning Commission.

The workers will be assigned to two field parties and an office staff. These will be directed by Prof. Steinberg. The university will furnish office facilities. Objects of the mapping project are:

To co-ordinate efforts of many agencies, including Federal, State, city, county and private agencies, in making surveys and maps in Maryland, thus preventing duplication and overlapping.

To develop permanent records of surveys and maps within the State.

To collect and preserve all worthwhile survey data, thereby salvaging for future use much available information now being lost, and to transcribe information to a master map.

To became a depository for file copies on Maryland maps made by all agencies and established permanently as a library of maps and charts of States.

Sets Salute Deadline.

Everett, Wash., Nov. 21 (AP).—Ray Triechel, principal of the Silver Lake Grade School, today set Saturday noon as the deadline for three young girls to take part in the daily flag salute exercise—or be expelled. Because of religious beliefs of their families, the children, whose names are withheld, declined to salute Thursday. Their parents are to confer with Triechel and County Superintendent C. C. Carpenter.

3 Accused as Regicides Granted Delay in Trial

Aix-en-Provence, France, Nov. 21 (AP).—Continuance of the trial of three Croats accused of complicity in the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia was put over today until the January term of the court.

The defendants — Ivan Rajtich, Zvonimir Pospechil and Mio Kraj—ended their two-day hunger strike, begun after the court disbarred their attorney, Georges Desbons, who was engaged by American Croats. They agreed to let Andre Berthon, whom the court named as their attorney, handle their defense. The postponement was ordered to give Berthon time to study the case.

Union Accepts 2-Day Truce In Ohio Strike

Fear of New Riots Passes; Way Opened to End 9-Week Fight.

By the United Press.

Barberton, Ohio, Nov. 21.—Peace was assured for at least 48 hours in the Ohio insulator strike tonight when a mass meeting of union men and Sheriff James Flower of Summit County accepted a three-point truce proposal effective until Saturday night.

Acceptance of the truce is believed to have paved the way for negotiations between company officials and union men toward settlement of the strike, called nine weeks ago.

The company had no hand in drafting the truce tonight, it was understood. A six-man citizens' committee drew up the proposal which was approved by both the strike committee and Sheriff Flower and later was ratified by the union membership.

To Confine Guards.

The truce provides that: (1) All company guards be confined within the grounds of the Ohio Insulator Co.; (2) All picket lines as of November 19 be re-established; (3) No one be permitted to enter or leave the plant except the sheriff and his regular deputies. "Regular deputies" were understood not to include the 100 company-hired deputized guards who battled with rioters yesterday.

No further efforts to settle the strike would be made tonight, it was learned, although a Federal mediator, Hugh D. Friel, was here. Friel said he was unable to arrange a conference with company officials today, but that he expected to make an appointment tomorrow.

New Riots Doubted.

Fears that a repetition of last night's fierce fighting would be resumed at the plant tonight were dissipated with announcement of the truce. It had been rumored earlier that union sympathizers from Akron were planning to drive to Barberton to augment the pickets.

Company officials in Akron said they had not confered with Friel yet because other business had been arranged previously. They said they were willing to confer with anyone at any time. Union officials also said they were ready to bargain.

The strikers demand 20 per cent wage increase, union recognition and senority rights.

The first violence in the nine-week strike occurred yesterday when the company reopened its doors to those who wished to return. Fierce fighting started when 75 employes were rushed through the picket line into the plant. Hand to hand encounters between club-swinging pickets and gas-bomb hurling guards continued all day and far into the night.

Ex-Rep. Milligan Gravely Ill Here

Former Representative Jacob L. Milligan, of Richmond, Mo., was seriously ill in Georgetown University Hospital last night.

Physicians attending the former legislator declined to indicate the nature of the illness other than to confirm the seriousness of his condition. Mrs. Milligan arrived here by airplane yesterday to be at his bedside.

Milligan formerly was an assistant Democratic whip in the House. After 13 years in the House he unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination for Senator in the 1934 primary. Since retirement he has resumed law practice here and in Missouri.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

COLLEGE presidents indicate in letters that they do not ask or expect any special favors for college graduates in the Government service or elsewhere. These letters are arriving in response to the charge made by E. Claude Babcock, president, American Federation of Government Employes, that the examinations now being given by the Civil Service Commission appear to favor formal education as against practical experience.

BAKER.

Typical of the letters from college heads is the following from Kenneth C. M. Fills, president of Bowdoin College:

"It seems to me clear that there should be no discrimination either for or against college men in the public service. Obviously there are some positions of technical and professional nature where a college education is essential. On the other hand, there are many positions where experience in practical affairs and long-time service with the Government is certainly equal to a college training. I believe that whenever any vacancy occurs in the Government service, candidates should be judged entirely on ability and performance. In some instances this may mean a man with college training would have the advantage; in other cases that a man who has had no college training but who has served the Government faithfully in less important jobs would have more claim. As a college executive, I recognize the fact that our democracy by no means depends upon men with college training. Such men, of course, give excellent service, but many men and women who have never seen the inside of a college have shown ability and devotion equal to that displayed by any college graduate."

William Lowe Bryan, of Indiana University, feels that noncollege men should have at least the opportunity to compete for appointments and promotions.

E. A. Gilmore, of Iowa State University, expresses a similar view, holding that whatever advantage accrues to college men should be the result of competency; not the mere fact that they are college trained.

The Drafting Section of Soil Conservation Service, under supervision of W. F. Beamon, chief draftsman, has moved from the fourth floor of the Printcraft Building to larger quarters on the eighth floor of the same building.

CCC Educational Program.

Howard W. Oxley, director of CCC Education Programs, has called a series of meetings of district educational advisers in all parts of the country to co-ordinate the educational work of the camps and to plan future activities. Recent meetings have been held in Boston, New York, Baltimore and Atlanta.

Next week's programs calls for a meeting in Omaha, Monday; Chicago, Tuesday, with Wednesday's meeting to be held in Indianapolis. The corps area commanders in the various regions have issued invitations to the following Washington officials:

Robert Fechner, director, ECW work; F. A. Silcox, chief, Forest Servie; H. H. Bennett, chief, Soil Conservation Service; Arno B. Cammerer, director, National Park Service, and Dr. J. W. Studebaker, Commissioner of Education.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C appears after your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only, between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Lowe's Fox (Ed Lowry, Slate Brothers and other acts; screen, Three Marx Brothers in "A Night at the Opera); or to P, Loew's Palace (second week of Clark Gable, Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone in "Mutiny on the Bounty"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (stage, Adrienne, the international mental marvel; screen, William Powell and Rosalind Russell in "Rendezvous").

The Athletic and Recreational Association of Agriculture announces a dance and entertainment to be held at the Washington Hotel December 7. A. C. Edwards, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and Joseph Bentolini (P), are handling ticket sales.

Justice Postettes.

Miss Eileen Daly is enjoying a vacation in Wilmington, Del. Miss Thelma Harvey and Miss Mary Silvestro are on extended sick leave. Miss Marie Reilly recently enjoyed a vacation at Skyland, Va. Miss Joyce Pelton and Miss Rose Marie Beatty are enrolled in a course in criminal law.

Solicitor General's Office.

Q. Is the Solicitor General's office a separate unit of the Department of Justice?—S. D. (C).

A. The Solicitor General is the Attorney General's chief assistant, and his office is a major unit of the Justice Department. By special provision of law he exercises the duties of the Attorney General in case of a vacancy in the office of Attorney General or in his absense or disability.

The Solicitor General also has special charge of the business of, and appears for and represents the Government in the Supreme Court of the United States.

When requested by the Attorney General, the Solicitor General may conduct and argue any case in which the United States is interested in any court of the United States, or may attend tb the interests of the Government, in any State court or elsewhere. No appeal is taken by the United States to any appellate court without his authorization.

Agriculture Graduate Courses.

Q. Please advise me if it is too late to register in the classes offered by the Department of Agriculture and where I can get a list of courses offered.—Helen Gerson (P).

A. Information regarding the Department of Agriculture's Graduate School and the courses offered may be obtained from Dr. A. F. Woods, the director of the school. It is too late to enter the courses this semester, but some new courses will be offered in January and a revised list of courses will be available late next month.

Q. How can I get in touch with John A. Marshall, director of the District Unemployment Compensation Board?—Pearl E. Noble (C).

A. Mr. Marshall, who is also superintendent of insurance for the District of Columbia, may be reached at his office in the Ford Building, 451 Pennsylvania avenue, northwest. The Unemployment Compensation Board has not yet set up an establishment however.

Clipper Carries First Air Mail To China Today

Huge Craft Is Ready for Take-Off; Heavy Load for Orient.

By the Associated Press.

Alameda, Calif., Nov. 21.—The transpacific air mail will start operating tomorrow.

Final blind-landing tests put the big China clipper in shape today for the inaugural 8,000-mile flight.

Letters poured in from stamp collectors everywhere to make up more than a ton of mail cargo. Special planes brought last-minute mailings from Eastern cities.

Postmaster William H. McCarthy, of San Francisco, said it would constitute the largest single consignment of "first cover" mail of record "on land, sea or air." About 85,000 pieces accumulated.

The inaugural flight, set to start at 3:30 p. m., Pacific standard time, is to be preceded by ceremonies in which Postmaster General James A. Farley will present a message from President Roosevelt.

The schedule calls for one hop each day on the westward trip—to Midway the second day, Wake the third, Guam the fourth and Manila the fifth.

Germany Bars Jews From Stock Markets

Berlin, Nov. 21 (AP).—Jewish stock exchange traders, on orders of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, minister of economics, will be excluded from exchange floors beginning tomorrow. Germany has eight exchanges.

Schacht's brief announcement said he had taken the step on the ground of the Reich citizenship law, enacted at Nurnberg.

Refusal To Register.

The United Gas Improvement Co. has refused to register with the S. E. C. by the end of the month, as the holding company act requires, and has filed a bill of complaint in the Federal District Court at Philadelphia to restrain the Government from enforcing provisions of this law against it. The justification of the action cannot be challenged if, as asserted, the company's constitutional defenses against enforcement would be impaired by immediate registration or if such registration should operate to delay a final test of the validity of the law.

Otherwise there is no excuse for noncompliance with admittedly simple registration requirements calling for information that would have to be supplied under any reasonable system of Federal regulation of holding companies. Assuming, therefore, that the U. G. I. merely wishes to expedite legal proceedings, and is not opposed to registration as such, the wisdom of its action can only be judged by awaiting the outcome of the controversy. When lawyers disagree as to the proper or expedient course to pursue, as they apparently do in the present instance, the layman is certainly not in a position to weigh the merits of different methods of procedure.

It is, however, quite certain that the public interest as well as that of the holding companies calls for a speedy determination of the constitutional issues raised by the new regulatory law. Until a test case has reached the Supreme Court the companies will be forced to mark time. Until they know whether they are to be dissolved, reorganized, or permitted to exist under a less rigid regulatory system, they will be unable to plan for the future. They can neither ask nor expect investors to put new capital into the industry under present conditions. The prevalent uncertainty prevents an extension of plant and equipment which would bring increased demands for the products of the heavy industries, more employment for labor, and better service for the general public.

Utility managements, of course, are primarily concerned to overthrow those provisions of the law which they regard as oppressive, unreasonable and destructive of their property rights. But whether they win or lose in challenging the constitutionality of the act, they are performing a public service by pressing for a decision at the earliest possible moment.

The Pressure Of Sanctions.

Italy's threat to apply her own "sanctions" to League states now boycotting her goods is a very naive attempt to fortify domestic morale. It is equivalent to telling these countries that the Italians will not only themselves help to enforce the League sanctions, but will even tighten the restrictions which have been imposed. It is impossible, of course, to take these threats seriously, although the spirits of the populace may be momentarily improved by hurling defiance at so-called League oppressors.

The pressure of sanctions will of itself speedily limit Italian purchases abroad to essential commodities for which means of payment can be found. In view of Italy's limited financial resources and her lack of credit, it is safe to say that her buying will be done in those markets that offer the best bargains in goods not banned. Other things being equal, Italy will doubtless prefer to place her orders in non-League countries which are prepared to receive her exports in exchange. Since purchases are largely on a cash basis, however, the closing of export outlets by sanctions will rapidly deprive Italy of cash resources. These cannot be replaced by possible increased sales to a few countries not parties to the League boycott.

The tightening of Italian belts, the increasingly stringent restrictions upon imports, the threats of further trade curtailment ahead, are not evidences that Italy can successfully defy sanctions. They indicate rather that she already recognizes the desperate battle which must be waged to survive their rigors. The recent announcement that all gold in private hands must be turned over to the Government is another indication that Italy has been put "on the spot" by the League boycott. With cash balances held abroad depleted by sanctions, gold becomes increasingly indispensable as an alternative means of payment. Consequently Italy is husbanding her already severely curtailed gold reserves and trying to augment them by gathering in nonmonetary supplies now in private hands.

The Fascist Government may pretend that its greatly reduced ability to buy abroad is a form of revenge, but few will be deceived by this patent bluffing.

Japan Holds Her Hand.

The sudden relaxation of pressure upon China does not indicate that Japan's imperialistic policy has been abandoned or even substantially modified. It does suggest that the Tokyo government is apprehensive over the world-wide resentment which her brazen attempt to subjugate China proper has aroused.

Not all the maneuvers preceding the abrupt shift in tactics can be clearly seen at this time or distance. But it is known that Maj. Gen. Doihara, Japan's military chieftain in China, was all set to force establishment of an autonomous" government in the northern provinces. Inspired statements had prepared the world for the announcement of a new puppet state intended to weaken the authority of the Nanking government and extend the area over which Japan exercises commercial and military control. Then, suddenly, the Chinese government stiffened its resistance and Gen. Doihara's plans have been disowned. Seldom has a responsible Japanese commander suffered such "loss of face."

Numerous elements contributed to this favorable turn of events. Foreign interests are far more extensive in the Peiping-Tientsin area than in Manchuria, Jehol or the occupied parts of Outer Mongolia. With the aid of diplomatic conversations, Tokyo civil authorities have probably been impressed by the hazardous complications that would arise from any military campaign in this area. Undoubtedly the Far Eastern visit of Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, chief economic adviser to the British government, has contributed to the more cautious Japanese policy now in evidence.

Britain's support of the new Chinese silver policy, which has political as well as economic significance, is likewise a factor in the unity and fortitude of China's national authorities in resisting Japanese invasion. Japan could easily enforce its ultimatum upon the Nanking government in spite of that convergence of forces. To compel separation of the northern provinces at present, however, might result in hostilities that would be extremely embarrassing for Japan. Moreover, Russia is watching every development in China with interest sufficiently intense to warn Japan against becoming involved in any extensive conflict.

Perhaps as important as all these influences is the forthcoming assembly in London of the 1935 naval conference. Japan could not sincerely recommend a reduction of navies, nor ask in good faith for an increase in her ratio, with her armed forces in the act of garroting China. Whether or not recognition of the Japanese-created state of Manchukuo becomes an issue at the conference, further violation of the Nine-Power Treaty while the conference is in session would certainly be fatal to every aspiration of the Tokyo government for equality in naval armaments.

The blundering militarists who have been busily applying the thumbscrews to north China took no cognizance of these danger signals. Japan's more astute civil authorities have properly intervened. But the breathing spell granted China is not likely to have permanent value unless it is utilized by Nanking in forming a united front for the preservation of national independence.

Facing New Local Taxes.

Information assembled by the Commissioners' special tax committee clearly shows that the District must face the alternatives of higher taxes or lower standards of municipal service. Local expenditures on schools, libraries, streets, bridges and other permanent improvements have sunk to a low level. The government is being operated, for the most part, on a subsistence basis, in spite of the fact that the city is growing rapidly. Plant replacement and expansion cannot long be neglected without multiplying deficiencies in some instance already acute.

Local authorities are well advised to confine this study to new tax levies. There should be no increase in the general property tax if that can possibly be avoided. Indeed, carefully devised levies that would relieve home owners of part of the burden they now carry would be welcome. Impartial analysis of the need for new revenue is likely to convince forward-looking citizens, however, that new levies of some sort are inevitable. Washington cannot keep pace with the other large cities of the country unless its citizens are willing to finance essential community service.

The discouraging aspect of the situation is the unwillingness of Congress to pay an equitable share of this expense from Federal funds. There is a self-evident obligation for the Government to finance the extraordinary items placed in the District budget merely because this city is the Nation's Capital. Yet the Federal contribution has fallen from $9,953,256 in 1920, when total appropriations amounted to only about $20,000,000, to $5,700,000 in 1935, when appropriations reached $38,952,765. Part of this reduction was probably justified. But with the budget again expanding in response to city growth and the accumulation of delayed necessities, a larger Federal contribution becomes imperative.

It is now evident that the local authorities are ready to met Congress half way along the road to an equitable adjustment. They will be ready to suggest new taxes in return for an increase in the so-called "lump sum." If Corporation Counsel Prettyman and his colleagues can also devise a formula by which the Federal allowance to the District could be automatically adjusted, on a fair basis, without the familiar squabble in Congress each year, Washington's most acute financial problem would be happily solved.

A Furtive Attack.

In the current issue of Today Raymond Moley deplores what he calls the "furtive character of the negotiations for reciprocal treaties by the United States." He objects to the way in which the Canadian trade agreement was consummated "without knowledge on the part of the people at large." Mr. Moley concludes his editorial with an indorsement of George N. Peek's proposal that tariffs be reduced only on the basis of bilateral bargaining, with a view to preservation of "American price levels."

Evidently Mr. Moley not only objects to the alleged furtiveness of the preliminary negotiations, but he is opposed in principle to everything that the Department of State has done to lower tariff barriers by agreement. The secrecy which he denounces did not prevent interested parties from presenting their case to the proper authorities. It merely kept the uninformed public, which could not have been enlightened by the publication of any amount of detailed information, from being prejudiced in advance against the agreement. It is forgotten that this procedure offers protection against the vicious log-rolling and propaganda that formerly characterized all attempts at tariff revision.

Certainly Secretary Hull has made no secret of his intention to bring about a general lowering of the tariff through reciprocal treaties, as an alternative to the primitive bilateral bargaining which Mr. Peek has so indefatigably espoused. Mr. Moley is within his rights in objecting to the more liberal policies which the Administration chose to follow. But he would himself seem less furtive if he openly denounced those methods instead of joining Mr. Hoover in suggesting that the treaty is a product of subterranean bargaining that ought to arouse the suspicion of all good citizens.

Decision Deferred.

For the ninth time since the Nobel Peace Prize was established, in 1896, by Alfred Bernhard Nobel, the awarding committee has failed to designate a recipient. Obviously, in the opinion of the committee, no individual or society merited the honor. Thus the monetary benefits which would have accrued to the winner have reverted to the fund, in keeping with the provisions of the Nobel will. Of the five fields in which the awards are made—physics, chemistry, medicine, literature, and peace—the prize for the last named has been reserved most frequently. Here is a biting comment on the uneven advance of civilization.

At present when peace sentiment is predominant among peoples everywhere and when most nations are bending every effort toward outlawing war, it seems inexplicable that the committee could find no person or society deserving of its recognition. Such failure raises the question as to whether the prize is presented as candy is given to children—when they are good. This is sharpened by the fact that similar reservation of the award was made during the year of the declaration of war, and again in 1918. Yet how much more fitting if it should be utilized in times like these as an active agent in the work for peace! This would not only be more effective but would seem more in keeping with the intent of the award to promote "the fraternity of nations and the abolition or diminution of standing armies and the formation and increase of peace congresses."

There is no doubt that the Nobel Peace Prize Committee is thoroughly painstaking and conscientious. And in excessive caution may lie the real reason for the committee's apparent failure to recognize extraordinary effort now being attempted by the peace-preservation machinery of the League of Nations.

The Better Part Of Valor.

One of the last remaining great commanders of the World War, John Rushworth Jellicoe was born to the old English tradition of salt water and grew up in it. After the great battle of Jutland, he did excellent work as first sea lord and chief of naval staff. But that battle was the outstanding event of his long life, and now "The Little Admiral" dies, at 76, with the Jutland controversy still undecided.

Surely, as the historical perspective intensifies, indecision cannot continue. German experts have pointed out that, although Von Scheer was materially weaker, he gave more punishment than he received. British critics add that Jellicoe deliberately allowed his enemy to show a clean pair of heels and so lacked, they declare, "the Nelson touch." Von Scheer could afford risks, whereas Jellicoe had nothing to gain by pursuit—everything to lose. At Jutland "the Nelson touch" would have ruined a Nelson. The strategy of Jellicoe passed triumphantly the sole test of conflict: it kept the German grand fleet out of action until the end of the war.

Just as Admiral Robley Evans was known among his admiring men as "Fighting Bob," so Jellicoe—with an equal want of reason—was known to his adoring sailors as "Hell-Fire Jack." Actually, the chief virtue of both of these brave officers was the rare virtue of a level head. Any fool can fight. Those who stand out in history are the leaders who gain their essential objectives, the fighting being purely incidental to that goal.

"The Constitution of the United States isn't held in contempt by any true American!" shouts an orator. On the basis that familiarity breeds contempt, the assertion undoubtedly is true.

Imagine That!

The Right To Know.

To the Editor of The Past—Sir: As a one-time city school superintendent of the District of Columbia, I have a definite and intense interest in the present discussion respecting the oath to be taken monthly, it seems, by the teachers of the public schools of the National Capital.

For many years in two different institutions of the higher learning, I have been a teacher of economics and of law; and such a person naturally comes to look at the questions involved from particular angles.

It may be possible that when the Congress passed the act and the President signed it to prevent the spread of communistic doctrines in the land, they meant by the phrase "teach or advocate" something that does not quite run along with the interpretations now apparently assumed to be correct. There is difficulty not only with one word, "teach," but with two words, and the second is "or." It would be easy enough to cite cases where the courts have construed the second of two words connected by "or" as a synonym or an equivalent or an interpretation of the first word. In such a case, "or" comes to mean, "that is." Hence the phrase, perhaps, really means "teach, that is advocate" communism.

I submit as common sense the proposition that it is peculiarly dangerous in this age to send youth into the free world with no knowledge whatsoever of such social philosophies as communism. Certainly I desire none of my numerous grandchildren to be released into the existing social scene in total ignorance that there is such a philosophy as communism. On the contrary, I desire that they should know what it is and wherein it is dangerous to the social order, to progress, to ethics. And I have never met any persons more competent to interpret communism to youth than the teachers of America whether in public schools and colleges or in private.

Boys and girls have the right to know what the adult world is thinking and doing. Communism is a menace; why let our youth out into life with this menace ready to be hurled at them, and they in total ignorance of its existence and nature?

There is another aspect of the matter, however, in which I am in perfect sympathy with the authorities; there is no good reason why teachers should not take daily, if so required, the oath of allegiance to Constitution and to country. There is plenty of room in America for liberty of opinion under the Constitution and the laws. If I am to teach the commandment "Thou shalt not steal," I must first teach what stealing is. If I am to teach that communism kills property, self, reliance, liberty, good morals, I must first teach—that is—explain what communism is.

Therefore, I suggest that the act really means that no employe of the schools shall "teach, that is, advocate" communism; the teachers who have courses involving social science or ethics or law should not only not be forbidden to explain communism, but they should be required to do so. Explanation explodes communism.

No Valid Parallel.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the imposition of economic sanctions on Italy by the League, representing 52 nations it would appear, superficially at least, that Italian ambitions in Ethiopia will be thwarted and Italy ruined economically.

Yet does the memory of the English, instigator of sanctions, hark back to Napoleonic times and the Continental System? This system, put into force by Napoleon and directed against England, excluded British ships from all ports under French control and that meant all ports of the continent; the idea was to ruin British trade and bring that country to submission.

Let us make a comparison between the sanctions against Italy and the Continental System against England; it is the picture reversed because sanctions are taken by 52 nations versus one, Italy. [Editor's note: It is also reversed because the League members are applying sanctions voluntarily, whereas Napoleon dictated the Continental System to his subject states.]

And what was the result of the Continental System? As we know the continental countries under control of Napoleon saw themselves economically ruined and by degrees not only disobeyed the rules of the Continental System, but were sufficiently angered by it to take up arms once more against their conqueror.

What will be the result of the sanctions? Like a boomerang they will seriously injure the 52 nations, disrupt their trade, impoverish the countries and result in a general break-up of the League, with England, like Napoleon, standing alone and discredited.

"Shocked And Disillusioned."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am not a Catholic, but, as a Christian, I have gloried in the leadership of the Pope for world peace. Throughout the World War his voice rang out above all interracial hatred and religious antagonisms, demanding a just peace, based on the supremacy of right above might.

Today I am shocked and disillusioned by his appallingly nationalistic suggestion (if press reports be true) that if the League will delay the application of sanctions peace may be secured by the collapse of the Ethiopian defense!

That the Italian priest who has assumed the title of the Vicar of Christ on earth should propose such a means of obtaining peace to the nations which have united to outlaw an aggressor nation—a nation which is defying all the ideals of peace and justice and is relying on the principle of might against right to attain its selfish ends—seems utterly incomprehensible.

"PEACE WITH JUSTICE."

Only Communism Was Banned.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see that the red Russians, and also the red Americans, are calling for the teaching of communism in our public schools!

Far be it from me to say that the innocents—the ignorant—should not be instructed in the rudiments of these isms: Nazism, Fascism, communism—but why the stress on communism? There are many other isms which may be held important by their advocates; why not give them a showing, too?

We have wandered far from our necessary and somewhat neglected three R's. The ordinary mind seems to hold just so much. Do not let us try to fill it to overflowing with evil.

Two Viewpoints On Intervention

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although you did not publish my letter of October 30 criticizing your editorial "Outrages Abroad" of the preceding day, I venture to try again. I cannot believe that you are so sensitive to criticism leveled at yourself when you are so free in criticizing others.

It seems that when you undertake to write on Mexico you forget entirely anything you might have learned about logic. Let me show you the weakness of your stand as judged from your own words:

1. You say that in answering the letter of the Knights of Columbus President Roosevelt probably (italics ours throughout) had the Golden Rule in the forefront of his mind.
2. You write also that the intervention of the United States in the Mexican matter would probably have only a negative value.
3. Furthermore, you state that the Department of State presumably (you probably wanted to write probably) supplied the President with the basis of his assertion.
4. Your answer to the argument that the United States has repeatedly expressed sympathy for other peoples under less aggravated circumstances is that we may (i. e., probably) have so intervened far too often.

Probabilities imply uncertainty. Facts give certainty. Ever since the Borah resolution nothing is more certain in this whole Mexican mess than the fact that the anti-Catholics of this country do not want facts about Mexico.

REV. URBAN ADELMAN,
O. M. Cap., St. Francis Capuchin College, Washington, Nov. 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The reply of President Roosevelt to Supreme Knight Martin H. Carmody should properly put a quietus on the ill-advised activities of certain churchmen and laymen who want an official investigation by the United States of religious conditions in Mexico.

"It has been the policy of this Administration to refrain from intervening in such direct concerns of the Mexican government. That policy I shall continue to pursue." These words from the President emphasize the historical course pursued by the United States in similar past situations.

In a letter printed in The Post April 5, 1935, I pointed out that in his analysis of American policy in Mexican relations, James Morton Callahan found no instance of intervention on purely religious grounds. A reaffirmation of this well-settled policy will do more to maintain the long standing cordial friendship existing between our Southern neighbors and ourselves than the religious interventionists would have us believe.

GUY d'AULBY.

The Post Impressionist

Ante-Beagle Dog Days

Post Office, Friday.

FROM "Over in Virginia," the National Beagle Trials will soon provide the moment's sole enthusiasm for Washington dog lover and hunting folk. Obviously such a moment is the characteristic one for the contrary-minded Post-Impressionist to be reminded—and so to remind his readers—that the hunting dog was not a beagle.

In fact, he belonged to a breed never greatly used by American sportsmen. He was the greyhound.

The old fellow wrote that his "Booke" contained some matter "from mine own experience and conjecture"—matter which, to the modern mind, may sometimes well seem more of the latter sort than of the former. For the rest, that volume was, with the exception of a single chapter, a translation from "La Venerie" of Jacques du Fouilloux as published in 1560. Yet the exceptional chapter is significant, and Turbervile explains it thus:

"Because I find nothing in mine author particularly written of coursing with greyhounds it seemeth unto me that they have not the kind of venerie so much in estimation in France as we hold it here in England . . . We here in England do make great account of such pastime as is to be seen in coursing with greyhounds at deer, hare, fox or such like . . ."

Well, there is another old writer's comparison: "As one who only lets loose a greyhound out of the slip is said to 'hound him' at the hare."

How the greyhound ever got to England it is not for The Post-Impressionist to say. There are authorities who contend that the breed is all of 2,000 years of age. Close cousins and cousins many times removed are employed for hunting in a score of countries. They differ in coat and size, but their variations appear to be merely environmental.

There is many a greyhound asleep at the crossed feet on many a crusader's tomb. Did the crusaders bring their dogs back from the East? No—for the greyhound was in England before any English left there to retake the Holy Land for Christendom, and to pillage Christian Constantinople . . .

Somewhere it has been suggested that this animal was a companion of the Celts: He adventured westward with them in their earliest occidental migrations.

At all events, he was on the westward side of the Channel when Canute reigned there. He was a perquisite of gentility and a subject of sumptuary laws.

Vide Canute's forestry legislation. That monument of justice lays a heavy penalty upon anybody daring to sport a greyhound beyond his means. Before you could keep such a distinguished pet, you had to be the owner of land that brought you in at least £100 per annum.

That thoroughly Anglican chapter introduced by Turbervile into his version of du Fouilloux tells how British huntsmen coursed the red deer with greyhounds in his day. It indicates that the sport was conducted according to an almost regal ritual.

Among much else, one reads that the pack was divided, and leashed, into three grades, or social sets, rather like the classes in the real Spanish bullfights—not the calm Catalonian fights lately described in this newspaper by sportsman Pegler. The first brace were "slipped" at the entire herd of deer and acted as scouts, separating from his fellows the prey best worth the hunter's while. The second [illegible] provoked resistance. The [illegible]

But take Tuberville's v[illegible] for it: "A red deer will bear sometimes four or five brace of greyhounds before they can pull him down, such wonderful force has he, and so easily shakes off a greyhound when he pincheth him."

This is an amusement which has long since disappeared from England, whereas, in the odd phraseology of the London Times' kennel expert, "coursing the hare being a sport that does not admit of many variations" between centuries, "it is not surprising that it was conducted in the same way in Queen Elizabeth's reign as it is today. Changing times do not seem to have made much difference."

We wish some expert would tell us when and how English hunters chased Reynard "with greyhounds." To be sure, the only pack with which—or after which—the Post-Impressionist ever hunted the British fox was the Staintendale Hunt's; but the Staintendale's traced its history all the way back to the time of King John, and it was a pack of—well, foxhounds.

Also, to become metrical, we'd like to ask:

When did the beagle
First follow the bugle,
Or bay to the hunting horn?

Bullfights And War.

Madrid, Nov. 21.

IT is with heavy heart that your correspondent has to reveal that the ancient, romantic sport of bullfighting has its practical aspects no less disenchanting than those which disclose themselves to intimate students of the prize fighting industry in America. Bull fighting, with its splendor and rituals, royal patronage and noble literature, has many points of contact with the vulgar trade of churning human ears into cauliflowers and human beings into twitching, slobbering imbeciles with furious lefts and rights to the body.

There are, for example, many in the bull fighting profession who perform an office similar to that of a prize fight manager and sport writers specializing in the bull fight branch of journalism who are not above accepting a donation from the manager in return for a few words of praise next to pure reading matter.

Mr. Gene Tunney, in one of his literary confidences, whispered for all the world to hear that he had at one stage of his career prostituted two members of the press in New York to obtain the reputation which he had not earned within that sweat-and-bloodstained square of canvas which is classically known as the roped arena.

* * * *

BULLFIGHTING, however, being a distant and thus a glamorous sport, seemed pure in heart, fine and altogether noble, except that there have been persistent objections among the fair-haired races to the brutality which is inflicted on the bull.

As to the charge of brutality, however, the Spaniards long ago formulated their answer. They have cited the case of the English or North American sportsman who goes out fishing for the small but courageous trout fish and, having snagged him by the lip with barred hook, delights to torture him until the trout runs out of strength and fight and submits to capture. The trout fish is held in the highest respect because his courage compels him to fight against a human being who has more strength in one fist than the trout has in his whole body and who outweighs the trout by the ratio of 100 to 1 and up.

There also is the case of the fox hunt, a popular sport among the English and a social diversion, if not exactly a sport, among the second generation duces of American aristocracy along the Eastern seaboard.

Joining in the hunt are a great parcel of wealthy gents and ladies, many of them more than half-plastered so early in the morning, having drunk their breakfast as an antidote to the dinner which they finished drinking not so many hours before. These characters sit on large and expensive horses bedecked in formal hunt costumes, and they emit queer cries not unlike the idiotic "skinny wow, wow" of the University of Illinois at certain stages of the chase.

* * * *

SO it hardly behooves the cat which tortures the mouse to peer down its nose at the toreador who tortures the bull, and your correspondent herein feels sad, only it has just been explained to him that bullfighting, like prize-fighting, is a business having its angels.

There's small chance at the worst that the toreador will lose the decision to the bull, for he has a corps of assistants in the ring to wave cloaks at the victim in case the bull should become offensive and divert him from his attack. Thus, with barbed darts imbedded in his muscles to torture him at every move, with his wind and strength failing and with the whole team of opponents making distracting passes at him, he does not know who his opponent really is until presently a sword enters his back, severing his spinal column and drops him paralyzed, exhausted and threshing in pain upon the sand.

In the extraordinary event, however, that the bull should pick out the man with the sword and tear after him, refusing to be turned away by the fluttering capes of the seconds, it is not at all undignified for the toreador to make for the exit and climb over the wall to regain his composure. Having gained sufficient confidence and experience on soft bulls, after the manner of Primo Carnera in the ring and Benito Mussolini in Abyssinia, the bullfighter then advances from preliminary boy and is knocked down.

MUSSOLINI was ditched for his debut in the star bout class when the British fleet went into the Mediterranean, but the contest has been indefinitely postponed. But now that he is fighting in main events the bullfighter still maintains his team to agitate and divert the bull when going becomes too rough. And he still has his manager and press agent to explain that he was out of shape or sprained his ankle if the bull chases him over the wall.

Your correspondent has even heard that most bullfighters are just great big good-natured kids and good to their mothers. So the sum of it all is that the Spaniards are only a people, after all, a prey to publicity and their own idolatrous imagination, even as the American public, which for half a dozen years, at the cost of more than two million dollars, refused to accept its own conviction that Jack Sharkey was the most colossal false alarm in the history of the prizefight racket.

As Canada Sees It

By William Marchington.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Ottawa.

THE people of Canada generally are so heartily sick of the hard times experienced during the last five years that they welcome the prospect of a return to comparative prosperity which increased trade with the United States promises under the agreement recently signed at Washington. Some manufacturers, who fear that keener competition from their American rivals will mean reduced profits, are predicting ruin, but they are receiving scant sympathy from the Canadian government, which is fully aware that the tariff barriers are still higher than they were before the Bennetts, the Smoots and the Hawleys raised them to the highest levels ever known in North America.

Under the policy of economic nationalism, tariffs have run as high as Haman's gallows. Moreover, Canadian trade and production since 1930 have been restricted with the result that agriculture has been prostrated, industries have languished. The Nation's foreign trade, which formerly exceeded $2,000,000,000 annually, has been slashed to $1,000,000,000 annually. The four western provinces and scores of municipalities have become virtually bankrupt. The railways have piled up deficits of $50,000,000 annually. Salaries and wages have been cut by from 10 to 40 per cent, half a million potential wage-earners have been unemployed and more than 1,000,000 men, women and children actually have been dependent upon official and private charity for their daily bread.

While realizing that they will not gain access to the rich markets of the United States on anything like the favorable terms they enjoyed before the Fordney-McCumber and Smoot-Hawley tariffs went into effect, the farmers of Canada greatly appreciate the substantial concessions President Roosevelt has granted in respect to live cattle, horses, seed potatoes, hay, poultry, cream and other products of the farm.

The annual quota of 155,000 which the United States gives Canada on beef cattle will be sufficient to remove from the Canadian market the surplus which has depressed domestic prices and it is officially estimated that the Canadian cattle grower will receive an additional $9 per head for every butcher steer that he is able to ship across the line.

* * * *

THE substantial concessions which the United States has accorded to Canadian producers of cream, seed potatoes, clover and grass seeds, hay, turnips and maple sirup and sugar are considered of "prime importance." Previous to the imposition of the Smoot-Hawley tariff, which was prohibitive, Canadian cream producers shipped to the cities of the Eastern States nearly 5,000,000 gallons of cream annually. The experts who framed the agreement are hopeful that the reduction of duty from 56 to 35 cents per gallon will partially revive the trade, but Canada is to be restricted to a quota of 1,500,000 gallons at the lower tariff rate.

Canadian lumbermen are pleased by the concession accorded by the United States on forest products and the experts believe this favor is likely to lead to the largest volume of trade in the next few years. Some years ago Canadian producers were virtually deprived of the American market by the imposition of a tariff and excise tax totaling $4 per 1,000 boardfeet and an annual trade which totaled $38,000,000 in 1929 dwindled to around $5,000,000 in the last few years. Fortunately, Canada was able to make a bargain with the United Kingdom whereby a market was opened in the British Isles for $18,000,000 worth of Canadian timber last year. It is now hoped that the partial reopening of the American market will rejuvenate an industry that has languished in comparison with the prosperous days before the depression and tariff wars. Free entry to the United States of Canadian newsprint for a further period of three years will enable the paper manufacturers of the Dominion to maintain their exports.

Canadian manufacturers generally have accepted the sweeping tariff reductions on the fabricated products of the United States philosophically. Henry C. Cockshutt, former governor of Ontario, and chairman of the biggest plow manufacturing company in Canada, complains that the United States gets the plum and Canada gets the dynamite. Other manufacturers vociferously suspect that Uncle Sam, as usual, got the better of the bargain, but thus far no factories have been closed.

As a matter of fact Canadian industries have more to fear from the abolition of dumping duties and arbitrary customs valuations, which permitted overnight changes in the tariff, than they have to fear from the actual reductions in the tariff itself. The truth is that while the new Canadian government is slashing the sky-high tariffs imposed by former Prime Minister Bennett, the most-favored-nation tariffs, which Canada now extends to the United States, are approximately the same as the highest tariff, which existed when the Liberal party was in power prior to 1930, with Mackenzie King as Prime Minister and Charles A. Dunning as Minister of Finance. The duties on American plows, cultivators, binders and reapers and other farm machinery will be 12½ per cent under the new tariff structure as against 10 per cent under the budget brought down by Dunning in 1930. Under the lately defeated Bennett government the tariff on American farm machinery coming into Canada was 25 per cent.

* * * *

CANADIAN motorists are pleased with concessions in the trade agreement with the United States which provide for the admission to this country of automobiles and gasoline at lower rates of duty. Within 24 hours after the terms of the pact were published the Ford Motor Co., of Canada, announced price reductions on all models effective at once.

Canadian consumers and householders will also benefit by price cuts on such articles as electric refrigerators, radios, kitchen ware, vacuum cleaners, washing machines and sewing machines, table cutlery, stoves and ranges of all kinds, textiles and wearing apparel, rugs, carpets, rubber goods, glass tableware, fruits and vegetables and numerous other products.

It is a curious thing that no one has suggested consummation of the trade agreement will eventually result in the annexation of Canada to the United States as conservative politicians did in 1911 when a less comprehensive treaty was advocated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Strangely enough, Sir Thomas White, who fought the 1911 pact on many platforms and became minister of finance in the cabinet of Sir Robert Borden after Laurier had been ousted in the reciprocity fight, says the lowering of American tariffs on lumber, fish, agricultural products and other commodities should "prove of material advantage to Canadian primary producers." Twenty-four years ago he was one of the "Noble Eighteen" Liberals who deserted Laurier and raised the hatchet against him for negotiating a trade treaty with President Taft providing for easier admission of Canadian natural products to the United States. His attitude is typical of many.

CANADIAN financial experts, surveying the benefits of the new agreement, estimate that frozen assets to the value of $2,000,000,000 held in Western Canada and other agricultural areas by Canadian financial institutions will be gradually thawed out as a result of the rejuvenation of trade and industry. Release of these frozen assets will come about through the stimulation of purchasing power among the farming community, it is believed.

Canadians generally argue that the longer the life of the agreement the greater will be the movement of commerce northward and southward and the greater the long-range benefits for both countries.

No End Of Books

By Theodore Hall

Import Fiction.

WHAT with everybody drawing up new tariff schedules these days, it behooves this department to nominate a few books for the honorable free list. Also, with an eye to the general welfare, to suggest a 1,000 per cent duty on certain others. No barrier, in these latter instances, could very well be made too high.

Welcome as the day is long, on this side of the Atlantic, is any book by David Garnett. Grandson of old Richard Garnett, voluminous author and keeper of printed books of the British Museum; son of Edward (ditto to the first part, though less prolific, and ditto to the second) and Constance (famed translator of Russian novelists), little Davy did his teething on a goose-quill pen. Now 45, he has to his credit a fair-sized series of works marked by two things—a lucid and enchanting style, and a conspicuous originality of subject-matter. There's no dullness in David Garnett, as can be attested by any reader of "A Man in the Zoo," "The Sailor's Return," "Go She Must!" "No Love," "The Grasshoppers Come," "Rabbit in the Air," and "Pocahontas." Largely, these have proved him a master of the cherrystone tour-de-force.

Well, that's a good long breath to take on the way to the 154 pages of this curious story, "Beany-Eye" (Harcourt Brace, $1.25). Old Beany-Eye, seemingly half-mad, with a ferocious temper, and ready to spill strange lore and yarns at any moment, was a sort of handy-man and protege around the Garnett house. Little Davy, aged eight, watched and listened in awe, and here in the first person, part fact and part fancy, is Mr. Garnett's reconstruction of how Beany-Eye and his violent doings appeared at the time. Oddly, in its picture of the senior Garnett and his trials with Beany-Eye, the tale is not unlike Clarence Day's "Life With Father." But along with that gentle humorousness there is depth and pathos. Mr. Garnett has carved a novel on his cherrystone.

STILL on Schedule A of the free list, we come with delight to Roger Vercel's "Capt. Conan" (Holt, $2). M. Vercel showed his mettle with that excellent novel of French fishermen off Greenland, "In Sight of Eden." Now—this is the 1934 Prix Goncourt novel— he tells of an energetic little draper from Brittany who, after the Armistice in the Balkans, had turned into the very devil of an adventurous soldier. The war made him, released him for what he really was and then, at the end, the peace broke him. It is a clear, stirring, bitter tale, impossible to forget.

"Gone Away!" (Macrae-Smith, $2.50), comes under import fiction, because it was written abroad by Edward Acheson, The Post's London correspondent. But it is set in the huntin' and ridin' counties of Virginia, all very smart and brilliant, with a nice love story and a shrewd picture of red-coat and M. F. H. manners. Sprinkled in the palatability are glints of the real stuff, and the sternest among you will enjoy this novel.

* * * *

NOW let's pounce on Schedule Z. Peter Chamberlain's book of short stories—"What the Sweet Hell?" (Holt, $2)—won't hold us long. Naive, self-conscious, much-watered bits of British writing, these tales are just exactly what all of us composed in the adolescent gloryings of freshman English. Some of them possess merit, to be sure, but one couldn't discourse long upon such merit unless one were a teacher of freshmen intent upon justifying one's existence. Personally, I writhed while reading the things. Slap on the tax, Mr. Collector of the Port!

John Hargrave's "Summer Time Ends" (Bobbs-Merrill, $3) has been withering for weeks on my shelf now. For, with all the conscientiousness of a deplorably Puritan ancestry, I have been trying earnestly to enjoy it. I must now admit failure.

Here are 877 pages of ungodly tediousness. Mr. Hargrave follows through 13 depression months a gallery of English characters, ranging from love-on-the-dole at one end to industrial barons at the other—and that's no especial treat. Worse yet, he does it with a technique to lift the literary gorge—an obstreperously modernistic device of short single lines like free verse, of repetitious stream-of-consciousness paragraphs, of a commingling of diverse scenes, to give the impression of concurrent action on many stages. Don't put me down as a fuddy-duddy; I revel in V. Woolf and venerate Joyce. But "Summer Time Ends" is simply little-boy stuff in comparison—a two-pound volume of no go at all.

'You Earthly Satan!' She Calls Policeman

Chicago, Nov. 21 (AP).—Motorcycle Policeman William McCullough knows virtually all the staple and fancy epithets, but a motorist hurled a new one at him today.

It was: "You earthly Satan."

He told Judge John Gutknecht in traffic court:

"I stopped Mrs. Frances Leach on South Chicago avenue when she was doing 45 miles an hour. She started out by calling me an earthly Satan and wound up by saying she was only doing 38 and, furthermore, there was no more righteousness before the Lord."

Mrs. Leach was fined $1.

WPA's 'Failure' Laid by G.O.P. To Roosevelt

Republicans Say President Is Attempting to Shrink From Blame.

President Roosevelt is attempting to "shrink" from responsibility for the works relief program, the National Republican Congressional Committee said yesterday, in answer to the President's recent talk to the United States Conference of Mayors.

Answering the talk made to the same group by Harry L. Hopkins, WPA Administrator, the committee said that "Mr. Hopkins has made a feeble attempt to defend the absurdities and utter waste involved in many of the relief experiments."

The committee asserted that President Roosevelt "evidently is attempting to shift responsibility for the failure of part of his relief program and for the waste involved in the mass of ludicrous projects initiated by the Works Progress Administration."

Sees Move to Shift Blame.

The committee statement said the President attempted to place responsibility on local officials.

"This effort is, indeed, alien to the President's attitude when he thought he could make a success of the program," the committee said. "Certainly he was given enough money to make it successful.

"Time and time again spokesmen for the President asserted he assumed personal responsibility for the program. It was only after such a reiteration of responsibility, following his demand on Congress, that the money was made available to him under broad powers to use at his discretion."

The statement recalled the President's message to Congress last January in which he said the Federal Government is the only governmental agency with sufficient power and credit to meet the situation, and added that "we have assumed this task and we shall not shrink from it in the future."

Note Change in Attitude.

"How differently the President speaks now," the committee said. "Under an avalanche of criticism of the profligate waste coming from the works program, Mr. Roosevelt is attempting to 'shrink' from it. He asked for the responsibility. He cannot escape it now. Roosevelt, the waster, not local officials, must answer for this huge waste. He, not the mayors or any other officials, approves allotments for these boondoggling projects."

The committee said that Hopkins "also sought to make the mayors partners in many projects which, for utter absurdity and complete futility in creating jobs, outrank in foolishness anything heretofore conceived."

"Mr. Hopkins' criticism of his critics is that they hold that many of these projects seem to be absurd and wasteful. The fact is that many are absurd and wasteful and a growing number of people in this country are rapidly coming to that realization. No amount of Hopkinsesque wriggling can change the picture of the many absurdities in the relief program. Nor can he change the justifiable criticism that few jobs are made available in comparison with the gigantic expenditures being made nor the fact that the taxpayers are going to suffer for these fantastic outlays of their money."

Pepping Up the Theaters.

Show business is getting exciting. It is evidently making a play for the outdoor fight customers.

In Charlotte, N. C., the other night, during an Earl Carroll revue, there was a free-for-all, which included the novelty of an actor stepping out of his part in the middle of a comedy skit and haranguing the audience with a speech on the workingman's rights.

* * * *

The actor, playing in a comedy skit, took off his wig in midskit, walked to the footlights and delivered one of those Union Square "Are we mice or are we men?" orations. Everything went haywire until the producer, assisted by the gendarmes, restored order. After which the comedian put his wig on again and resumed acting.

* * * *

According to reports the audience, completely confused over what was in the script and what was not, had more fun than a barrel of monkeys.

* * * *

Broadway is studying the matter closely, and the idea may be developed in coming musical shows.

* * * *

There is bound to be great suspense when the audience never knows at what moment the comic is going to stop gagging and start swinging. Or just when a toe dancer is going to take an orthodox soap box stance and call for a march on the White House.

* * * *

The element of surprise so sought after by producers is bound to come when the chief comedian demands, "Why does a chicken cross the street?" and the stooge, punching him in the schnozzle, shouts, "To get on the side of right, justice and the brotherhood of man!"

Or when the chorus girls begin singing numbers like "Dancing Fist to Fist," "Isn't This a Lovely Fight?" "Red Wails in the Sunset," and "I Wish I Were Aladdin; I'd Smack You With a Lamp."

Describes "America Speaks"

Dr. George Gallup (left), managing director of the American Institute of Public Affairs, is pictured talking with Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper at the National Press Club yesterday.

Press to Keep Opinion Polls, Claims Gallup

Author of 'America Speaks' Says Paper of Future Will Retain Surveys.

The newspaper of the future will have as a regular part a department of public opinion, Dr. George H. Gallup, managing director of the American Institute of Public Opinion and author of "America Speaks," which appears every Sunday in The Washington Post, told newspaper correspondents yesterday at a luncheon in the National Press Club.

"It is just as important for modern newspapers to cover ideas as events," he said. "What people think is as important as the fact that several persons were killed in an automobile accident."

Dr. Gallup explained the methods by which he and his staff obtain a cross-section opinion of the Nation on such issues as Roosevelt's popularity, repeal and the neutrality of the United States in event of a European war. After his talk he answered questions asked by correspondents.

Secretary of Commerce Roper, one of the guests, asked whether it would be feasible to make a poll of public opinion on the varied features of the New Deal rather than on the whole New Deal, as is being done by the Literary Digest. Dr. Gallup said it is not only feasible but "the common sense" approach.

Explaining his methods in making a survey of public opinion on national issues, Dr. Gallup expressed the belief that his technique of obtaining a cross-section poll of all classes of economic society, instead of gathering millions of votes on a mass scale, would prove the more accurate in the end.

Dr. Gallup praised the Literary Digest for its pioneer work in surveying public opinion, for its accuracy in the past in predicting the outcome of Presidential elections, and for reflecting the revolt against prohibition a year before repeal, but he pointed out that the present poll on the New Deal might be misleading as a basis for predicting the outcome of the 1936 elections.

"Were I a betting man," he said, "I would bet 1,000 to 1 that the New Deal will be opposed by 60 per cent of the people in the Literary Digest poll, but that doesn't mean that many people are against President Roosevelt."

He recalled that ballots sent out by the American Institute of Public Opinion on both Roosevelt's popularity and the New Deal were returned marked "yes" for Roosevelt's re-election but "no" to continuation of New Deal policies.

Dr. Gallup said his service was prepared to take a national poll of public opinion on current issues and announce the results within 12 days, thus keeping abreast of developments in the news.

Ickes Charges Steel Concerns With Collusion

Identical Bids Submitted by 4 Firms; Roosevelt Given Evidence.

Secretary Ickes revealed yesterday that he had sent to President Roosevelt, before the latter's departure for Warm Springs, Ga., evidence of alleged collusion of steel makers in bids on steel for the Triborough Bridge in New York and the ocean terminal at Morehead City, N. C.

Ickes said he believed there was prima facie evidence of collusion. Both he and the President had previously indicated that alleged collusion would be investigated by the Federal Trade Commission. Ickes declined to make public details of his charges other than to say that bids in both instances were identical.

"I can't feel that the cost was the same to all the companies," Ickes said. He pointed out that bids on the Triborough bridge were f. o. b. New York.

Transfer of the steel contract for the Triborough Bridge to the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation of Pittsburgh proves, Ickes said, "that they didn't have to buy German steel in the first place."

Ickes said that he did not know how the Triborough Bridge Authority selected the Jones & Laughlin Co. from among the four identical bidders. The other three were the Inland Steel Co., the Carnegie Steel Co. and the Kalman Steel Corporation, a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Co.

Ickes said that in previous instances in which cement manufacturers submitted identical bids for PWA projects the bidder whose plant was farthest from the scene of the work was selected.

"That was so the railroads would get more business," he explained.

The Associated Press reported that officials of the steel companies which Ickes charged with collusion had declined to comment.

Roosevelt Seen Set to Extend Gold Act Fund

2 Billion Stabilization Pool May Be Held to Avoid Inflation Risk.

Reports were current here yesterday that President Roosevelt, some time in January, would issue a proclamation extending for a third year the life of the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund.

This fund was established in the gold devaluation act of January 30, 1934, "for the purpose of stabilizing the exchange value of the dollar" and "to deal in gold and foreign exchange and such other instruments of credit and securities" as the Secretary of the Treasury might deem necessary to carry out the stabilization purpose.

"All the powers conferred by this section shall expire two years after the date of enactment of this act, unless the President shall sooner declare the existing emergency ended the operation of the stabilization fund terminated, but the President may extend such period for not more than one additional year after such date by a proclamation recognizing continuance of such emergency."

No confirmation was forthcoming from official quarters as to whether the President would extend the life of the fund for a year, but it was believed he would take such action because of the lack of any international agreement on stabilization of currencies and consequently the necessity for the Treasury to have some check on their fluctuations.

If the fund were terminated next January 30, its $2,000,000,000 taken from the so-called gold profit resulting from devaluation, would revert to the general fund of the Treasury and could be used either for reduction of the national debt or for payment of current expenditures.

Use of this $2,000,000,000, it is believed, would result in a currency inflation to that amount. It is not believed that the President desires this use to be made of the fund, and a year ago, at his press conference on the budget, Mr. Roosevelt pointed out the desirability of keeping such a nest-egg in the Treasury.

Advocates of cash payment of the bonus have looked with envious eyes upon this nest-egg, contending it could be used to pay off the World War veterans at small cost to the Treasury.

The President may issue his proclamation tying up the fund for another year early in January in order to put the fund outside the reach of the bonus bloc in Congress.

Burton Holmes to Show Pictures of Ethiopia

Motion pictures and lantern slides of Ethiopia will be shown before the National Geographic Society in Constitution Hall tonight.

The pictures and slides will be described by Burton Holmes, noted traveler and lecturer. Mr. Holmes, attending the coronation of Haile Selassie in Addis Ababa during 1930, took many pictures of the colorful ceremony. Motion pictures of recent activities in the war zone will supplement these reels.

New Court Attacks Launched On AAA Taxes and Utility Act

of the American States Co., appealed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals from a decision of Federal Judge William C. Coleman, declaring the utilities act wholly invalid. As counsel for another intervening creditor, Davis also had figured in this case. While Burco supported the law's legality, Davis contended it was not constitutional. Attorney General Homer S. Cummings said the Government will file a brief in the case.

Tax Injunction Asked.

A day after the United Gas Improvement Co., of Philadelphia, had taken parallel action, the Delaware Electric Power Co., in Wilmington, claimed "irreparable damages" from the utilities holding company act, and sued in a Federal court for an injunction. Another court challenge was filed by the Philadelphia Electric Co.

As the National Bituminous Coal Commission completed plans for the regional control board, the Pittsburgh Coal Co. went into a Pittsburgh Federal court for an injunction against collection of penalties and taxes under the Guffey coal-control act, charging compliance would "destroy the plaintiff's business and property rights."

Lawyers representing the country's leading railroads were in Washington studying a proposed court test of the railroad retirement act, revised by Congress last session after it was declared invalid by the Supreme Court. The rail attorneys are considering methods of procedure, following decision of the carriers to challenge the law.

AAA Tax Fight.

Ultimately all of these cases may find their way to the Supreme Court, where interest now centers on AAA processing taxes involved in the Hoosac Mills suit, scheduled for hearing December 9, and in the rice millers' suit for injunction, on which an early ruling is expected.

Davis yesterday asked permission of the Supreme Court to intervene as a "friend of the court" on the side of Hoosac Mills. Also signing his brief were Nathan L. Miller, a former Governor of New York, and William R. Perkins. They represented the Hygrade Food Products Corporation, National Biscuit Co., and P. Lorillard Co., whose lower court suits are among more than 1,000 legal protests of processing taxes already pending.

Petition Charges.

Their petition charged:

AAA in all of its essentials has been and still is a complete counterpart of NRA, which already has been invalidated by the Supreme Court.

Crop control by the Federal Government under AAA is unconstitutional and renders the whole act "abortive and void."

Taxation may not be imposed nor revenues from them expended by the Government for control of intrastate activities and the benefit of private citizens, as provided in AAA.

The "general welfare" clause of the Constitution does not grant independent power and furnishes no support for provisions of AAA.

AAA provisions were unconstitutionally delegated by Congress, and the amendments enacted last session did not remedy their invalidity.

AAA and NRA Alike.

In contending the AAA and NRA were counterparts, the Davis brief reasoned:

"The two acts are complementary expressions of the same theory of the nature, scope and function of the Federal Government. Both attempt rehabilitation through regulation by a centralized power. The NRA of industry through a regimentation vested in the discretion of the President, and the AAA of agriculture through a regimentation vested in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture. In both, for the very same fundamental reasons, the attempt is in total disregard of the rights of the States and the citizens, as well as of the diverse powers vested in the co-ordinate branches of our Government, and on that account utterly unconstitutional."

Attorney General Cummings said he had no comment to make on the filing of the Davis brief, other than to say the Government would not oppose Davis' intervention in the case.

Nation's Leaders Cited.

The lengthy petition was studded with names such as Hamilton, Jefferson, Madison and Monroe, as opposed to broad delegation of powers, while three chief justices and eight Presidents were quoted in opposition to the New Deal's "general welfare" interpretation.

In asking the Supreme Court not to grant an injunction to eight Southern rice millers against collection of September processing taxes, Solicitor General Reed championed the doctrine of "pay first and litigate later" as an elementary principle in our taxation system.

Reed argued the general equity rule is that collection of taxes can not be enjoined where there is adequate remedy at law, and that the rice millers have such a remedy. He contended the millers would be "unjustly enriched" if payment of the tax is withheld. In an earlier brief, the millers said they might be unable to recover their taxes even if the law were found unconstitutional.

League Upholds AAA.

Asking permission to join with the Government in defense of AAA processing taxes involved in the Hoosac case, the League of Economic Equality, like Davis, who was on the other side of the question, interposed as a "friend of the court."

The league was represented by Vernon A. Vrooman, of Des Moines, Iowa, who said it comprised farmers and friends of farmers in four corn-belt States—Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and South Dakota.

Using many of the arguments used by the Government in its brief opposing Hoosac Mills' claims, Vrooman contended no undue delegation of power was involved and the AAA act "does not contravene, in its tax provisions, any limitations which the Constitution imposes." Like Reed, Vrooman stressed the "general welfare" clause of the Constitution, held the farm problem constituted a national emergency and said the AAA was "a program for the co-operative efforts of free men."

Ex-Sailor Held; Racket Duped D. C. Residents

cording to Bureau of Investigation records, arrests on larceny and confidence charges in six cities of the United States and at Honolulu.

Since November, 1934, Hoover said, Scheland turned his talents to a variation of the old "package" racket. In the Navy, Scheland was rated as an apprentice seaman. In operating his confidence game—Hoover said the man confessed—he posed as a naval officer of rank no lower than lieutenant.

Approached Relatives.

His usual method was to approach persons of prominence whom he knew to have either relatives or friends in the naval service—first learning from a careful watch of published Navy transfer orders, that the officer concerned was out of the country—with information that he had a package for them from abroad on which a customs fee was due. Scheland, Hoover said, collected the fee—invariably an amount small enough to dispell suspicion—and disappeared.

Mrs. Covington told The Post last night that she and Judge Covington were out of the city, when the man posing as Commander Stanton bilked a member of the former justice's law firm out of $48.45 for customs duty on a "package." Attorney Dunlop said he talked with Scheland on the telephone about a fee on a package he was given to understand was being sent him by his son-in-law, Langland Bond, vice president of China Airways.

Hoover said Scheland called at the Japanese Embassy about a rug for the Ambassador from a Mr. Imaru, manager of the Tokyo Imperial Hotel. The Ambassador was at lunch at the time—October 22—and negotiations were handled by Otoshiro Kuroda, an embassy attache.

Went to Navy Yard.

Kuroda accompanied Scheland, Hoover said, to the navy yard where the rug was to have been delivered. Delivery of the rug was not made, but Schleand has confessed to persuading delivery of $32.11 as the usual customs fee and to have bought a dog at a local pet shop with a worthless check accepted on the strength of the official Japanese car in which he was returning from the yard with Kuroda.

A little more than a week before his call at the Japanese Embassy, Hoover said, Scheland swindled Cohen, Chilean counselor, of $50 in "customs fees" on a rug. Cohen accompanying him to Baltimore where the rug was to have been delivered.

Hoover said the department had been looking for Scheand since he first began the alleged confidence operations, but he evaded the law until his arrest by New York City police October 26 on a grand larceny charge involving theft of $110 worth of liquor.

Federal authorities then linked him, Hoover announced, with impersonation of naval officers in collection of $9 from Maj. Lida and $14.70 from M. Y. Inomata, of the Japanese Tourist Bureau, in New York. Scheland was arraigned before a United States commissioner in New York yesterday in the alleged fraud on Maj. Lida.

Mrs. Perry, who paid $45 "duty" on a rug she believed she would receive from her son-in-law, Lieut. Benson, in Shanghai, said the man came to her home at 2018 G street northwest last August. Last night she recalled:

"He was so nice. He was dressed in a fresh white linen suit and blue tie. His hair and eyes were dark—very good looking. He introduced himself as Lieut. Evans, and the first thing he said to me was, 'I guess, Mrs. Perry, you knew my dad.' I gathered from that his father was a naval officer and we fell to talking about all the Navy people we knew. Why, I even left him alone in the house while I went out to do my marketing.

"I didn't mind losing the money so much. What made me mad was how sorry he made me feel for him. He was so nice."

Rail Users to War On Federalization

Rule of 65% of Freight in U. S. Claimed by League.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—The National Industrial Traffic League, an organization of big shippers claiming to control 65 per cent of the Nation's freight, launched a fight against Government ownership of railroads today.

Delegates representing 700 members—traffic managers, industrial and business concerns and Chambers of Commerce—voted unanimously at the annual convention to set up a "national committee for the prevention of Government ownership of railroads."

Members ascribed their action to their belief that private operation of the carriers would best serve their interests. They described it "the most important move made by the league in ten years."

It was planned to obtain representation of all sections of the Nation on the national committee. Its main aim will be to turn public opinion against Federal control of the rail lines.

Record Soviet Flight.

London, Nov. 21 (AP).—The Reuters (British) news agency reported from Moscow tonight that a Soviet airman named Kokkinaki claimed an ascent today in a one-seater open airplane of 14,575 meters (over 9 miles).

U.S. Takes Steps To End Strike In Gulf Ports

Secretary Perkins, Chief of Longshoremen Confer in New York.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 21.—Secreary Frances Perkins said tonight she was "hopeful of a solution" of the Gulf ports longshoremen's strike which union leaders have threatened to extend to all Atlantic and Pacific ports.

After a 90-minute conference with Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, Miss Perkins said:

"This is an intricate and confusing situation. I believe we have made progress toward a method of solution, but our method cannot be revealed at this time."

The Secretary of Labor was accompanied by E. P. Marsh, of the United States Department of Labor conciliation service. Marsh said he was "familiar with the West Coast situation" where union longshoremen have refused to unload boats coming from gulf ports.

"Big Stick" Ruled Out.

"Government intervention must be orderly," Miss Perkins said. "We can't use a big stick, because the Government doesn't have one."

Although Miss Perkins made a special trip from Washington to see Ryan, they conferred in a hotel lobby while a dance orchestra played a few feet away. Both refused to discuss their talk.

The I. L. A. seeks union recognition in the Gulf.

Miss Perkins said the possibility of the I. L. A. extending its boycott from the srtike center to all American ports was "seriously considered."

"I hope the method we have devised will take care of the situation," she said.

Miss Perkins Returns.

Further details of the "method" will be given out in Washington either tomorrow or Saturday, she said. Miss Perkins planned to return to the Capital tonight.

In New York approximately 300 longshoremen demonstrated today against the United Fruit Co. Lines, demanding payment of the wage scales of the I. L. A. Company officials said its wage scale met union requirements.

Police said truck drivers moving fruit had been molested. Two men were arrested.

One Killed, 29 Hurt In Pittsburgh Blast

By the United Press.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 21.—One man was killed, a second is near death and 28 workers were burned when a metal mold exploded at the Mesta Machine plant late today.

John Eves received fatal burns. Eleven of those burned needed hospital treatment. Frederick Buhr, burned over the entire body, was in a critical condition.

W. B. Harris, Princeton Professor, Dies at 70

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 21 (AP).—Walter Butler Harris, 70, professor emeritus of the engineering faculty of Princeton University, died today at his home. He was born here, the son of the Rev. William Harris, treasurer of the university, and Christina Van Alen Butler. He organized the department of geodesy in 1895.

Professor Harris retired in 1934.

He invented a system of jetty protection, now used on the Jersey coast, and he was an architect and landscape gardener.

His wife, the former Anne L. Eyeomans, of Princeton; a son and two daughters survive.

Military Classes Called.

Berlin, Nov. 21 (U.P.).—The military classes of 1913 and 1916 will be recalled to the colors at an unspecified date next year, it was announced officially today.

Vast Surplus To Stay Intact, Reserve Says

regulations regarding marginal trading in stocks in regulations applicable to brokers, issued more than a year ago. Under those rules, brokers may not lend to a customer more than whichever is the higher—55 per cent of the current market value of the security, or 100 per cent of the lowest market value of the security during the previous three years, but not more than 75 per cent of the current market value.

As is obvious from its description. the rule is somewhat intricate, and brokers have criticized it as unnecessarily confusing and burdensome. The problem of regulating bank loans on securities is more intricate than that of brokers' loans. For that reason objections have been raised to imposing on banks regulations based on this standard.

If the existing formula is abandoned in framing the regulations for the banks—and there is a question whether this can be done under the act—it would also be necessary to revise the regulations now applying to brokers. Otherwise the result might be to discriminate against brokers.

Consideration of this problem yesterday by the council, the Reserve Board, Dr. Carl E. Parry, chief of the board's division of security loans, and Dr. E. A. Goldenweiser, director of research and statistics for the board, is not related to the recent increased trading on the stock market, but flows from the provisions of last year's stock exchange control act.

The opinion appears to exist in Federal Reserve circles that no reason exists at this time for any tightening of stock market credit. Indeed, aggregate security values have increased many times faster than bank loans, while brokers' loans, although up somewhat, are not unusually high, it is pointed out.

This aspect of the matter leads into the second general problem discussed with the board by the advisory council, the system's reserve position. The latter at present centers around the fact that excess reserves total the unprecedented figure—higher almost every week — of $3,070,000,000, brought about by an inflow of $1,728,000,000 in gold within the last year.

These excess reserves—that is, idle money deposited by member banks with the 12 reserve banks in excess of the legal reserve requirements—would support a credit inflation of from $20,000,000,000 to $30,000,000,000, regarded as more than sufficient for a disastrous inflation, if it got under way. For that reason these excess reserves have caused widespread concern and discussion in financial circles within the last three or four months.

All aspects of this question have been canvassed and studied closely by the Federal Reserve Board's experts. They also have been examined and analyzed by the Open Market Committee of the Federal Reserve Banks—comprising the 12 governors of those institutions. Now it has been discussed by the Advisory Council, which was designed to bring the viewpoint of business and industry into the operation of the reserve system.

These three agencies are reported in agreement that, surprising as the new height of excess reserves may be, there is nothing alarming about the situation at this time, chiefly because there is no tendency on the part of the general public and business to use this idle credit. Consequently, none of these reserve authorities believe the board need take any action at this time.

Wedlock Today Held Unstable In Court Suit

Ex-Wife Asks 'Rights' Be Clarified in Petition to U. S. Tribunal.

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court was told yesterday that marriage "is ceasing to have any other meaning than a legal arangement to live together, not 'until death do us part,' but until one spouse happens to find another whom he likes better than the old one."

That view was expressed by Mrs. Jessie Margaret Wilson Budlong, of Tucson, Ariz., in a petition asking the high court to determine her rights as the lawful wife of Milton John Budlong, socially promient in New York City and Newport, R. I.

They were married at Scranton, Pa., on November 9, 1898, and he obtained an absolute divorce in Rhode Island in 1928.

In her petition, which was denied by the Federal district court at Tucson and by the circuit court of appeals at San Francisco, Mrs. Budlong contended the divorce was fraudulently obtained and void because no specific charges were made against her and she did not have a fair trial.

La Paree Goes Barnum; Offers Circus Tonight

Clowns, Acrobats, Daisy, the Wonder Horse—All Are Ready.

By Chanticleer.

Step up, one and all, and see the big show!

Yes, sir, the circus has come to town—a real big-top show with clowns, acrobats, tumblers and a genuine wild animal or two for good measure—opening tonight, ladeez and gentlemun, at La Paree.

Nothing like it ever before, folks. The real goods, folks, right on the patch of hardwood where only last night the dancing gals held forth. Right where the night lights blaze and the orchestry hips her up when the clowns are back in the make-up tent and getting ready for the next big performance.

And Maestro Emory Daugherty all dressed up just like a circus clown leading the band in the grand opening on the floor for each show. And there'll be Daisy, the Wonder Horse, doing some fancy tricks as the main attraction.

For the first time, so far as I know, a complete cricus routine comes to a Washington nightery—and La Paree is going the limit to make the novelty a smash hit with the citizenry. Ringmaster Joe Murphy says—bring the kids.

Ethel Pastor, the Russian Troika songbird, holds a niche all her own in the world of cabaret entertainment. Having been featured in Broadway musicals, she's an actress as well as a prima donna. And La Pastor never leaves the Troika after the day's (or rather night's) shows are completed without having provided at least one number for every one. Her particular favorites, by the way, are gypsy songs in their original languages, although most of her requests are for light opera.

That dance floor out at the Dude Ranch probably is the largest in the city. Whether that's contestable or not, Kay and her Kadettes continue to do a nice job of covering said floor—having been held over another week. Ralph Garren for the dancing and Milt Barrett for a hearty reception at the front door. They say that Rubinoff's brother was an impromptu performer as well as guest last Saturday night at the Ranch.

* * * *

"Gobs of Joy," the revue holding forth at the Lotus Restaurant this week, came to town fully expecting to stay longer than one week. That's smart business for you. The impresario just naturally knew the big show with its cast of 25 would strike the Washington fancy—so he brought a complete change of wardrobe, routines and tunes for this week. Chic Stanley and Lou Kaplan are highlighting the production with an all-comedy pantomime — knockabout stuff. Bill Strickland and his Capitolians for dancing and little Judy Ellington for vocal choruses.

* * * *

* * * *

Jay Howard, who sketches and does things with masks at Child's Gingham Club these evenings, continues to draw the fancy of the customers. He's made a collection of masks of the bigger and better personalities of Hollywood. Phil Lynch and all the Lynchians play for dinner and supper dancing.

* * * *

Sultana, originator of Spanish dances, will be right at home in the Madrillon's Spanish atmosphere when she opens a new show there tonight. And just to add a complete continental flavor, Mme. Lucie Delza will be present to sing French and English songs. The third star of the bill is Suzanne Austin in acrobatic and control dances. Leon Brusiloff and his orchestra see that you are royally entertained between floor shows.

It won't be long now—until the Ambassador knows who the lucky girl will be. Auditions were closed yesterday and the finalists will have a showdown before newspaper and radio judges next Monday night. The idea, as you perhaps already have noted in this space, is to get a gal soloist for Harry Albert's band. To celebrate the occasion, Monday night at the Ambassador's Ambassador room has been designated "Discovery Night." Come on down and see the lucky lady win.

Rudy Schramm is learning that his N. B. C. radio appearances are making friends for him with the patrons at Ramon's—and that the Ramon guests listen to him on the air. Many of his requests at Ramon's are from folks who have heard him on the radio and drop in to have him do a couple of numbers personally, as it were.

* * * *

Art and grace fill every moment of the dancing of Ramon and Renita, stars of the current floor show at the Shoreham ballroom. Their appeal is accentuated by their own novel dance creations, including the unraveling of Ravel's Bolero—into their own Ravelero, with five distinct dance rythms. And their Love Walt, too, a beautiful number in single timing. Renita has the tiniest of dancing feet. She wears size No. 1½ shoes!

The next time you drop in at the Club Habana give Paul, the smiling captain of the waiters, a more deferential greeting, if you please. In a recent conversation the topic changed to "old New York." Someone asked Paul if he remembered the old Cafe Savarin. And Paul grinned and recalled that, as a waiter at the Savarin, he carried a tray each morning at 7 to the banking house of J. P. Morgan—for Charles (Million Dollar) Gates. "They were, in truth, the good old days," Paul says, adding that it's darned hard to carry hot ham and eggs through the snow on a cold winter morning—and get them to the guest before they get cold.

None other than Marty Rubin will be found pictured elsewhere on this page. Marty is synonymous with Pete Macias' Heigh-Ho Club. Everyone who enjoys that intimate note in singing at the table on the floor is Marty's life-long friend. which brings around to the observation that Ol' Massa Pete has a very versatile crew of musicians. Five of seven of the boys "double," meaning they can do a lot of things other than play just one instrument well. DeAngelo and Porter, the new dance team, are okay.

* * * *

Dancing, as you may already know, is a very important element of recreation in the lives of all Russians, and quite naturally plays an important part in the floor shows at Club Volga Boatman. Just by way of example: Larinova and Bolshakoff. Each week they do completely new numbers (unless you like and request the old ones). This week they're doing a Ukrainian peasant thing in native costume.

Maryland Club Gardens announces a new band. And it's none other than Jimmy Harris and an All-Washington group! The sax team is comprised of Louis Williams, Eddie Pearce and Francis Cruitt—whose arrangements are something to write home about. Eddie Whiteneck, the bass fiddler, formerly played with the National Symphony—and, of course, Jimmy Harris is a household name so far as patrons of nighteries are concerned. He's been with Pete Macias and Sidney—and his guitar and banjo solos are really the business. Garron and Bennett head this week's floor show. In the meantime, drop in and give Jimmy Harris a big welcome.

It's to be a very special dinner you'll be getting on Thanksgiving Day at Griffith Farms, out the Marlboro pike. A blazing log fire to give the season's touch and dancing to the music of the Varsity Six.

The Swanee Dance Club is featuring a floor show these days with Grace Rogers, Gertrude Gibbons, Renold and Dino and Karl Crosen, jr. The Swanee ballroom floor is probably the largest ballroom in town—and the music is provided by Al Shay and his orchestra of ten pieces.

Dance and Song Exponents

Wanderbirds' Route Is Goose Creek Canal

CrumblingDams and Locks Will Be Seen on 6-Mile Hike.

By Robert Shosteck.

It was over 100 years ago, March, 1832, to be exact, that Goose Creek first came into public notice as the site of a canal and navigation system which was to extend from as far off as Ashby's Gap and Little River, to the mouth of Goose Creek, at Edward's Ferry. When the Wanderbird hikers trek through this region on Sunday's hike, they will see the crumbling dams and canal locks of part of this great navigation system, which made it possible for grain and timber laden barges to reach Washington by way of the Potomac River and the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal. In addition to the 6-mile hike to the river, Dr. Ulke will lead a group to Trap Rock quarry, if a sufficient number of hikers are interested.

We meet in front of The Post Building at 10 a. m. and board buses which will take us to the Goose Creek Tavern, the starting point and end of the hike. The round trip fare will be 80 cents and reservations must be made in advance at NAtional 4200. Bring lunch, a cup of coffee, and food for supper, unless you plan to buy a supper at the tavern. A campfire party will end the hike, and arrangements have been made for the use of the tavern floor for dancing. Leave hobnail shoes at home, and be prepared for a late return—about 10 p. m., unless a bus load wishes to leave earlier.

The trail along the right bank of the creek affords easy going and it traverses scenic woods nearly the entire distance to Edward's Ferry. The old locks, dams and canals, which are seen along the way, take on added interest when it is learned that the Virginia Legislature passed an act in March, 1832, which recited that "it shall be lawful to open books for receiving subscriptions to stocks for opening and improving the navigation of Goose Creek, Little River and other branches of said stream, in the town of Leesburg, under the direction of the following commissioners . . ." The charter of the Goose Creek & Little River Navigation Co. not only granted broad rights of navigation and waterway improvement, but also conferred the right to build and operate a steam railroad.

At Edward's Ferry the barges from Goose Creek were towed across the river to the inlet canal which conected with the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal. The ferry was also linked with the Leesburg turnpike by a road which the hikers can follow on the return trip. The group should return to the tavern by 4 p. m. all ready to prepare supper around the campfire in the nearby woods. A la carte meals can be obtained at the tavern. After a rest and a sing around the campfire, there will be dancing for about two hours on the fine floor of the inn.

Wanderbirds who plan to go on Saturday afternoon's work trip in the vicinity of Chain Bridge will meet at 2:30 p. m. at Stop 20 on the Cabin John car line, or, if coming by auto, at the far end of Chain Bridge. The writer can take a few hikers who make arrangements in advance at Atlantic 3915. Bring your axes with you on this trip!

Add to the growing list of hiking groups the Vita Health Hickers, a group which combines hiking and good living. Sunday they meet at the end of the Rock Creek Bridge car line, continuing in a group to Connecticut Avenue Military road, the starting point of their hike. The route is cross-country to Fort De-Russey, ending up at the Sixteenth Street Reservoir. Mr. Dawe will lead.

The P. A. T. C. work trip this Sunday will be in Mont Alto State Forest, Pa. The group will go by bus, starting at the Treasury at 7 a. m. K. W. Perry, phone Col. 2883, is in charge of this trip. The Red Triangle's annual oyster roast will be held tomorrow night at the Clubhouse, out Canal road. Lots of oysters at 50 cents a person. Mrs. W. B. George, 5016 Illinois avenue, handles reservations.

Amnesia Victim Here Is New York Salesman

A man found wandering in Union Station yesterday, and who was sent to Gallinger Hospital, was identified last night as Mark H. Bassett, 54, automobile salesman.

Bassett said his memory left him after he arrived yesterday from New York and checked his bags. He said he had no particular address, but had a niece, Mrs. Helen Aird, living at 1014 West Jackson street, Plainsville, Ohio.

AAA to Push New Tobacco Crop Contracts

Producers Are to Receive Agreements Before 1935 Market Opens.

By the Associated Press.

The Farm Administration announced yesterday its new four-year contract for growers of Burley, fire-cured and dark air-cured tobacco would be ready for producers' signatures before the markets open.

The new contracts, covering crop years from 1936 to 1939, inclusive, provide for continuation of acreage and production bases already established, with adjustments designed to make them equitable. Provision is made for one benefit payment at the end of each contract year.

The contract provides a payment will be made to make up the difference between the average farm price and the parity price on the portion of the crop used domestically. The amount of payment for each year will be determined after the crop is sold.

Minimum Is Guaranteed.

A minimum payment for Burley of not less than $2.25 per 100 pounds of base production is guaranteed for 1936. A minimum of $1.50 per 100 pounds is guaranteed for dark air-cured tobacco.

The Burley contract provides the adjustment from the base shall not be greater than 50 per cent in any contract year, and the fire-cured and dark-air cured contracts provide maximum adjustments of 40 per cent.

J. B. Hutson, director of the AAA Tobacco Section, said it was believed the adjustment for 1936 would be from 30 to 40 per cent for Burley tobacco and 25 to 35 per cent for dark types.

Crops to Alternate.

The contract requires that the acreage of soil improving and erosion preventing crops will be increased by an amount equal to that part of the base acreage left out of tobacco production. The contract may be terminated by individual growers or by the Secretary of Agriculture at the end of any year.

If tobacco is produced by share tenants or share croppers payment will be made direct to the operator and to each tenant or cropper in the proportion they share in the crop.

The contract provides the number of share tenants and share croppers on the farm and the percentage of tobacco acreage grown by tenants and share croppers, shall not be reduced below the number and percentage in 1935.

County control associations composed of contract signers will administer the programs locally.

Murder in the Capital

By Karl Schriftgiesser

Who was the slayer of quiet Corinna Loring, almost on the eve of her bridal day?

As ace detectives seek to unravel this ghastly crime, The Washington Post has been delving into the histories of unsolved murders in and around the District.

The notorious and gruesome murder of Mary Baker, pretty clerk in the Navy Department, is recounted by Mr. Schriftgiesser today.

More than five years have passed since Mary Baker was found dead, the victim of a vicious criminal assault by some unidentified man, who clawed and beat her, and then fired three pistol shots into her body. Practically none of the questions that came first to mind when discovery of her body was made public have been answered in that interim. Today about all that is definitely known about the case is that Mary Baker was murdered, her body thrown into a ditch near the Sheridan Gate of Arlington National Cemetery. It remains perhaps the most mystifying of Washington's many mystifying crimes.

Perhaps the reason the Mary Baker case has fascinated Washington throughout the half decade it has gone unsolved is because Mary Baker, like so many thousands of others in the District, was a Government clerk. Headline writers called her "Navy Girl," which meant in this city that she was a clerk in the Navy Department. She was not a beautiful girl, but those who knew her said she was attractive. Unlike Corrina Loring, whose recent murder seems to be following the familiar pattern, she had had affairs with men, with many men, in fact. And yet she was known as a quiet girl, the daughter of a Virginia pastor and herself an attendant at a Washington church.

In fact, Mary Baker left a Lenten service at the Church of the Epiphany to go to her cruel death. She had gone to the church directly after leaving her desk at the Navy Department, that same desk which housed certain secrets of her heart in the form of love letters, some from married men. With her were Miss Inez Eyre and Miss Ora Smith, two friends. When Mary Baker left after services she asked Miss Smith if she cared to walk to her car, so that Mary Baker might drive her home. The car was parked at Seventeenth street near B street. Miss Smith declined. That was at 20 minutes of 6 on the evening of April 11, 1930.

"Bundle" in Car.

Twenty minutes after Mary Baker left her friend, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh R. Wood, who had been to see the cherry blossoms, were walking near the Ellipse. Also nearby was a man named Francis Rice. These three saw a florid-faced and heavy-set man seated in a parked Ford car. Rice, on passing, thought he saw a bundle in the car but as he went by the "bundle" came to life. It was a girl's head that was lifted, he said. Blood was streaming from her lips. The florid-faced man threw the car into gear and drove rapidly north on Seventeenth street.

Rice and the Woods thought they heard three muffled shots. The couple rushed to a police station and there the first official notice of the Mary Baker case was taken when the desk sergeant took their report—and called another station house to investigate. While all this was going on, Olga Skinner, a friend of Mary, was impatiently waiting in a downtown department store for the girl who was never to be seen again alive. Miss Skinner, after a long wait, went home to Lyon Park, Va., where she lived with Mary and a girl named Mildred Sperry, also clerks, in a small but neat cottage.

The next day was Saturday. Miss Baker, who had not come home, did not appear for work. Miss Eyre, worried, called the two housemates, but they too were in complete ignorance of the "Navy girl's" whereabouts. Worried themselves in turn by now, the girls sought out an architect for the Navy Department, and a friend of them all, but especially of Mary Baker. He was reputed to be one of her closest friends.

Bloody Car Found.

Meanwhile, in Arlington County, unknown to the worried friends of Mary Baker, a blood-stained automobile was found on Cemetery road, about 100 feet from Military road, near Arlington Cemetery. Torn shreds of a parasol were found nearby. The car was Mary Baker's.

And so was a body they found, stuffed into a culvert hard by Sheridan Gate.

In this body were three bullets. One had entered the side of her neck, severed the jugular vein and wounded the right arm which had been raised when the shot was fired as if to ward off a man's blow. The second had penetrated the left side, ricocheting off a rib, and passing almost through the body. The third had lodged in the flesh of the girl's back. Parts of the girl's lingerie were missing; so was some of her other clothing; so was her pocketbook. But it was not a crime for greed.

The body was identified by Miss Skinner and Miss Sperry. Miss Baker's parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Thomas F. Baker, Oak Groove, Va., were notified. And the following authorities took up the man-hunt: Sheriff Howard B. Fields of Arlington County, Detective Edward Kelley, of the Metropolitan police homicide squad; other Washington officers, the United States Park Police and members of the Department of Justice.

They took the body for examination and found that death had not come from leaden bullets or from blows struck by a lust-mad man, but from strangulation. Sheriff Fields of Arlington County combed Hells Bottom, a nearby Negro district and arrested two very scared Negroes, who had in their possession the Baker purse and scarf. But they established alibis, admitting they had taken the clothing from the car when they found it parked on the road. They denied having taken Mary Baker's coat, which also was missing.

Story Verified.

The architect friend was taken to police headquarters and grilled at length, as the reporters put it. He admitted he had a "date" with Mary for the afternoon of the murder and that he had waited for her near her Ford car. When she did not appear at 5:30 he said he went home. Yes, he had known Mary for a long time; had been seeing much of her for several months. But that afternoon? No, he had not seen her. Police checked his story and were satisfied. He was released.

Miss Sperry and Miss Skinner were questioned briefly. Then they rushed off to Mountcastle, Va., to "evade reporters," and two days later they were questioned for two hours by detectives. They did not give much valuable information, as it turned out, but what they did tell made detectives rush pell-mell to Warsaw, Va., armed with a murder warrant.

Mervin Sisson was arrested, charged with the crime. With him was also arrested one Julian Gallagher, who, like Sisson, was a traveling salesman. Yes, said Sisson when questioned, he knew Mary Baker. Yes, he had broken an appointment with her. But on the day of the crime he had not seen her. Police checked his alibi—and he, too, was released.

"Confession" Proves Untrue.

The investigation moved "forward" through familiar channels. The keys to the car were discovered on the road leading to the Agricultural Department Experimental Farm. Near the keys were some torn letters, a bill for $50 for professional services by a Washington doctor. Investigation revealed the dead girl had been treated for sinus trouble. Articles of clothing were found in a nearby sewer.

Thus three suspects were eliminated. Police ran around in the proverbial circles, getting nowhere.

Mary Baker was buried and other events stole the headlines. Then police arrested Howard L. Brewster, a soldier stationed at Fort Myer, who said that Mary Baker had been his girl and he had killed her. Unfortunately he was lying and authorities said he was a "psycopathic case." He, too, was released.

These two questions police had not been able to answer, nor have they since:

Did the murderer assault Mary Baker on the road, kill her, take her body to the culvert, and return to where the car was found?

Or was Mary Baker killed in Washington?

Had they been able to answer these questions they might have got somewhere, but they couldn't. Then a Virginia real estate agent threw himself into the case. Among other things he ran a miniature golf course—it was in that forgotten and cuckoo era that the crime was committed—and people would flock, he thought, to his place once they heard he was mixed up in a crime that was on everybody's lips and in every newspaper in the country.

He got his publicity. He got more than that. He got arrested. And he got more than that, too. He got tried for the murder of Mary Baker.

It was in May that he walked into Sheriff Field's office and threw a .32 calibre Spanish type revolver on Mr. Fields' desk. He told a long story about that gun; how a strange man had come to his office with mysterious questions about it; how it had been missing from his home; how it had turned up later in his office in Oakcrest. And he suggested that perhaps an itinerant house painter might have been the one who took it. The painter, said the man with a wise look, had once mentioned that Mary Baker, the then unknown Navy Department clerk, was his friend.

Alibi Unshaken.

It was not until July that police found the painter and then he had an ironclad alibi. In the meantime the gun had been identified as the "murder gun." The real estate man was grilled, sternly.

Inspector Kelley questioned him, and he replied:

"Kelley, I'm sorry I lied to you. Yes, I was near the Sheridan gate that day, but I was with a married woman, a friend I have known for years."

Later he said, "You've enough to indict, convict and electrocute me but if I were to tell you I killed her I would not be telling the truth!"

They charged him with the murder, though, on July 21, 1930. He was placed on trial exactly three months later. Maj. Calvin Goddard, known far and wide for his entrance into the Sacco-Vanzetti case in Massachusetts, was a State witness. He said the bullets in Mary Baker's body came from the gun.

But the real estate man brought in many witnesses to prove he was not near where the murder was committed on the day it was done.

A jury acquitted him after scarcely more than half an hour's deliberation. In December, Beulah Limerick was killed and Mary Baker forgotten.

In between the acquittal and the sensational murder at the Anacostia Flats a Schenectady, N. Y., convict confessed the murder. But he was only looking for a vacation from his five-year prison sentence. They never even brought him to Washington. Then, in 1931, authorities wondered if perhaps Harry F. Powers, the so-called Blue Beard of the Mail Order Wives, might not have done it, but they did not manage to connect him with the crime and now he is dead from an electric shock in a death house, for another crime. In 1932 Isador Matin, alias Ted Martin, twice confessed it, and in 1933 a Negro, Howard Simms, made a deathbed confession which lacked essential facts and knowledge of the case. It seems a lot of people wanted credit for doing what police more easily proved they didn't do than they ever could prove someone else did.

And after all this the authorities, none of them, could tell you answers to these fundamental questions:

Where was Mary Baker killed?

Was she shot first, then attacked, then strangled inside the car?

Or was she attacked and strangled outside the car and then shot and her body carried to the culvert?

Had she a prearranged rendezvous with death?

Or did some man, never in her life before, step in—to end it?

What was the exact hour of her death?

And what motive, except passion, was there for killing her?

The police can answer none of these; neither has anyone else succeeded in doing so. All they know is that Mary Baker, who went to church, had dates with men, who craved excitement, and who worked for the Navy Department, is dead, just as dead and just as mysteriously dead, as she was in 1930, when found in a culvert near the Sheridan gate.

Mrs. W. H. Pearson Rites Held in Asheville

Funeral services for Mrs. Marietta Arnold Pearson, widow of Maj. (Chaplain) William Henry Pearson, were held yesterday in Asheville, N. C. She died there Saturday at the age of 81.

She is survived by her children, Col. William F. Pearson, of the adjutant general's department; Mrs. George W. Starr, of Canton, Ohio, and Mrs. Arthur B. Wade, wife of Maj. Wade, of the Field Artillery. Mrs. Pearson is to be buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

Miss Wright Ends Travels On Continent

Returns After a Long Stay in Europe and Near East.

Spends Month and Half as Guest of Claracs in Teheran.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Another interesting and enterprising young person has returned after an absence of several months. Miss Barbara Wright has joined her mother, Mrs. Hamilton Wright, in their home on Massachusetts avenue after spending the last four months traveling in Europe and the Near East.

Miss Wright has several fine pieces of writing attributed to her pen, and during her trip collected more interesting material for several articles. She visited in Cairo, Syria and Bagdad, meeting interesting people and having many adventures and finally arrived in Teheran, where she was the guest for a month and a half of M. and Mme. Claude Archille Clarac. M. Clarac is well remembered in Washington, having served for several years as a member of the staff of the French embassy. His marriage took place some time ago, and since then he has been attached to the French legation in Iran.

First Trip to Berlin.

After leaving Teheran Miss Wright travelled over the Caspian Sea and thence to Moscow, later going to Berlin, a city she had not visited previously.

Her last stop before sailing for home was England, where she visited with her brother-in-law and sister, Group Capt. and Mrs. G. R. Macfarlane Reid, who are being congratulated on the birth of a son some weeks ago. Mrs. Reid was formerly Miss Leslie Wright her marriage to the former Air Attache of the British Embassy having taken place in London, September 27, 1934. Miss Wright had spent the previous summer visiting with Capt. Reid's mother, Mrs. George Macfarlane-Reid at Dunara, Trestwick, Ayshire, Scotland.

Attached to Air Ministry.

Shortly after their marriage, Capt. and Mrs. Reid returned to Washington and the former's post at the embassy, and last winter were popular members of the younger diplomatic set. This autumn Capt. Reid was relieved of his duties at the embassy and he and his wife went to England, where he is attached to the Ministry of Air.

While in Teheran, Miss Wright also met Mme. Entezam, the former Miss Margaret Hume, of Washington, who has recently been visiting in the Capital with her mother, Mrs. Charles Hume. She and her two children left in the early autumn to join Mr. Entezam in Europe. They are residing in Teheran, where Mr. Entezam is attached to the Foreign Office. Their marriage took place in Washington some years ago when Mr. Entezam was attached to the Persian Legation here.

Wadsted to Visit 'Little House' Today

The minister will be greeted by a former girl guide from Denmark, who will wear the Danish girl guide uniform and speak to him in their native language.

Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, Girl Scout commissioner of the District of Columbia, and a group of Girl Scouts will escort the minister through the house, where he will view many of their "home making" and "leisure time" activities.

Anne M. Wyant Wed in Capital To Philip Gore

Reception at Washington Club Follows Afternoon Ceremony There.

The wedding of Miss Anne Moore Wyant, daughter of Mrs. Adam M. Wyant, of Washington and Greensberg, Pa., and the late Representative Wyant, to Mr. Philip Larner Gore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Gore, took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Washington Club, with the Rev. Albert J. McCartney, of the Church of the Covenant, officiating, assisted by Canon Albert Lucas.

Mr. Adam Martin Wyant, jr., escorted his sister and gave her in marriage. The bride wore a gown of ivory antique satin, fashioned on classical lines with a high draped neckline and long fitted sleeves. The skirt, made on straight lines, had two deep godet pleats on each side, which fell into a wide circular train. Her veil of tulle was held in place by a coronet of old lace and was caught at the sides with clusters of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Cousin Is Maid of Honor.

Miss Polly Cooke, a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a period frock of white moire fashioned with tiny puffed sleeves and full skirts, a coil of white velvet in her hair, and carried an arm bouquet of white snapdragons.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. F. Eberhardt Haynes, sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. Armistead Boothe, Miss Mary White, Miss Marion Dunlop, Miss Virginia Cooke and Miss Frances Carter. They wore costumes like that of the maid of honor and carried muffs of gardenias.

Mr. F. Eberhardt Haynes served as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Armistead Boothe, Mr. Andrew Parker, Mr. J. William Fullbright and Mr. Harold Fangboner.

After the ceremony, which was witnessed by members of the two families and a few friends, there was a reception at the club, to which additional guests had been invited. Mrs. Wyant and Mrs. Gore received with the young couple, the mother of the bride wearing a gown of black embossed chiffon with a black velvet hat, and Mrs. Gore wearing a gown of hyacinth blue crepe, the tunic of which was embroidered with silver. Her hat was of silver and black.

Bride Is Junior Leaguer.

Later Mr. Gore and his bride left for a wedding trip, the latter wearing a frock of hunter's green velveteen with a hat to match and a fur coat. The bridegroom's parents will leave shortly to spend the winter in the South and during their absence the young couple will occupy the Gore home on Garfield street.

Young Mrs. Gore attended Holton Arms School and Smith College. She is a member of the Junior League and has been an active and popular member of the younger set.

Mr. Gore was graduated from Princeton in 1931 and received his law degree from George Washington University in 1934. He is a member of the Key and Seal Club of Princeton.

Honoring Miss Gladys Broz, daughter of the retiring First Secretary of the Czechoslovakian Legation and Mme. Broz, who will sail November 29 from Baltimore for their home in Prague, Miss Katharine Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wrisley Brown, entertained at luncheon at the Sulgrave Club yesterday. In addition to Miss Broz, the guests were Miss Dorothy Howe, Miss Fontaine Flannery, Miss Virginia Flannery, Miss Mary Wells, Miss Sally Mitchell LeFevre, Miss Angelica Lloyd, Miss Jane Thorpe, Miss Helen DeFrees, Miss Jane Esther Platt, Miss Betty Mattingly, Miss Eleanor Mattingly, Miss Anne Sterrett, Miss Benedicta Gannon, Miss Anne Moussot, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Miss Jehanne Burch, Miss Helena Shaforth and Miss Mary Katharine Bentley.

Mrs. Walter J. Cummings, of Chicago, who is being extensively entertained during her visit, was the guest in whose honor Mrs. John Allan Dougherty entertained at luncheon at the Army and Navy Country Club yesterday.

Mrs. Dougherty and her nephew, Mr. Allan E. McGraw, will spend the week-end in New York and the following week-end in Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Beachman, jr., who make their home at the Barclay Hotel in Philadelphia, will entertain at luncheon for Mrs. Dougherty and Mr. McGraw.

Friday Dancing Class to Start Series on Dec. 6

Dates Selected for Six Events to Be Held at Willard Hotel.

The first dance of the Friday evening dancing class will take place at the Willard Hotel December 6. This group is not to be confused with the series being given on Fridays during the season at the Sulgrave Club, but is an older organization which originated at the Massachusetts avenue home of the late Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh, who invited a large group of her friends each Friday for dancing in the ballroom in her home, which, by the way, is now leased as an office for one of the Federal agencies.

After Mrs. Walsh closed her home, those who had enjoyed her hospitality decided to keep the group together, and selected the Willard as their meeting place.

The men's floor committee includes Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Coleman, Brig. Gen. Perry Miles, Col. Edward Clifford, Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, chief of the Far Eastern division of the State Department; Mr. Franklin Roudybush and Mr. John McClure.

Dates which have been selected for the other dances this season are December 31, January 31, February 28, March 20, April 3 and May 1, which will be the annual dinner dance.

Miss Anne V. Connor Becomes Bride of Raymond Ratcliffe

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Ren Connor, of Tersana, Manassas, Va., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Anna Virginia Connor, and Mr. Raymond Jackson Ratcliffe, which took place at 7 o'clock last night in Trinity Episcopal Church of Manassas. Mr. Ratcliffe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Raymond Ratcliffe, also of Manassas.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Stuart Gibson in Trinity Episcopal Church, which was decorated with white and yellow chrysanthemums. The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a gown of antique ivory fashioned on princess lines with a long court train. With it she wore a veil of tulle attached by clusters or orange blossoms to a cap of lace which had been worn by her grandmother. Her bouquet was of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was her sister, Miss Walser Connor, who was frocked in rust velvet with a turban of matching velvet and maline, and who carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids, who were frocked alike in models of gold velvet with matching accessories and carried rust chrysanthemums, were Miss Anna Bruce Whitemore, Miss Lucy Arrington, Miss Rose Ratcliffe, a sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Susan Stuart Gibson. The flower girl was little Miss Ray Burhen, daughter of Lieut. Commander and Mrs. Raymond Burhen, of Long Beach, Calif., who was frocked in white and carried a basket of white chrysanthemums.

Mr. Harry Bubb, of Williamsport, Pa., was the best man, and the ushers included Mr. Henry Pen Conner, jr., of William and Mary College; Mr. Robert Fox, of Washington, D. C.; Mr. Norman Connor Kincheloe, Mr. Charles Walton Lewis and Mr. John Holt Merchant, of Manassas.

Following the marriage a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents for the young couple, who were assisted in receiving their guests by Mrs. Ratcliffe, mother of the bridegroom, who was gowned in wine-colored lace, and Mrs. Samuel Palmer Senior, of Bridgeport, Conn., who wore a model of black velvet. Out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mrs. Senior, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Newman, of Bridgeport; Mr. and Mrs. Enos Newman, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin C. Hazen, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kincheloe Ingley and Mr. and Mrs. Hobert Newman, of Washington; Representative and Mrs. Howard Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Taylor, of Alexandria.

The bride is a former student of Fredericksburg College and is a graduate of the National School of Fine Arts in Washington. Mr. Ratcliffe is a graduate of the Swavely School in Manassas and of Lafayette College at Eastern Point, Pa. He is a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity. A number of social affairs were given in honor of the bride previous to her marriage. Among the hostesses were Mrs. Joseph Lyon, Miss Susan Start Gibson, Miss Anna Bruce Whitmore, Mrs. William Cocke, Miss Rose Ratcliffe, Miss Lucy Arrington, Mrs. Paul Arrington and Miss Janet Trussler.

Dry 'Shampoo' Is Precaution Against Colds

Swedish Powder Absorbs Oil, Leaving It Soft and Glossy.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

ON THESE DAYS between a balmy fall and a chilly winter, obnoxious head colds prey on us if given the least provocation.

They often besiege us after we've washed our hair and plunge us into the depths of discomfort. They drive us to drinking gallons of hot lemonades and soda, and to dosing up on pills and bitter tonics, and all too frequently sap our energy and will-to-do.

But for the sake of comfort and our appearance we must keep our hair clean, light, and fluffy. Now, thanks to modern science, we may do this without risking a shampoo, when a cold is in sight and the weather threatening. We can turn with assurance to a certain Swedish hair powder known for years as one of the best hair dry cleaners on the market.

It's a blessing to women who have hitherto found it necessary to shampoo two or three times a week in order to keep their hair as soft and glossy as it should be. Such constant washings dry the natural oil from the root. With this powder it's different. It absorbs the oil from the hair leaving it soft and glossy, but at the same time retains the oil at the root, where it is so much needed to give life and nourishment.

Here's how to use it: Separate the hair into parts or strands and dust in the powder with a powder puff. Allow it to remain about ten minutes. While waiting, brush the scalp with short rapid strokes to loosen dead skin or dandruff. Then brush out dust, dandruff and powder together. The scalp and hair are in this manner cleaned at one and the same time.

The powder is a sanitary, vegetable absorbent that removes dust, grease and superflous oil. You may use it with confidence as it is absolutely harmless.

Decorative Wood Baskets.

SYMBOLIC of early American charm, and quite in keeping with the current demand for early American fittings are the wood baskets woven of coarse reed strands. These, low and roomy, are decorative and no end convenient to place on your hearth to hold kindling or small logs.

You'll find these shown in the notions department of a downtown store. They're filled with pine cones which have been especially treated to make multicolored flames.

What more ideal present for that friend with the open fireplace? If, of course, you can resist one for yourself.

Iridescent Eye Shadow.

NOT LONG AGO came a query to this column that we thought might interest lots of you. It was: What advantages does an iridescent eye shadow have over the plainer type?

The answer is this: An iridescent shadow not only imparts a soft shading to the lids, but also a luminous quality. The tiny flecks or lights in it made for glamour, and accentuate or even create an illusion of sparkle, and brightness.

With this season's metallic gowns, and gowns metallic trimmed, needows, one beauty expert has recently put out one that is about the smoothest little beautifier we've seen yet. It goes on evenly and easily and does a nice job of flattering. It comes in little composition boxes that are the colors of the shadow. Available in blue, green, violet and gray. Blue for blondes, green for dusky blondes, violet for brunettes and gray for everyone, day or night.

Three Platform Rules Given Women Speakers

MRS. ANNE TILLERY RENSHAW. Harris & Ewing.

Remove Hat, Keep Hands Off Beads and Limit Talk to 5 Minutes, Mrs. Anne Renshaw, Washington Speech Specialist, Advises.

By Dudley Harmon.

A WOMAN CAMPAIGN SPEAKER can be just as forceful as a man provided she observes three important platform rules.

These rules, according to Mrs. Anne Tillery Renshaw, Washington speech specialist, are:

Remove your hat before speaking.

Limit your speech to five minutes.

Mrs. Renshaw who before the last national election drilled numerous women speakers for both political parties will discuss the campaign speech in an address this afternoon before the League of Republican Women. Despite the present emphasis on organization work in parties, she believes campaign speaking still offers women their best opportunity for political roles.

"It is a type of party activity more suited to their abilities than organizing wards and precincts," she said. "It is natural for women to be crusaders. But they should remember to be feminine in their crusading. No matter how militant a woman speaker, she should never be masculine."

Construction Reform Paramount.

"On no account should a woman denounce from the platform," she said. "Her fundamental role is a constructive one, and she should concentrate on building up, not tearing down. Most of the constructive reform in history is the result of women's efforts, especially along social lines. Men are much more likely to carry out women's wishes if they express them as gracious behests than they are to be impressed by a strident speech is which the speaker is violently anti-everything.

"In keeping with the feminine qualities which she wishes to emphasize, a woman speaker's voice should be calm and low pitched. She must concentrate on reaching the back row, and realize that if she succeeds in doing this, the front row will take care of itself. She should never shout. The increasing use of amplifiers is making it more easy than ever for women's voices to carry without being raised to too high a pitch.

"The woman who clutches the back of her chair, twirls her beads, or fiddles with bracelets while speaking is never effective. Her dress should be simple, as jewelry and trimmings distract an audience's attention. She should not wear a hat, as this shades the brow and eyes and detracts from the general effect of her facial expressions. In other words, she should give her audience an earful, instead of an eyeful.

"Her gestures should be simple and spontaneous. Gone is the day of the teacher who trained her pupils to emphasize their remarks with exaggerated, mechanical wavings of their arms and hands."

Those who have twisted their faces into a forced smile after the tiresome "Pat and Mike" story, which precedes so many political speeches, will be interested to know that Mrs. Renshaw is against all jokes on the platform, especially at the beginning of a speech.

"Never jest with your audiences," she tells her women pupils. "And never on any account begin your address with a funny story. This relaxes your audience at a time when you want them keenly at attention. It is proper to weave in a few anecdotes of a humorous nature when they fit the context of the speech, but a joke, never."

Women More Zealous Than Men.

Mrs. Renshaw believes that women in politics take their role more seriously than men do. This, she says, is because of their crusading spirit, and once their interest is aroused, they are afire with the zeal to "clean up." They are more inclined than men to put the personal element into their speeches. A woman speaking for a Democratic campaign, Mrs. Renshaw said, is apt to go on at some length about her own losses in the stock market.

"A woman should use different tactics for different speeches," Mrs. Renshaw continued, "depending on whether her audience is masculine or feminine. If her listeners are men, she can sway them most effectively by appealing to their protective instincts and their strength to set things right. When she talks to women she should go after the 'house-cleaning vote.' By that I mean she should capture their fundamental interest in cleaning up a situation."

Naughty Child Merits Right Of Explanation

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

BUT, mother, you won't listen to me! "Let me tell you why."

It was a useless protest every time. Mrs. Jones neither could nor would pay attention to what her small daughter said, and the child, overwhelmed by her mother's accusations, would burst into helpless tears. She finally stopped trying to explain herself, and took refuge in sullen silence, which her mother found even more exasperating than angry self-defense.

Adults are too prone to take the stand that they are always right and the child wilfully naughty and utterly wrong. Often, if they would but listen to the child's point of view, they would find what seemed to the child at least a reasonable motive for his behavior. After all, however outrageous the particular act in question, the important point is to get at the underlying motive.

In such cases it is more profitable for a parent, however outraged and angry he may feel, to curb his tongue and, with an open mind, listen to the child's defense. If he would take the position, not of an accusing prosecutor, nor even an impartial judge, but of a jury, the peers of the accused, he could be of great help to the child. Let him try honestly to put himself into the child's place, and with love and sympathy follow the child's mental processes. He will find, to his surprise, that, according to the child's logic, the youngster was acting quite reasonably.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE'VE HEARD many a tale about who designed the first Windsor chair and where—but to tell the truth nobody is quite sure. However, here is one version that is interesting and sounds logical. Once upon a time King George I of England was caught in a storm some distance from the castle at Windsor. And there he sat in a chair that—was quite new in design but charming in its simple grace. He discovered that it had been made by the village wheelwright on the principle of a wheel with spokes and a slender bent rim. So delighted was George with the chair that he had it copied for himself and thereby began the popularity of a chair that has been in demand ever since because of its comfort, beauty and usability. It has been adapted in ever so many ways since—and the colonial American cabinet makers used it so widely and with such originality of interpretation that it has become almost synonymous with colonial American furniture designs. They are made in maple, mahogany and walnut and even in oak.

And Windsor chairs fit so pleasantly in so many places. We think they will be just right to solve the decoration problem of a lady we know who has a blue bedroom. She has a simple bow-front dresser, a highboy and a draped dressing table—which makes quite a lot of furniture for a room that isn't so big in the first place. But she does need chairs—she'd like at least two comfortable chairs and a straight chair—and she can make floor space for them all right. The question is a type of chairs that won't look too bulky and yet serve the need. That's why we suggest the Windsors—two rockers and one straight chair. They are comfortable and yet light in effect . . . and, of course, entirely congenial with the furniture she already has.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: A middle-aged woman of my acquaintance here in Washington is badly in need of dental work. Several of her teeth must be pulled and she needs an entire plate of teeth. However, she is absolutely without funds, and her daughter and son-in-law with whom she stays are not able to pay for such service, either.

• • • •

She may have to look for work soon, and of course, her bad dental condition will be a great handicap, not to mention the effect on her health. My question is this: Are there any free clinics in Washington that take care of such work? If so, do they charge for the materials and about how much would it be? Any information you can give along that line will be very greatly appreciated. Sincerely yours, L. E. S.

• • • •

DEAR L. E. S.: The best advice I can give you concerning this problem is to consult Mr. Charles H. Dexter, assistant executive director of the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals. The bureau, which is affiliated with the Council of Social Agencies, is located at Eighth and I streets northwest. The telephone number is MEtropolitan 3900. Mr. Dexter, with whom I have talked, says there are hospitals in Washington which render such service; that he will be glad to take this woman's case under advisement, and that some way will be found to supply her the service she needs.

M. H.

Letter for "Desperate."

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Your reply given last Wednesday to "Desperate" was an extraordinarily fine analysis of the situation and an excellent prescription for dealing with it. After having had a hostile mother-in-law in the house for the greater part of 22 years, I feel it may be helpful to "Desperate" to know that her problem is not unique, and that your suggestions are good. I am, therefore, inclosing for here a letter which I will ask you to look over and mail if you have her address and think it advisable. Sincerely, yours, E W.

• • • •

DEAR E. W.: Thank you very much for your intelligent, sympathetic and constructive interest in "Desperate's" case, as well as for your approval of my analysis and advice. I have taken the liberty of publishing the foregoing note in order to attract the attention of the woman who signed her plea, "Desperate." She gave no clue to her identity, and it will be necessary for her to furnish me with her address if she wishes to have your confidential letter forwarded. And for her benefit, I here say sincerely that it is a splendidly frank and helpful document, and I feel privileged to have been permitted to read it. I think it would be well indeed for "Desperate" to have it.

M. H.

Midnight Blue Dress Suits for Men Are Biggest Innovation in Decades

British Fashion Tailoring Gives Added Comfort

Dinner Jackets Are Leaning More to the Double-Breasted Style.

By Robert Fairchild
(Of Men's Wear Magazine).

MIDNIGHT blue for evening wear, the most important innovation in men's apparel for nearly a century, has a particular advantage aside from its absolute style authenticity. Under artificial light this rich shade looks blacker than black. Evening wear is traditionally black and white, because this combination preserves the austerity and brilliance of the military background out of which modern evening dress derives, but ordinary blacks tend to look grayish, or even brown, sometimes, under Edison-given light.

Midnight blue perpetuates the authentic tradition better than does black itself. Correct evening attire at Thanksgiving week-end parties, whether tailcoats or dinner jackets, will be in midnight blue. That is the most important style note in connection with evening wear.

But there are other changes, important ones, which definitely mark off the evening wear of autumn, 1935, from that of previous seasons. I summarize here a few examples:

Trousers, whether to accompany dinner jackets or tailcoats, should be high-waisted, with one or two pleats on either side in front. This British tailoring is not only in good style, but is more comfortable and makes the trousers hang better.

Tails of Tailcoats Longer.

Another point in this connection is that waistlines in tailcoats are higher, necessitating higher-rise trousers.

The tails of the tailcoat are longer, and tend toward a more pointed end, whereas in previous years tails were short and stubby. A good length is about 4 to 5 inches below the knee joint.

Generous width lapels are the correct thing—narrow lapels are out. The smart style of evening coat has a full chest effect. It is never skimpy or tight fitting.

Shirt bosoms and waistcoats are shorter. The shirt is narrower, and the waistcoat has a smaller opening. Waistcoat lapels are wider, too.

The best dressed men both here and abroad prefer the bold wing collar that is high in back, not the low, small wing collar. The white tie is liked in straight-end club bow style, generous size knots being preferred.

The tall silk or opera hat, which is an essential with the tailcoat, should be really tall. The crown is belled. Low, straight crowns are out of the mode.

Dinner Jacket Follows Style.

Most of the points I have given apply particularly to tailcoats, but dinner jackets follow the same trend—higher-waisted trousers, shorter shirt bosoms, bolder collar wings. The black tie of the dinner jacket (which is smarter if it is midnight blue) is also best with a rather generous width knot. The opera hat or the black or midnight blue homburg is correct headwear.

Dinner jackets, by the way, seem to be leaning more and more to the double-breasted side of the picture. Fred Astaire, in "Top Hat," favored a peaked-lapel double-breasted dinner jacket, and most well-dressed men do the same. Some of them, however, like the shawl-collar double-breasted, with shiny silk instead of the dull facings on the lapels.

Fine Points on Evening Dress

Left above—A bold wing collar and a generous size bow-tie are correct, not a small, low wing collar and a tiny short bow-tie. Right—The correct evening collar has considerable height at the back, never being so low as to expose the neck.

Left, above—The correctly made and fitted evening shirt has a tab at the bottom of the bosom to hold it properly in place flat against the chest, never being so long as to bulge. Right—The white waistcoat should never show beneath the fronts of the tailcoat. This is a common and egregious error.

Goiter May Appear Innocent, But It Will Bear Watching

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WHEN the glands of the body burst into flower, as it were, at the period of adolescence (the change from childhood to youth) the thyroid may fail to measure up to the demands made upon it and become a source of discomfort or even of actual ill health.

We have no accurate means of measuring the secretion produced by the gland as its products are poured directly into the blood. We do know, however, many of the constituents of this important fluid and, of these, iodine is regarded as indispensable. We ordinarily assume then that goiter is the result of iodine deficiency.

The thyroid gland forms an important link between the sexual system and the nervous system.

Those who have studied extensively enlargements of the thyroid gland believe that there is no such thing as an innocent goiter.

When it is certain that a goiter is not receding the time for treatment is before important symptoms such as heart damage manifest themselves.

Dinner Menus Given Variety By Wild Game

Quail, Venison, Opossums and Young Rabbits Make Tempting Dishes.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

THE TANG of frost in the air gives added zest to the use of game as food and a delightful variety to the menus. Contrary to usual belief, game is not reserved for the use of those with ample funds, but it can be obtained on even a modest budget, if its proper preparation is understood.

In Maryland and Virginia no dish is considered finer than wild duck. The gamy flavor is a real charm and to serve it properly it should be accompanied by wild rice and currant jelly.

Of course the partridge is found in most sections of this country and its flavor is delightful. In case of an unlimited supply, try broiled quail.

Recipe for Broiled Quail.

According to "Every Woman's Cook Book," this is the way to prepare them.

"Remove feathers without scalding birds; singe, wash, clean and draw carefully. Split down the back with a sharp knif, then force open flat. Season with salt and pepper. Place birds on wire broiler, either under a gas flame or over red hot coals, skin side down. When brown turn and cook on other side. Time required on each side about 12 to 15 minutes. Arrange birds on freshly toasted bread and pour melted butter over them. Serve on hot platter.

"If skin is removed from birds before broiling, be sure and brush them all over with melted butter before broiling."

Recipe for Venison.

Clean and lard saddle of venison. Sprinkle with salt and paprika and cover with several strips of bacon. Roast the same as lamb, allowing 12 to 15 minutes to the pound.

Now for the opossum recipe. First of all it must be skinned, entrails removed and then thoroughly cleaned. Then season with salt, pepper, cayenne and one tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce. Dredge with flour. Place in baking pan, add three cups of cold water or less if the oppossum is small. Bake in moderate oven two and a half to three hours, basting often until tender and brown.

Here is a good method to roast a young rabbit. Clean and keep the liver for soup. Prepare stuffing, two large boiled onions, ½ pound fresh breadcrumbs, 1 tablespoonful of dry sage put through a sieve, two ounces of butter. Chop up the onions, mix with the rest in a bowl. Season. Stuff the rabbit and close with a skewer. Truss it and put it in a shallow baking tin with four ounces of beef dripping spread on its back, and wrap it up in a greaseproof paper. Bake in a hot oven for one hour or more. Baste every ten minutes.

PUC to Hear Criticism of Transit Firm

Roberts Seeks to Force Free Transfer Plan on Companies.

Hearing on Protests Due at Commission After December 15.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday announced its purpose to investigate reports of unsatisfactory service afforded by the Capital Transit Co.

At the same time William A. Roberts, People's Counsel, announced he would seek to force adoption of a free transfer arrangement between buses and cars of that company and the buses of the Washington Rapid Transit Co.

Assumption by the Capital Transit Co. of the operation of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. was the alternative proposed by Roberts. Although there was no formal connection between the two announcements they admittedly were timed for publication together.

Determination to air the alleged deficiencies of the company service at a public hearing was based on reports of commission investigators and complaints which had been received from "individual riders, prospective riders, citizens' groups and the People's Counsel," the commission said.

Date for the public hearing will be fixed 10 days from now. The hearing probably will be held after the middle of December, it was said.

Roberts Critical.

Sharp criticism of service was voiced by Roberts. Citizens' groups have been "bitterly protesting the standards of service of the Capital Transit Co." for months, he said.

"It is my intention," he went on, "to supply specific evidence of unsatisfactory service with respect to schedules, over-loading equipment, sanitary condition of equipment, safety of equipment and convenient locating of stops and loading platforms and inadequate marking of routes.

"The great increase in riding has not been met by provision of new equipment and some of the new equipment is not adapted to the service in which it is placed.

"There are many questions of sharp discriminations in rates which should be considered and adjusted, and there remain inconveniences of transfer arrangement which will be brought to the attention of the commission.

Describes Plans.

"Among other things, the absence of transfer arrangement to the Washintgon Rapid Transit Co. will be presented to the commission and evidence to support a compulsory transfer arrangement or an assumption of the operation by the Capital Transit Co. will be made."

Blank forms are to be prepared and distributed to all citizens, and other civic associations desiring them, Roberts said. These will be used for the filing of specific complaints with the name of the complainant, details of the complaint and such other information as would serve as the basis for evidence in any court proceeding which might ensue, Roberts concluded.

First-hand investigation of Capital Transit service has been made by Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the commission, over a period of weeks. The company, it is said, has so poorly instructed its drivers they have had to appeal to passengers for route directions.

"If conditions are so bad at present time, what will they be when cold, rain and snow come?" asked one commission official. "Conditions threaten to become serious. Complaints cover all lines, cars and buses in all sections of the city."

Girl Shoots Pursuer Fleeing Holdup Scene

Miss Verdery Edwards, clerk of an ice cream store in the 1300 block of Eleventh street northwest, who was held up by a woman last night. She is shown reporting the robbery to Sergt. John E. Scott, of the Second Precinct. The woman shot a pursuer.

Fires on Crowd After Seizing $19 at 11th Street Store.

Armed with a nickel-plated revolver, a flashily dressed young colored woman robbed an ice cream store in the 1300 block of Eleventh street northwest late yesterday afternoon, then ran amuck as a crowd of passersby chased her, and wounded one of her pursuers in the arm.

The holdup occurred at the High Co.'s branch, into which the gun-girl sauntered, apparently to make a purchase. Miss Verdery Edwards, 25, of the 900 block of H street northwest, the clerk, was alone in the store.

"If you don't open the cash drawer I'll shoot," she warned.

At that moment a girl, Evelyn Gillette, 14, of the 1200 block of Twelfth street northwest, entered the store and bought a bottle of milk, while the robber hid her gun. In making the sale, Miss Edwards opened the cash drawer. As the child departed the young woman said:

"It's open now. Leave it open."

Scooping up $19 in cash from the drawer, the robber fled.

No sooner had she escaped than Miss Edwards rushed into the street, yelling. She commandeered a cab, while about 20 passersby, attracted by her cries, gave chase.

The robber fled down Eleventh street to N street and over N street to Twelfth, where she wheeled and started firing wildly.

In the confusion the robber escaped. Police scout cars, detectives and patrolmen on their beats were on the lookout for her last night.

Brough Speaks Tonight.

District Pleads For Increase In Lump Sum

U. S. Budget Aids Warned Taxes Must Be Raised to Meet Costs.

With the District facing a heavy tax increase and the prospect of falling behind in public improvement needs, the District Commissioners yesterday pleaded with the Federal Bureau of the Budget to approve the $8,317,000 Federal appropriation they ask in their 1937 annual estimates.

Without an increased Federal appropriation, the Commissioners told bureau officers, the District cannot hope to meet steadily growing operating expenses and pay for necessary improvements even with increased taxes.

They pointed out that since 1932 the Federal appropriation had been slashed from $9,500,000 to $5,700,000 for the current fiscal year. In addition, District revenues have been cut by $2,600,000 a year by reduction of the real property tax rate. Another $1,500,000 loss in revenue annually has been due to decrease in the value of taxable real estate. There has been a drop of approximately $100,000,000 in the assessed value of real estate in the last few years, they said.

Plea of the Commissioners closed the hearings on the estimates. It was the first time such a thing had been done.

Need for increasing the $1,700,000 estimate for relief next year, because Federal funds had been shut off, need for new apparatus to replace fire apparatus, needs of the Police Department and other items were called especially to the attention of the bureau officers.

ABC Board Studies Case.

The Alcohol Beverage Control Board yesterday took under advisement the case of Carl Berger, proprietor of the Tower Pharmacy, 1000 Fourteenth street northwest. The board proposed to revoke his license because of two arrests of persons on gambling charges in his store.

Mrs. Cugino May Clear Up Wilson Case

Widow of 'The Stinger' Questioned by Police on Murder Charge.

Pugh May Call Special Grand Jury Session in December.

Police yesterday questioned Mrs. Frances Cugino, 23-year-old widow of "Tony the Stinger" Cugino, to determine whether she can help them convict some of the suspects held in the murder of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route agent.

Cugino, who committed suicide in jail last September, has been named by one of the suspects as the "trigger man" in the killing.

Another man who took part in the murder plot, aimed at Edward (Mickey) McDonald, a local gambler, also is dead. He was Claude Bailey, who was shot while trying to escape from Lorton Reformatory.

Held as Witness.

But the police still have four men they believe had a hand in the death of Wilson, who was brought down when the gangsters mistook him for McDonald as he delivered a morning newspaper at the gambler's Takoma Park, Md., home October 19, 1934.

It was in the hope that Mrs. Cugino could help convict some of these men that the widow was arrested in New York two days ago.

The Federal warrant which Lieut. Floyd Truscott and Detective Sergt. Earl Hartman took to New York to arrest Mrs. Cugino charges her with conspiring with her husband to murder McDonald.

The officers emphasized, however, that she agreed to return voluntarily and that they did not have to serve the warrant. Consequently, it was assumed that her role in the case was to be that of a witness.

Two Overt Acts Charged.

Two overt acts are charged in the warrant—one that she received long-distance telephone calls from her husband in connection with the killing, the other that she concealed Tony after the crime.

Yesterday Mrs. Cugino was being held in the Police Women's Bureau. Lieut. Truscott, Sergt. Hartman and Lieut. Fowler, head of the so-called Wilson squad, talked to her, but declined later to say what they learned, if anything.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh, of Montgomery County, who is expected to prosecute the Wilson murder case—the murder happened just over the District line—said yesterday that he plans to talk with Mrs. Cugino.

He added that he may call a special session of the grand jury the first week in December.

Ickes' Auto Looted.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes lost a plush lap robe and a cushion to thieves who broke into his automobile while it was parked on Eighteenth street, near the Interior Department Building yesterday, his chauffeur, James L. Jones, 1525 Q street northwest, last night told police.

G. W. U. Students Set Up Own 'Little Congress' With 3 Parties

As students at George Washington University voted to set up a "union" to discuss stands on public issues. One voter is shown entering the booth where the voting machine was located. The apparatus on the left is used to demonstrate how to cast a vote on the machine.

Voting with machines on national issues took place in the District of Columbia yesterday for the first time in history.

It was an election conducted by students of George Washington University, voting to set up a George Washington Union to discuss stands on public issues in what would be virtually a "little Congress."

Nearly 1,000 cast ballots, pulling down levers of voting machines that many of them, as residents of the voteless District, had never seen the like of before.

They voted for party labels—Right, Center and Left—and when the results are tabulated tonight, after the second day's voting ends, party managers in caucus will name representatives to the union in the proportion to which their parties received votes.

Follow Oxford, Yale.

George Washington University is thus paralleling a student development that has precedents only at Oxford and Cambridge, in England, and Yale, in this country. It was the Oxford Union that conducted this year's nation-wide peace poll in England.

As long lines of students filed through the corridors of Corcoran and Stockton Halls and the Biological Sciences Building, the tall elections chairman, Charles Kiefer, outlined the party platforms.

"Briefly you could put it this way—that the Right stands for laissez faire, the Center for governmental regulation, and the Left for social ownership. And stress it that this is a vote on issues, not on personalities. There are no candidates running."

All over the clustered campus were election posters. On the green doors of Corcoran Hall, some one had placarded:

Just inside the hallway, the Center party had stuck up its cards: "A Vote for the Center is a Vote for Sane Progress and a Liberal Union. Put a 'Progressive' Label on G. W.—Not a 'Reactionary' One."

Only the Leftists didn't have any posters. They had first announced their resignation from the union on the ground of alleged faculty interference, but Kiefer explained last night that this had been a "misapprehension," that the party was being reorganized, that votes were being cast for it, and that it would be represented in the union.

The voting went on in booths protected by drawn curtains, with the voters merely pulling down a lever over the name of the party desired. The lever snaps back, and the vote is automatically and secretly tabulated.

The union will consist of 100 members, who will meet first on December 4, and every other Sunday from then on, to discuss the same problems as lie before the United States Congress. All students were eligible to vote.

7 Named to Represent D. C. at Harbors Parley

A committee of seven was named by the District Commissioners yesterday to represent the District at the forthcoming meeting of the National Rivers and Harbors Association in New Orleans.

Those named are John A. Remon, chairman of the rivers and harbors committee of the Board of Trade; John Small, Creed W. Fulton, E. W. Sapp, Kirby Smith, M. O. Leighton and R. A. Van Orsdell, sub-committee chairman.

Bank Appeals Order to Pay Damage Suit

American National Fights $27,500 Verdict Given Depositor Firm.

Introducing income tax returns of the George H. Price Co., attorneys representing the receiver for the Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co. yesterday sought to have set aside a verdict of $27,500 against the bank because of its alleged failure to honor a check of less than $2,000.

The bank's receiver filed an affidavit in which he charged the plaintiff had not accurately stated the firm's income. The true income, not available at the trial, showed a discrepency between what the firm claimed it made annually and what it reported as its income.

The Price Co., it was shown, had lost one of its most profitable accounts because of the dishonoring of the check. Justice Peyton Gordon took under advisement the question of a new trial, which at the same time he refused to permit attorneys for the receiver additional time within which to perfect their appeal.

Cary Hardee, receiver of the bank, contended the company did not have the earning power it claimed it had and which, he said, was the basis for the award by the jury.

Board to Buy Land for Use In New Parks

Tracts to Be Purchased Over City From $800,000 Fund.

Planning Body to Keep Negotiations Secret to Bar Speculation.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday approved plans to buy up land in small parcels in various sections of the city to expand park facilities.

While Thomas S. Settle, commission secretary, explained that, to avoid speculation, location of the sites could not be revealed, he indicated the areas were well scattered. The purchases are being made out of an $800,000 land acquisition program authorized by Congress.

At the same time, the commission's monthly meeting disclosed three other developments in the growth of the metropolitan area's park system.

1. Improvement of Theodore Roosevelt Island, in the Potomac, by Civilian Conservation Camp workers, is proceeding rapidly, with possible completion by mid-1936. An inspection visit showed brush and trash cleared away, a bridle path and hiking trail begun, and a setting apart of the old Mason House ruins to remain as a relic.

Parkway Speeded.

2. George Washington Memorial Parkway is being carried on from Arlington Memorial Bridge to Key Bridge, with a $25,000 appropriation from Virginia, $25,000 from Arlington County, and $350,000 from the Public Works Administration, as well as regular National Park Service funds. The work will include a bridge from Virginia to Columbia Island. The commission also has acquired land to carry the parkway from Key Bridge to Chain Bridge, and is seeking further financial aid from Virginia.

3. A plan to develop a number of small park areas in the District has been drawn up by C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, and will be submitted to the commission today. It involves $1,000,000 already allocated from PWA funds.

"We're moving along very nicely," Settle said.

A New Method of Trial and Error Proved Its Worth in Making New Marx Comedy

Troupe Toured In Comic Bits To Test Worth

Experiment Paid Its Way; About New Hayes Play; Amusement Chat.

By Nelson B. Bell.

It is not in any sense to reiterate surmise or repeat an idle speculation to reprint here and now certain things that were said in this space concerning the three Marx Brothers in "A Night at the Opera" in The Post of Monday, November 4.

For instance, the paragraph that said, in part "Quietly and without shouting, tumult or fanfare, the Marx Brothers slipped unobtrusively out of Hollywood as each comedy sequence was finished in script and 'tried it on the dog' in some remote and unsuspecting community to see whether or not an audience would laugh. If it did, the 'bit' went into the picture; if not, it went into the ash can."

Or those other few lines, a little further along in the piece, that said: "I doubt if there ever has been so skillful and so sustained an example of comedy construction as is revealed in 'A Night at the Opera.' At least four times during the development of this full length feature, humorous climaxes of imposing proportions are reached. Each is preceded by a logical 'build-up' that in itself compounds more than the average comedy's allotment of laughs."

First Eye-Witness Impressions.

Those statements were set down 24 hours after this writer had viewed the Marxian revels in the Century Theater, in Baltimore, as the guest of the Loew executives at ceremonies that even went so far as to include some very elegant banqueting. They still stand in memory as gross understatements.

There is a great deal to be said on the side of the unique plan pursued by the Marx Brothers, George S. Kaufman, Morrie Ryskin and the others concerned in the fabrication of this fabulous foolery in testing their laughs before they recorded them permanently in celluloid.

By taking the comic structure of their picture on tour as a road-show attraction, playing legitimate and vaudeville theaters, the sponsors of " A Night at the Opera" became the beneficiaries of an infallible series of audience reactions to situations that were intended to be funny.

Such of their comedy conceits as were found to be out of kilter with the cash customer's sense of the ludicrous were promptly scrapped. What survived, in the picturesque patois of show business, was "sure-fire."

That is what patrons of Loew's Fox Theater will enjoy, beginning this morning at 10:40, or some such hour, accuratey recorded in the "Film Time Tables," somewhere hereabouts.

Experiment Showed Profit.

There was another advantage to this unprecedented method of procedure.

The "road-show" not only paid its way, but returned enough of profit to strike off some of the production costs of the theater. Altogether, it was a swell idea.

The Mad Marxes, who aren't as mad as they might be, when you get right down to it, profess a definite intention to pursue the same course in the preparation of all their future screen comedies.

If they can all be made as funny as this one, it will be worth the trouble.

By this process of trial and error, in a manner of speaking, what is known to the trade as "comedy construction" becomes practically airtight. The elements of personal guess, speculation and sheer luck are automatically eliminated. The actor goes before the cameras and microphones knowing that what he is about to do is precisely what is needed in the instant circumstance.

That is about the equivalent of presenting a rich gold mine to a man in need of a dollar!

"Swing Your Lady," the current comedy at the National, which has a splendid basic idea for a roaring farce not too deeply obscured by its present circumlocutions, according to grapevine telegraph is to be taken off tomorrow night for revision of the script and, it is reported, recasting.

We have already unequivocally committed this column to the view that an altered treatment of the idea upon which "Swing Your Lady" purports to be founded will be an advantageous bit of plastic dramaturgy, but we cannot go along on the matter of recasting.

Try as we have, we cannot bring to mind from among the available contemporary players any to do better by the pivotal roles of this play than those already in them. Every mental substitution marks a recession from the farce's present highly effective casting.

If the present cast is to be torn down, the job might as well be made complete at the start by putting Helen Hayes and Ernest Truex in the roles of the lady blacksmith and the Greek wrestler!

"Victoria Regina."

Speaking—disrespectfully, as we were—of Helen Hayes, her new vehicle, "Victoria Regina," which Gilbert Miller will bring to the National Theater for the week of December 16, prior to its New York opening, encountered censor trouble at the time of its original London production.

Not that there is any laxity in the play based on the life of the Queen whose example made the word "Victorian" the synonym of prim propriety, but the public presentation of a play about reigning members of the English royal family, either past or present, is not permitted in Great Britain.

The result was that "Victoria Regina," which deals wholly with the reign and personal life of H. R. H. Victoria from the time of her accession until the close of her rule, 64 years later, was banned from the regular commercial theaters.

Price to Make Debut.

Laurence Housman, the author, succeeded, however, in having his play produced at the small Gate Theater, organized on a private subscription basis, thereby escaping the jurisdiction of the lord chamberlain, the British censor.

Vincent Price, who played the Prince Consort in the Gate Theater production, will come to this country to impersonate the same character in Miss Hayes' support. It will be his stage debut on this side of the Atlantic.

Incidentally, "Victoria Regina" will mark its star's third assumption of the role of a reigning sovereign. She played the role of the Egyptian Queen in George Bernard Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra" several years ago and, next prior to her new assignment, made her debut at the National in the title role of Maxwell Anderson's poetic drama of "Mary of Scotland," which subsequently served her a season in New York and a second on the road.

At the Cameo Theater in Mount Rainier, Md., tonight, Sidney B. Lust, foremost of the Capital's independent exhibitors, will inaugurate an innovation by presenting an amateur talent contest, in which contestants from the District and nearby Maryland will take part. The amateur aspirants for professional preferment will go on at 9 p. m. The customary awards will be made on a basis of audience applause. In consonance with the prevalent mania precipitated by Major Bowes, those of the Lust amateurs deemed worthy of the distinction will in all probability be accorded auditions by one of the major local radio stations.

After that, anything can happen—and usually does!

Tryouts Impend.

Tryouts will be held in the near future by the Players Club of Central Community Center for parts in several short plays planned for presentation in January under the direction of Lucy Ann Rogers.

The tests originally announced for next Tuesday night at Central have been postponed until Tuesday, December 3, at 7:30 o'clock, on account of the repeat performance of "The Poor Nut" scheduled for next Tuesday night at Roosevelt Auditorium at 8:30.

Resident actors and actresses who have no present dramatic affiliations are invited to become members of the Players Club at any Tuesday evening meeting at Central High School, Thirteenth and Clifton streets northwest.

Moroni Olsen, the ample gentleman cast in the role of Porthos in RKO-Radio's recent production of "The Three Musketeers"—and an imposing figure of a man he made—seems to have one of those ideal "breaks" that come only once in an acting lifetime in the forthcoming production of "Annie Oakley," in which Barbara Stanwyck is soon to be starred on the screen at RKO-Keith's.

Mr. Olsen is cast in the picturesque role of that handsomest of flamboyant showmen, Col. William F. Cody, known to every kid elderly enough to "play Indian" as Buffalo Bill. If this role doesn't make Mr. Olsen, he might just as well give up and devote his bulk to wrestling, or the moving of safes or pianos, or something.

To one who, man and boy, has cherished a vivid recollection of once having met Buffalo Bill, along with a lot of his milk-fed redskins, between shows out in Chicago, Mr. Olsen seems to do right nicely by the part in the short "Annie Oakley" trailer already on the screen.

Miss Stanwyck breaks a mean glass ball, too.

Should Be a Wang!

Paul Muni, one of America's outstanding character actors, whether on stage or screen, has won the most important assignment of his career in the theater in the role of Wang in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's proposed picturization of Pearl S. Buck's novel of "The Good Earth." The choice of Muni is said to be the outcome of several weeks of secret tests for the part.

As Wang, Muni is to play the role of the Chinese peasant whose love of the soil of his native China eventually brings him great wealth and participation in stirring events that mark practically the full course of human existence from famine to riches and youth to the senility of tottering old age.

This part, it will be recalled, was played by two sterling actors during the week's engagement of the Theater Guild's stage version of the story at the National several seasons ago—Earl Larimore, who opened in the role, opposite Mme. Alla Nazimova, and Claude Rains, who succeeded him later in the week.

Now on Screen.

Yes, the same Claude Rains who now is making a name for himself as one of the foremost of the cinema's serious mimes, as witness "The Invisible Man," "Crime Without Passion," "The Clairvoyant" and, more recently, "The Last Outpost."

The screen version of "The Good Earth" will be directed by Victor Fleming. The filmization, which has been in contemplation for a matter of some two years or more, will entail the use of several thousand Chinese in climacteric scenes and demand elaborate location sequences showing intimate aspects of all strata of life in China.

If anything should happen to Muni, it would be my guess that Edward G. Robinson might reasonably be expected to get the part.

Hector Henri Mallot's famous novel, "Sans Famille," familiar to most French students, has been effectively translated to the screen and will be presented in the Foreign Language Cinema series in Pierce Hall tomorrow night at 8.

Hope-Dashed-to-Earth Note.

Those nutty Marxes and their Loew proxies—and you may spell it any way you like—didn't come through with those coconnuts glace!

Probably they will attempt to set up the claim that that was another show!

Scores in First Stellar Film

Clean Out 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

Nature put over 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters in your kidneys to strain the waste matter out of the blood. Kidneys should pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.

When the passing of water is scanty, with smarting and burning, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your body may take up some of these poisons causing serious trouble. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the kidneys to flush out 15 miles of kidney tubes. Insist on Doan's Pills.

HOLLYWOOD FLASH! EXTRA! PREVIEW OF "A NIGHT AT THE OPERA" MARX BROTHERS COMEDY MAKES FILM HISTORY

"Night at the Opera" a hit; Marxes hilariously funny. Production and music rate extra high. The Marxian recipe for a crackelfest with song rings the bell again with topnotch punch features. The opus is high-marked also by Allan Jones who sings operatic numbers from "Il Trovatore", two dandy ballads, and "Alone" by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed, with his singing team-mate, Kitty Carlisle. In the supporting cast there isn't a weak spot. Miss Carlisle is all that one could ask. Walter King himself is a real tenor. The Marx Brothers will certainly build themselves into great favor as a result of this fine offering. —Hollywood Reporter

Great swells of laughter! Gusts of giggles at Marx Brothers roll through this musical farce. Among the big moments audiences will repeat around the fireside are scenes in a two-by-four cabin bulging with almost half of the passenger list before a gag ends a maniacal duel of Harpo and a moth; a rip-roaring finale at an opera performance with Groucho pursuing a rich widow all over the house, and Harpo going Tarzan trapezing in the flies as the backdrops change behind baffled singers. —Motion Picture Daily

A merry box-office number. Big laugh riot. A laugh fest with all types of audiences. George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind have supplied the comedians with excellent material. Of course, the biggest riot of laughs is in the final sequence, with the Marxes wrecking the opera. Chico and Harpo play baseball in the orchestra pit! —The Film Daily

Musical farce has been brilliantly adapted to the Marx Brothers as their best offering in "A Night at the Opera". It gives the comic trio plenty leeway for their distinctive cavortings, topping in wild climax at the opera where the patrons of romance snatch the menacing tenor off the stage to give Allan Jones and Miss Carlisle their chance at fame. Finale is a pip. —Daily Variety

Here is a riot of laughter. In addition to the Marx Brothers, the supporting cast is sure to win applause from any audience. The tempo is fast and furious with plenty of new gags and clever wise cracks all the way through. This young singer, Allan Jones, is the hit of the show, with his fine singing and pleasing personality. —Showmen's Trade Review

Pictures From Three Studios Comprise List

Films Range From Comedy With Music to Chills With Sabatini!

With the presentation of "So Red the Rose," starting Friday, November 29, Warner Brothers Earle Theater will inaugurate its "Pre-Holiday Show Parade," a six-week season of outstanding attractions on screen and stage.

Attractions from Warner Brothers, First National and Paramount are included in the last of features announced late yesterday by John J. Payette, general zone manager for Warner Brothers.

On the stage, Benny Davis will present his new "Star-Dust Revue," 20 entertainers discovered by the man who first introduced such present favorites as Ruby Keeler, Eleanor Powell, Hal LeRoy, Vilma and Buddy Ebsen and scores more.

Kay Francis' Best.

Kay Francis heads the cast in the second production, "I Found Stella Parish," which has been hailed as her best picture in many months. Ian Hunter and Sybil Jason are featured in support of the popular star.

On the stage with this attraction will be Ted Weems and his recording orchestra, a musical organization which is brought back for a repeat engagement as the result of a surprising number of bona fide requests.

One other Paramount Picture and three other Warner releases are listed by Mr. Payette for the other weeks of the season.

The Paramount production, entitled "Collegiate," features such capable comedians as Jack Oakie, Joe Penner and Ned Sparks in a mirth-provoking story of life at a young lady's finishing school. Frances Langford and Betty Grable are among others in the cast.

Another Gay Comedy.

Another comedy in the gay series featuring Joan Blondell, Hugh Herbert and Glenda Farrell—"Miss Pacific Fleet"—is included in the December listing. Humor and romance are said to be blended in this film, with Mr. Herbert finding bountiful opportunities for his famous funmaking.

One of Warner Brothers' most important productions of the 1935-36 season rounds out the list.

This is "Captain Blood," the Rafael Sabatini story of pirates on the Spanish Main, with Errol Flynn making his bid for film fame in the title role and lovely Olivia de Havilland cast opposite him. Guy Kibbee, Ross Alexander, Basil Rathbone and hundreds of others also appear in this exciting story of adventure and romance.

Additional stage attractions, soon to be announced, will add further attractiveness to this highly interesting group of pre-holiday shows.

Local Dancer in Broadway Hit

This smiling young siren, holding the cigarette merely for a suggestion of added insouciance, since the pesky thing seems not to be lighted, is Marjorie Mitchell, the Washington dancer who will return to her home town in comparative triumph when Vinton Freedley's production of "Anything Goes" arrives in the National Theater for a week's engagement, beginning Monday, December 2. In this musical hit, which will have rounded out a full year on Broadway, the costars are the crisp William Gaxton and the droll Victor Moore.

'Eastern Parade'

"THE EASTERN PARADE." The Eastern High School Dramatic Club, assisted by associated organizations, presents its annual fall show in two acts, produced under the general direction of Pauline Knee, assisted by faculty and student committees. Orchestra under the direction of Paul DeLong Gable. At the Eastern High School auditorium, November 21 and 22. Reviewed Thursday evening by W. A. Whitney.

In two spectacular settings, with a great variety of song and dance numbers, the Eastern High School Dramatic Club presented "The Eastern Parade," its 1935 fall show, augmenting its own talent with that from other organizations and from the student body at large.

With little effort at continuity, other than to present a reasonable excuse for staging the two revue acts in Radio City, "The Eastern Parade" offers an unusually good array of talent.

Enthusiastically received by an SRO audience, more than 35 solo and group selections were paraded. In the brief opening scene, to the tune of "Hello, Hello, Hello," composed for the occasion by Paul DeLong Gable, who also led the orchestra, it was explained that a group of Easternites was to give Radio City the double-o.

A Broadcast Tour.

The first part of that tour was "Amateur Broadcast," the second "Roof Garden," in both of which the same diversified demonstration of talent was made. Good singing and dancing, punctuated with moments of humor, marked the progress of the revue, a production excellently staged and performed.

CAROLE LOMBARD, in "Hands Across the Table," in the rain sequence, comes out of the subway and is delighted to discover Fred MacMurray in a taxicab waiting for her. Miss Lombard, in her characteristic fashion, skips into the taxi. Soon she asks MacMurray where his overcoat is and he replies that he pawned it to buy food. And he points to the packages on the floor of the taxi, which are stacked to resemble a grocery shelf. Isidore Rauoff wants to know how Miss Lombard managed not to see the packages and how she succeeded in getting into the taxi without tripping over them. Carole Lombard is good at tricks.

In Joan Crawford's flicker, "I Live My Life," writes Dorothy Dres, she is seen in a restaurant in Greece, eating spaghetti with white kid gloves on. Is that the style or a flicker flaw?

Hugh O'Connell and ZaSu Pitts are at a hamburger stand in "The Affairs of Susan" and Miss Pitts is holding a box in her lap, says Ben Clark. When she gets up and walks away from the stand, Miss Pitts hasn't the box with her. However, insists Emmet O'Connell, in the following scene Hugh and ZaSu continue that walk and now Miss Pitts has the box under her arm.

In "Top Hat," Fred Astaire sings that ditty. He sings "I Just Got an Invitation Through the Mail" and, claims E. Summergrade as he says this, Astaire holds a telegram in his hand.

JOAN BLONDELL leaps from a motor boat in "We're in the Money" and Heaton Vorse wants to comment on the rapid changes of weather which occur during the water sequence. When Miss Blondell jumps, the sea is choppy. When the rescuers leap into the sea for her it is very calm. When they finally drag Miss Blondell to the gang plank of the yacht the sea is again choppy. Later, Joan is again tossed into the same sea—it gets to be a game—and there is hardly a ripple in the water. Anyway, the sea gives a varied performance.

The three gangsters are escaping from the police in "King Solomon of Broadway." They rush out of the house to the garage where their car is parked and the next scene, says Pearl Friedlander, shows them racing away from the house, but they have acquired a fourth man—a driver. There has been no hint of him previously in the flicker. It might have been that they needed a fourth for bridge.

O'Hara Buys Benning Option, Plans $2,000,000 Track Here

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

IN THE lexicons of the professional bookmakers and betting commissioners, there is no such item as an even-money bet. Only among the folks who make friendly and casual wagers between themselves, sans the bookmakers' commission, is a bet made on an even-money basis. Even on the flip of a coin, recognized as the No. 1 even-money proposition, if the coin is not a phoney, it is impossible to lay a wager with the bookmaking gentry on that basis. They want odds or—no bet.

POVICH.

Thus, when this department in a moment of curiosity bethought itself to request of Ryan & Co. of Wall Street, New York's most prominent firm of betting commissioners, the current odds on tomorrow's Georgetown-Maryland game at Griffith Stadium, I was informed tersely: "3 to 2 and pick 'em." Translated from betting parlance into a semblance of the King's English, Ryan & Co.'s message meant: "We will take odds of 3 to 2 against either team you chose to bet on."

"Three to two and pick 'em" means, plainly, that it is an even-money proposition, but that the betting commissioners demand the odds for the privilege of allowing the better to choose his team. Obviously there would be no percentage for a bookie or a commission firm to accept wagers on an even-money basis. There is the overhead to be met and the bookies operate from the vantage point of the other party making the overtures. But in recent years it has been the habit of the betting commissioners to inflate their percentage to the point where the better gets far the worst of the odds.

Time was when the bookies were content to offer odds of "6 to 5 and pick 'em" on even money bets and thus the better was getting only 16 percentage points the worst of the odds. In later years even-money bets drew no better offers than "5 to 4 and pick 'em," which meant that the better was taking a licking of 20 prcentage points on a wager that shaped up as an even-money proposition. But this season, particularly on football bets, the odds have been reduced to 2 to 3 on what is, admittedly, an even-money gamble, which means that the better is conceding 33 percentage points in the odds taken.

WHEN you hear odds of 7 to 5 quoted by the professional bookies against a team in the World Series, or against a fighter in a championship bout, that's only the half of it. You can't get a bet down on either contender at those figures. To provide for their own percentages, the bookies operate from a double set of odds. Thus, the fact that they were laying 2 to 1 against Max Baer in the recent Louis fight did not mean that they would lay 1 to 2 against Louis. No, indeedy, if you wanted to get down on Louis, why, it was at a price such as 2 to 5.

Thus it was in the last World Series between the Tigers and the Cubs. The Tigers were quoted, you remember, as 7-to-5 favorites. That meant only that the bookies would lay 7 to 5 against the Cubs. If you wanted to bet with the bookies on the Tigers you had to lay not 7 to 5 but 8 to 5, or, more probably, 9 to 5. It is the old bookies' percentage, calculated to let them balance their books, lay off the proper amounts and then sit back and watch the ball game in the comfort of the knowledge that they could not lose, even if their percentage was comparatively small.

I have seen the small-time betters in the Washington ball park hedge on [illegible] wagers with such shrewdness that they stood to win, no mat- [illegible] m won or lost. I have seen a local gambler take $100 to $70 [illegible] against New York and then, after Washington had taken [illegible] first inning, negotiate another bet in which he took [illegible] York against Washington after odds had shifted, of [illegible] ack and watched the ball game, $30 winner no [illegible]

[illegible] ake advantage from such a switch in the [illegible] ing the short end at the start, and be for- [illegible] is change. But any professional better is [illegible] is wager into a sure thing at small profit [illegible] on a gamble, no matter what the odds.

[illegible] Short—

[illegible] escribe a 4-to-5 shot as "the public" [illegible], as likely as not it is not the driblets from the pockets [illegible] majority that have made a horse the favorite in the mutuels, [illegible] great gobs of dough wagered by the stable connections or the [illegible] money . . . and despite reports that Jimmy Braddock was a 10-[illegible] shot against Max Baer, no bookmaker ever laid more than 5 to 1 against Braddock, according to Jack Doyle, Broadway betting commissioner . . . who said that if as much as $600 had showed for Braddock, his odds would have been driven down to 3 to 1 . . . 10-to-1 bets were probably made, but only among friendly betters . . . This department's advice to Georgetown-Maryland betters: Bet on the team against which you can get any odds or as much as two points . . . at New Orleans a few years ago, the mutuel betting was so small that it required only $1,000 poured into the machines by the Capone gang on other horses to raise the odds on their even-money sure thing to 5 to 1 . . . the figures at which they collected from bets scattered among the bookies throughout the country . . . While the public prefers mutuels, the horsemen prefer bookmakers' odds because they can get bets down before the bookies revise their figures when a wad of money begins to show for a certain horse.

Dartmouth Increases in Favor As Princeton Meeting Nears

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Odds were hammered down tonight to 7½ to 5 favoring Princeton over Dartmouth for their perfect-record collision Saturday in the most significant game of the Eastern football season.

Increasing support for Red Blaik's Hanover Indians indicated that Dartmouth may take the field at Palmer Stadium only a 6½-to-5 underdog, according to Ryan & Co., Wall Street commissioners. Previously the Tigers were favored at 9 to 5.

This Princeton engagement is rated the second biggest betting game of the season, bowing only to the Notre Dame-Ohio State brawl in the amount of money planked down. A complete sellout of more than 58,000 seats was assured today. Nassau officials expect the biggest crowd in Princeton history.

Rose Bowl After All.

An important factor in this increased Dartmouth support was the unexpected revelation that Blaik's young men, after all, may be Rose Bowl candidates. During the past few weeks semiofficial reports trickling out of Hanover had Dartmouth ready to refuse a Pasadena invitation, even if the Indians completed their season undefeated. Hence, virtually all writers and fans dropped the Green team from the list of Eastern candidates.

But this week the situation was clarified by official explanations that Dartmouth's athletic council of nine members will decide the acceptance question if and when a Rose Bowl invitation is received. A large portion of the Hanover alumni and a majority of the council members are understood to favor the California trip. Prospects of such a journey furnish additional incentive for a Dartmouth victory.

Other factors boosting the Hanover stock were these: (1) Realization that Coach Blaik has uncovered virtually no double wing-back plays, thus far, and he is reputed one of the masters of double-flanker strategy. (2) Realization that the Indians have an excellent line, possibly superior to Princeton's. (3) Realization that Dartmouth's offensive play approaches perfection in its co-ordination and precision of execution. (4) Realization that the Hanover lads are strong on defense—particularly against an air attack, as was demonstrated so magnificently against Yale.

Sharkey Says 60% Of Old Skill Is His

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Nov. 21.—Jack Sharkey weighed 195 pounds and claimed to possess 60 per cent of his great boxing skill today when he completed training for his comeback campagin. He hopes for victories over Joe Louis and Jimmy Braddock, the current heavyweight champion.

Sharkey, in light training ever since he dropped his title to Primo Carnera more than two years ago, when he weighed 209, engages Eddie "Unknown" Winston, a busy and fairly consistent Negro battler from Hartford, Conn., tomorrow night in a 10-rounder at the Boston Garden.

New Offense Is Ready at Maryland

Team to Use Brand-New Attack in Contest With Hoyas.

Willis, Gormley Return to Give Squad Its Full Strength.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A PICKED squad of Maryland gridmen defeated an aggregation of Georgetowners last night in a spelling bee, and the tone of conversation following the titanic struggle indicated that the Terps are ready to repeat tomorrow on the gridiron of Griffith Stadium. But to Georgetown the radio spelling test was just so many words and the casual observer gathered that they will leave all the talking tomorrow to Maryland, while it occupies itself with making touchdowns.

Maryland's last strenuous practice yesterday was enough to satisfy the critics that it will have something more than a strong spelling team to pit against the Hoyas. Vic Willis and Johnny Gormley were back in uniform yesterday after several days in the infirmary where they were confined with an attack of grip, and the Old Line squad now is at full strength and in topnotch condition.

Maryland is going to show Georgetown an old team, comprised almost wholly of two-letter men, and a multitude of new plays. They have stuff that makes Thurston and his contemporaries look like rank amateurs, and unlike most teams dabbling in black magic, the boys use it deftly.

Not Like Old Team.

Coaches Frank Dobson and Jack Faber have devoted all of the week to perfecting the attack and it is safe to say that Maryland is going to look unlike the Maryland of previous games. Not that the old, reliable plays have been abandoned, but so much new football shrapnel will be used it may be quite a shock to the old guard.

Maryland intends to make good use of its sophomore backs tomorrow and the coaches have been working diligently with Waverly Wheeler, Bill Bryant and others to have them properly groomed for duty. But the real brunt of the burden will fall on the tried campaigners, Guckeyson, Headley, Ellinger, Stonebraker and the rest. There probably will be plentiful substituting in the backfield, but the coaches hope to stop Georgetown's running game with the first string line.

Lines Seem Equal.

They figure, and rightly so, that Maryland's line is as good as the Hoyas' from tackle to tackle, while Vic Willis, Lou Ennis and Blair Smith give them a slight advantage at ends. The trio does everything expected of an end, covering punts, receiving passes, breaking up plays, well enough to satisfy the most particular coach.

Georgetown, with Noonan, Snyder, Cavadine and Barabas, naturally thinks it is better protected at the flanks, but none of these lads can match the Terps in experience, and experience is going to count heavily tomorrow.

Callahan and Stalfort are tackles who know their business and act accordingly, while in Minion and Wolfe Maryland has a pair of guards who rank with the best. Young Frank DeArmey needs experience at center, but he has done well since assuming Bill Andorka's post and will be a worthy opponent for Georgetown's spectacular Red Hardy.

Both teams will conclude preparations for the game this afternoon with even lighter workouts than they had before. Both apparently have taken the game nonchalantly, but below the surface smolders an intense rivalry and when it bursts into flame from the heat of actual combat tomorrow, the fans will see two smart teams, well drilled for the occasion.

Hickey Retired As Head of Association

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, Ohio, Nov. 21.—Thomas Jefferson Hickey, "grand old man" of the American Association which he founded in 1902, surrendered today the presidency of that organization.

His action was voluntary as six of the clubs voted to retain him.

The 74-year-old prexy accepted an offer of a life-time job as chairman of association's board of directors—a new position created for the sole purpose of submitting it to Hickey.

New Head in December.

A new president will be named at the December 10 meeting in Chicago. There are a host of candidates for the job, but the most favored ones are Lou McEvoy, business manager of the St. Louis Browns; Judge Ed Norris, of Toledo; Francis J. Powers, Chicago sports writer; Ed Shave, St. Paul newspaperman, and Billy Evans, former general manager of the Cleveland Indians.

Evans was offered the job, but demanded a five year contract at $15,000 per year, at which the league officials shook their heads. Hickey has drawn but $7,500 the last few years and the loop moguls refused to consider doubling the salary.

"McEvoy can have the job if he wants it," said several of the association club owners. Rumor had it, however, that the American League will create a position of some kind within the next two weeks and offer it to the Browns' official.

President George M. Trautman of Columbus Club presided at the meeting at which Hickey surrendered the reins. An informal announcement said Hickey's salary would be $200 a month.

Hickey, as a floor walker in a Chicago department store, organized the American Association 33 years ago and piloted it to one of the strongest baseball organizations in the country. He served as president in 1902 and 1903. Ed Grillo, of Cincinnati, became president in 1904 and Joe O'Brien, of Toledo, served for the next three years.

Tom Chivington, of Louisville, was president 1908 to 1915, but Hickey was recalled to the league leadership in 1916 and retained it until today.

Red Sox Get Two Stars, Yanks Buy Infielder, Is Reliable Report.

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, Ohio, Nov. 21.—A whirlpool of rumors made every one dizzy at the minor league convention today, but it was learned from reliable sources that:

1. The Philadelphia Athletics had sold Shortstop Eric McNair and Outfielder Roger Cramer to the Boston Red Sox, and Third Baseman Pinky Higgins to the New York Yankees.

2. Bob Quinn had agreed definitely to serve as general manager of the Boston Braves, which team will be reorganized within the next few days, on a basis that will surprise everyone.

3. Outfielder Al Simmons, of the Chicago White Sox, will play for Detroit next year if Mickey Cochrane can sell him to Walter O. Briggs, now sole owner of the world's champions.

4. Jimmy Foxx, star home run hitter of the Athletics, may remain in Philadelphia after all, still acting as the backbone of the club. Offsetting that information was a persistent report Foxx would go to the White Sox.

Reports Believed True.

These reports were received from men who have never been known to start a false rumor, men whose word is recognized as good as a cashier's check, but whose names cannot be mentioned without violation of confidence.

The "inside" of the big deals involving several of the outstanding stars of the American League was that Connie Mack at first meant to sell Cramer, McNair and Foxx to the Red Sox, but that other clubs made offers and insisted that such a deal would give too much strength to Boston.

After a number of huddles, it was learned from an impeccable source, Connie Mack agreed, and made the deals.

Simmons in Trouble.

Simmons angered the White Sox a week ago when he ripped up a new contract that was offered to him. He drew $25,000 last season and the White Sox offered him but $12,500 for 1936.

He ripped it up and uttered a

Magic Putter Gone, Bridge Expert Sad

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 21.—An aura of gloom tonight surrounded the ordinarily cheerful features of P. Hal Sims, who, when not competing at contract bridge, turns in impossible and prodigious performances at golf with an ancient putter.

The reason: Someone "accidentally grabbed" his lucky putting iron with the rest of the golf sticks from a parked automobile. In a newspaper advertisement Sims said the present holder of his sticks was welcome to everything but the greens iron.

"I will pay five times the price for the return of my favorite putter (original cost $5) and no questions asked," he offered.

California-Stanford Expected To Draw $300,000 Tomorrow

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21.—Football will open 90,000 pocketbooks Saturday to lose more than $1,000,000 in a spending flood surging around the California-Stanford game.

The annual gridiron joust between these collegiate rivals of 43 years becomes the "big game" in fact as well as fancy. For the first time since 1931 the huge Stanford Stadium is expected to be crowded. The bowl actually seats a few over 89,600. Two thousand ushers, attendants and others will nudge into standing room or blot out the aisles.

From this gathering the two universities will collect and split something over $300,000, and within a radius of 50 miles business people are trained and ready for a lively session on the financial gridiron where an estimated $1,000,000 will roam that day for the tackling.

The innkeepers, night club proprietors and all the others who deal in the intangible commodity known as "whoopee" are interested in the game—but not so much the outcome.

It is a case of how long and how loud will melodies of cash ring from the registers, not whether California will remain undefeated and go to the Rose Bowl or Stanford, by winning, make a deadlock of the Pacific Coast Conference championship and possibly take up the touchdown cudgels New Year's Day at Pasadena for the third straight time.

To account for the approximate $1,300,000 that will change hands on the week-end of the biggest game of the regular Far Western schedule, this region is prepared to accommodate the largest influx of persons in four years.

Scalpers look dumb when offered less than $50 apiece for tickets on the 40-yard line.

College Unit Strikes Out At Evils

Hit Athletes' 'Soft Jobs;' Ask Players' Incomes Be Made Public.

RIGID control of financial aid to college athletes was advocated yesterday by the Association of State Universities at the opening session of its annual conclave being held this year in Washington.

Striking at the subsidization of skilled athletes, the association adopted an 11-point program, the handiwork of Frank P. Graham, president of the body and also president of the University of North Carolina, and pledged itself to work for its adoption by all athletic conferences.

The regulations, as pointed out by A. H. Upham, Miami University (Ohio) and secretary of the association, are not submitted as a code, but merely as suggested supplements to existing codes. The program will be placed before every conference of the Nation, as all States are represented at the meeting.

Pay Publicity.

Chief among the practices to come under the association's fire was that of paying athletes for sinecures. To combat this it adopted a measure requiring that a list of any and all awards, that is, employment positions, when made shall be published with amounts and rates of pay, in the student newspaper and daily press. Also that the rate of pay for any college job open to an athlete shall be at the regular rate paid other students for the same work.

To further curb the evil of subsidization it passed a resolution calling on faculty committees to obtain from each athlete in advance of competition a detailed statement in writing of the amounts of his financial earnings and income received during the college year, and the source of earnings.

Following are the 7 prime points among the 11 outlined last night for the government of eligibility standards:

1. Any student who, because he is an athlete or prospective athlete, receives preferential consideration in the matter of tuition, fees, room, board, clothes, books, job, etc., is ineligible to represent the institution in an intercollegiate contest.

2. The rate of pay for any college job open to an athlete shall be at the regular rate paid other students for the same work. A list of any and all awards, when made, shall be published, with amounts and rates of pay, in the student newspaper and daily press.

3. The faculty committee on eligibility shall in advance of competition require of each athlete a detailed statement in writing of the amounts of his financial earnings and income received during the college year, and their source.

4. Members of the athletic staff or department of physical education shall not, by the initiation of correspondence or by personal interviews, on their own initiative seek to recruit athletes or prospective athletes, nor shall they have anything to do with the award of any scholarship, loan or job.

5. No member of the athletic staff shall receive for his services or for any athletic purpose any money or other consideration except through the college authorities.

6. Every candidate for an athletic team must declare orally to the committe and in writing, upon his honor, his eligibility or ineligibility under each separate regulation.

7. No post-season intercollegiate athletic contest shall be permitted.

Bad Duck Shooting Laid To 'Blue Bird Weather'

Baltimore, Nov. 21 (AP).—"Blue bird weather," warm, mild and windless, was blamed today by State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte for the poor luck reported by Maryland duck hunters.

LeCompte explained that in good weather the ducks stay on the water all day "and laugh at the hunters," doing their feeding at night. He prophesied that the kill this year would be even less than the toll of 30,000 ducks reported last season.

Millionaire Track Man Here With Architect to Further Plans.

Benning Races Ended in 1908; Course Still in Good Condition.

By Walter Haight.

A $2,000,000 racing plant will be built on the site of the old Benning track by Walter O'Hara, New England millionaire and president of the Narragansett Park race track, if the next Congress legalizes racing in the District, it was learned yesterday. O'Hara has obtained an option on the Northeast property and has a staff of architects ready to make the plans for a modren turf establishment.

The option will allow O'Hara to purchase the property within 90 days after the adjournment of the session of Congress which convenes next January. The deal was closed through the Eastland Properties, Inc., and the terms of the possible purchase price have been withheld.

O'Hara, who makes Washington his headquarters while his horses are running at Maryland tracks, is confident that racing will be legalized here at the next session of Congress, and it is understood he outbid several other interests seeking to gain control of the one-time turf center of the Capital.

Benning last was the scene of racing in 1908 when reformers were successful in ending the sport in the District. The track has remained a horse training ground, however, and the oval is in excellent condition. O'Hara plans to build a spacious grandstand, clubhouse and paddock.

LeVan Returns To Princeton Backfield

Squad Cheerful as Last Drill for Dartmouth Is Completed.

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 21.—The good news that Gary LeVan would be at a starting backfield post against the Indians of Dartmouth Saturday was bruited about the Princeton campus today as the team drilled on fundamentals and individual assignments for the big game. The squad was in high spirits.

New Haven, Conn.—A dummy scrimmage was the order of the day for Yale, heading for its traditional battle with Harvard. The scrimmage was short but spirited. The team will leave early tomorrow for Cambridge, where it will run on to the Harvard Stadium to hold its last workout on the scene of the big fray.

Cambridge, Mass. — Harvard's starting backfield in the Yale game was still a matter of mystery as Dick Harlow released his charges in the darkness, after a long workout. The Crimson worked out behind locked gates again today, but the news leaked out that passing defense was stressed. The Eli's running attack was demonstrated by the scrubs.

Hanover, N. H.—The Dartmouth Indians entrained for Princeton, N. J., tonight with a varsity team that comprised ten men who had a taste of Princeton power last year, when the Tiger won, 38 to 13. The student body rent the air with stirring battle cries as the team pulled out, after a signal drill in which all of the party of 34 had participated.

Klick, Roth Even.

New York, Nov. 21 (U.P.).—Frankie Klick, of San Francisco, and Al Roth, of New York, are expected to climb into Madison Square Garden ring tomorrow at even money for their ten-round lightweight battle.

Jockey Wright Suspended for Meeting for Fouling at Bowie

Idaho Youth Leads U.S. Riders

Horse Disqualified for Bumping Chatmoss as Roustabout Wins.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

BOWIE RACE TRACK, Nov. 21. Wayne Wright, the little Idaho boy who is leading the Nation's jockeys for 1935, was suspended for the remainder of the Bowie season today for fouling in the stretch. The official ruling of the stewards read, "For carrying out and repeatedly bumping Chatmoss in the stretch." Wright's mount, Weston, which finished second in the race, was disqualified and Chatmoss, the favorite, was moved into second position behind the winner, Roustabout, a C. V. Whitney representative. Ashen, which finished fourth, was awarded third money.

Wright had set the pace on Weston, with Chatmoss moving up to challenge on the outside. Nearing the turn for the stretch, the two horses came on almost even terms but Weston swng wide and bumped Chatmoss toward the fence. From that point to the wire, Johnny Gilbert, Chatmoss' rider, and Wright appeared to lose all interest in winning and the two horses bumped intermittently through the last furlong.

Roustabout Is Winner.

Roustabout, an early trailer, went through on the rail when his rivals swung wide and, with Alfred Robertson riding straight and clear, had no trouble taking the purse. Gilbert and Wright were called before the stewards and, after being questioned, the ruling was announced.

The suspension was a serious blow to Wright's ambition to win the 1935 jockey championship. He has 182 winners to 170 for Joe Wagner and Charley Stevenson. Wright may have to remain "grounded" until the opening of Tropical Park, in Florida, next month.

Roustabout paid a $9.20 mutuel.

The scheduled feature race, the Bladen Handicap, was won by Tweedledee, owned by Mrs. M. Dupont Somerville. The winner is trained by Selby Burch and, as usual, his brother, Preston, had a much-beaten horse in the race in Commonwealth. Tweedledee paid $8.30.

Bread King and Miss Jones teamed to produce a mutuel of $67.30 in the daily double.

Bread King, with Dunbar in the saddle, won by a length in the first race. The son of Wisdom was a favorite at a $6.30 mutuel and took command at the head of the stretch. James Boy, a distant trailer for 3 furlongs, went to the outside entering the stretch and came with a belated rush to take second money from Grace Bunting.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BREAD KING, $6.20, $3.60, $2.90; JAMES BOY (field), $9.80, $5.30; GRACE BUNTING, $6.40.

BREAD KING, going strongly from the beginning, overtook POSTPONEMENT after losing command momentarily at the turn, sprinted clear when straightened into the home stretch, but had to be kept under strong urging to withstand JAMES BOY. Latter, a distant trailer in the early racing, circled his field and finished with a tremendous rush after closing big gap. GRACE BUNTING went forwardly and held on with good energy for the final drive. AGA RAY was strongly ridden every step of the trip and fought it out willingly. INSCRIPTION went evenly. WATERSET could not threaten seriously. CHANCE DAME could not menace. CURLING broke slow, as did MAD EAGLE. CLUB HOUSE wheeled after breaking with his field.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 1:43. Off at 1:46½. Winner, M. Pembroke's blk. c. (2), by Brooms—Glen Sprite. TIEMPO outrun her field to the first turn, set the early pace under slight restraint, met repeated efforts from WISE ADVOCATE and came out slowly at the end. WISE ADVOCATE, prominent from the beginning, challenged strongly in the last five-sixteenths, but hung approaching the finish. APATHY saved a lot of ground from the start and continued strongly after racing in the thick of contention. HAPPY FLAG, very slow to settle in her stride, bettered her position on the outside and finished strong. FLOWERY LADY weakened after making a determined effort at the final turn. HOME WORK could not threaten at any stage. FURLED FLAG raced poorly.

lot of words that got back to his bosses via the grapevine rout. Manager Jimmy Dykes admitted all this and freely predicted that Simmons would be playing for the Tigers next year.

Dykes denied reports the White Sox had asked as much as $100,000 for the "Milwaukee duke," who hasn't had a very happy three years in Chicago. Cochrane praised Simmons, predicted he would make a great comeback, and then departed for Miami, Fla., to confer with Briggs.

With Simmons on the move, the report that Chicago would get Foxx gained wide circulation, but no one would lend any credence to it.

Out of the whirl of rumors and reports, this much was also definitely established:

President Ford Frick of the National League made a hurried departure for New York to aid the Boston Braves financial tangle, which has tied up baseball in Boston for two years. Frick said prospects for a fine settlement were "almost too good to be true."

It was definitely learned that the Giant-Cardinal "mystery" deal was Pitcher Roy Parmelee for Second Baseman Burgess Whitehead.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yanks admitted the discussed deal for Pitcher Mel Harder, of Cleveland, was off.

The White Sox announced that Carl Fischer, the inconsistent left-hander who pitched a one-hit game against Washington last summer, had been released on option to Kansas City. The Sox sold Third Baseman Marty Hopkins to Kansas City outright.

Indians Release Phillips.

Chicago White Sox closed deal whereby Pitcher Lee Stine, a farm hand at St. Paul, will be sent to Cincinnati for Infielder Joe Morrissey, a Red hand at Toronto, and cash. Morrissey, in turn, will be sold to the Giants.

Sally League was reorganized with six clubs—Jacksonville, Fla.; Savannah, Ga.; Macon, Ga.; Augusta, Ga.; Columbia, S. C., and Columbus, Ga. Dr. J. Wilder, of Augusta, was named temporary president. Circuit will be Class B.

Parochial School Rivals Clash in Heurich Game

Old parochial school court rivals will meet again tomorrow night in one of the opening games of the Heurich Cup series in the Heurich Gym.

They are Tom Gallagher, formerly with St. John's Prep now with Coffey Sales, and Tom (Flip) Folliard, once Gonzaga's ace courtman, at present holding down a forward post with the Heurich Flashes.

Season's Last Golf Tourney To Rippy

Beats Ficco, 5 and 4, to End Competition on Public Links.

By Dave Herman.

TAPS were sounded on the local public links competitive golf season yesterday as Claude Rippy, District municipal champion, defeated Charlie Ficco, 30-year-old printer, 5 and 4, to win the East Potomac turkey tournament.

His game tuned up to a high pitch of scoring power, Rippy signed off with a brilliant 68, 3 under par, to blast the medalist's hopes for his first important golf victory.

Rippy was an "iron man" yesterday and proved convincingly why he is Washington's ranking municipal golfer. In the morning he shot a 74 to eliminate G. R. Gipe, 2 and 1, in a tough semifinals match.

Premature Finals.

Rippy had planned to play Ficco sometime next week, but he spotted Ficco on the driving range shortly after defeating Gipe, walked over to him, and said in his Tarheel drawl:

"Let's us get this over with, Charlie."

Covering G side in 34, 1 under, Rippy took a 3-hole lead on Ficco, who went out in 37. Then followed a streak of sure-fire driving, approaching and putting. Rippy played the next five holes of F course in 2 under par to end the battle on the fourteenth.

That Rippy's golf was perfect is evidenced by the fact that he was not over par on a single hole. Ficco finished with a 74.

Their cards:

Out—
Rippy.. 4 3 5 3 5 4 3 3 4—34
Ficco .. 5 3 5 4 5 5 3 3 4—37
In—
Rippy.. 4 4 3 4 4 4 3 4 4—34—68
Ficco.. 4 5 4 4 4 5 3 4 4—37—74

C. Trautner defeated H. A. Peel, 4 and 3, to enter the final of the second flight. He will meet Joe Stoddard. Bill Hefferner defeated James Luttrell, 5 and 4, in the third flight finals.

It will be a busy day at Beaver Dam Country Club Sunday, what with the Brightwood Ex-Caddies Association holding their postponed tournament and entertainment, the Beaver Dam first team playing host to Army and Navy Country Club's first team and the women participating in their annual turkey tournament.

The women's tournament will be held on the outside nine, due to the heavy traffic on the course. Pairings and starting time follow:

First Flight.

10:30—Miss Ellen Kincaid, Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Mrs. C. E. Purdy.; 10:35—Mrs. William Lablile, Mrs. A. W. Tucker, Mrs. R. E. Zuber, Mrs. N. J. Waldron; 10:40—Mrs. J. J. McCarty, Mrs. Max Taylor, Mrs. Earl Sechrest; 10:45—Mrs. T. W. Perkins, Mrs. Earle Strong, Mrs. R. M. Brown; 10:50—Mrs. Charles Griffin, Mrs. Eddie Dlungensky, Mrs. Rex Wever; 10:55—Mrs. E. H. Bean, Mrs. J. P. Strong, Mrs. William Hackman; 11—Mrs. C. H. Offut, Mrs. W. A. Jones, Mrs. D. W. Smith; 11:05—Mrs. George Luce, Mrs. J. H. Goings; 11:10—Mrs. John Money, Miss Sarah Brissenden, Mrs. Pat Fogarty.

Second Flight.

11:15—Mrs. Charles Clagett, Mrs. W. T. Henderson, Mrs. C. F. Owens, Mrs. R. B. Morse; 11:20—Mrs. Frank Kramer, Mrs. G. C. Strong, Mrs. Charles Range, Mrs. D. E. Mattison; 11:25—Mrs. Charles Buck, Mrs. Joe Balestri, Mrs. William O'Brien; 11:30—Mrs. Albin Pearson, Mrs. Robert Donladson, Mrs. Albert Haas.

Mrs. Algie Gardiner, sr., has been elected women's golf chairman at Columbia Country Club. She succeeds Mrs. H. R. Quinter.

An entrance fee of $1.00 is being charged for the turkey tournament at Manor Saturday and Sunday. The proceeds will go to a fund for improvement of the wooded nine at the course.

Mt. Rainier Team Begins State Play

The first round of the State-wide soccer tournament to decide the Western Shore champions brings together Mount Rainier, Prince Georges County titleholders, and Jarretsville, winners in Hartford County, in a game to be played at Jarretsville today at 2:30 p. m.

Coach Arnold said yesterday that every man on the squad was fit for battle except Steve Mier, regular outside forward, bothered with a very painful ankle. Arnold intends to stand pat on the same line-up that carried the team to victory in the county series, except that Latimer Miller replaces Steve Miller.

Capable substitutes to make the trip will be Bartlett Dorr, Paul Fullerton, Harry Miller and George Green.

Local Colored Football Play Attains Semifinals

The semifinal round of the District of Columbia Colored Gridiron Conference will be held on Sunday afternoon at Gonzaga Stadium, it was announced last night. In the upper bracket the Northeast A. C. battles it out with Navy Yard, starting at 1:30 p. m, and the Willowtrees, defending champions, clash with the St. Cyprian A. C. immediately thereafter for lower-bracket laurels.

Bowie Race Track, Nov. 21.

Dear Al:

Since the earliest days of horse racing, those connected with the sport have disliked muddy tracks, but, like the weather, nobody ever did anything about it. From California recently came word that a West Coast chemist has found a soil preparation which will, he hopes, eliminate the necessity of horses running in going "a fetlock deep" and jockeys being struck in the face by flying clods. Now it is learned that Frank Brady, treasurer and general manager at Laurel, has been working on a gadget for drying out tracks. Brady thought and thought and then called in engineers, and out of the conference came a sort of "ironing machine." It is an apparatus along the lines of machines seen on our streets softening and removing asphalt. Heated to a high degree, the plan is to drag slowly over the track to remove the moisture from the soil. Most outdoor sports have provided means of keeping playing fields dry, and it is a wonder that racing has made no effort to eliminate the wet track. An invention that would assure a fast track for every racing would end the careers of perhaps a third of the claiming horses now in action, for they cannot do their best on ailing legs unless the course is soft. I might be letting out a secret, but those wonderful red flowers in the Bowie infield are artificial. But it is no secret that Bennings didn't have a winner today.

BILL.

First race—Aura appears to be the logical choice in this field. He has had a lot of education and recent races reveal that a graduation is not far away. He will have Joe Wagner for the saddle work and I see no reason for mistakes. Go Now comes from a stable of fit horses and has both workouts and races to recommend him in this company. Joan D. ran a good race at Pimlico and will be due respect.

Second race—Acautaw won the first race of his career at this track. Showed excellent form here last Saturday while downing a cheaper field, with the greatest of ease. Camino Real, a recent winner, appears to be the one to beat. Singing Heart ran in the deepest going last out and will do better on a fast track.

Third race—Coming Back ran two good races at Pimlico and seems well suited by conditions here. Robertson has been named for the saddle assignment and I expect no mistakes. Worthington begins to figure when the fields become cheap. He is fit and ready. Sambo Brown tired toward the end of a longer race here earlier in the week. Should improve at this route.

Fourth race—Mad Mahdi failed to regain New York form in his Maryland races, but has been working well since being placed in new hands. I'm going to string along. Wee Lad and Ugin will be ready to battle it out if the top horse makes mistakes.

Fifth race—Scotch Bun seems to be a standout here. He has operated in much superior company this fall and only a mishap can beat him. Swamp Angel showed an excellent second effort last out and is dangerous. Saintlite's last was a beaut.

Sixth race—Supreme Court gets in this race with 103 pounds and may do a lot of running for Jockey Horn. Jim John runs for a new owner an dis due to be a threat again. Bye Bye Mary to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Mary's May turned in a good race in her most recent outing and will have to be beaten before this purse goes to another. Silence III is dropping down and figures to be in the pay. Sun Drops, should Wagner ride, might have to be dealt with.

Option on Benning Taken by O'Hara

Narragansett, R. I., track which closed its second year last Saturday has had an average total daily betting of more than $400,000 and has crowds of from 50,000 to 60,000 on Saturdays and holidays.

O'Hara was occompanied to Washington by Architect Mark Linenthal, of Boston, who supervised the making of plans for Narragansett Park, considered the most modern turf plant in the East.

Black Bill Failed.

Although several mild efforts have been made in recent years to legalize horse race betting in the District, the most serious effort was that of last year when the bill introduced by Representative Loring M. Black, jr., of New York, was blocked on the closing day of the Senate. The Black bill was approved by the District Senate Committee, but opposed by the District Commissioners. The measure was passed by the House. During the last-minute rush of legislation in the Senate, Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, asked for consideration of the bill by unanimous consent. It was then that Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, cried, "I object." The objection killed the bill.

The Black bill, opposed by the Federation of Citizens Associations, would have placed control of the sport in the hands of the District Commissioners. The District would have collected a 10 per cent levy on admission and 2 per cent of the betting pools. The power to fix the amount of the purses and the control of their distribution was to have been given the Commissioners.

Horse racing in the area now covered by the District of Columbia is believed to have had its birth in 1769. The track was located in Georgetown and a "May race meeting" is referred to in the history of the District. It consisted of a gathering of a few gentlemen owners of horse. Their events were for all ages and some of the events were at a gruelling 4-mile route. Racing continued in Georgetown until 1798 and although it undoubtedly was popular the exact location of the track is not known.

From Georgetown, a separate city at that time, racing moved to Washington. A track was built over a mile course which included the present site of the State, War and Navy Building and Lafayette Square. The judges' stand was located on F street in the vicinity of Nineteenth street. President John Adams, history says, watched races from the window of the White House. The events were open and betting was a gentlemanly affair. It was before the day of the bookie.

With the abandonment of this track, racing moved to upper Northwest early in the nineteenth century. The track was located on the Halmead Farm and reached from Tenth street to Sixteenth street over what is now Columbia road. Racing at this track ended with the coming of the War of 1812.

In 1822, the sport of kings again flourished in the District and Congress and Government bureaus declared holidays on stake days probably at the same North Washington location. Later tracks were built on East Capitol street between Fifth and Eleventh streets, Brightwood, Anacostia and on Massachusetts avenue between Fourteenth and Sixteenth streets northwest.

In 1870 the racing scene shifted to Ivy City and 50,000 people are said to have witnessed one program there. This track gave way to Benning in May, 1890, which was operated by the Washington Jockey Club with August Belmont and Col. W. P. Thompson as the guiding hands. It became a society center of the Capital. Racing ended there on April 12, 1908.

Title Defense Is Begun by G. W. High

Fredericksburg Eleven Is Champs' First Foe in North Va. Series.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Nov. 21.—George Washington High School finished preparations today for their invasion of Fredericksburg tomorrow, where they will engage Fredericksburg High School in the first game in the defense of their championship of Northern Virginia.

This afternoon's practice consisted of a signal drill and light exercises, Coach Given taking no chances on injuries upsetting his regular line-up. The local eleven will be out after their seventh straight win tomorrow, and their ninth in ten starts. The lone smirch on their otherwise perfect record is a loss to the powerful Massanutten Military Academy.

Their last time out, the Fredericksburg team overwhelmed Warrenton High by a 40-to-0 score. The chief cog in their offense is Bud Fenlon, flashy field general, whose unerring passes have been responsible for the majority of the Fredericksburg scores this season.

The George Washington team will step out in their new uniforms of blue and gold, the recently adopted school colors. The bulk of offense will be divided among Paul Shu and Lee Fones, two fine backs who are being boosted for all State recognition.

The Old Dominion Boat Club Basket Ball Team wishes to cancel a scheduled game with the Washington Marines on Friday night. If the manager of the Marines will call Jake Mendleson at Alexandria 1303, between 6 and 7 p. m., a game for later in the seson can be arranged.

The Columbia Fire Department basketballers have two games listed in as many days. Friday they tackle the post team at Fort Myer while Saturday they travel to Fort Belvoir, where they will play the Company A unit.

The Alexandria sports world lost a prominent figure here today with the death of Albert Dreyfus. Mr. Dreyfus was at one time an officer in the Dreadnaught Athletic Club and has always been prominent in local athletic activities.

Tech and Eastern Clash Today in High School Series Finale

Second Place At Stake in Struggle

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE interhigh series signs off today with all the healthy gusto annually furnished by a football game between Tech and Eastern. The two rival schools of the Northeast section will be scrapping for second place in the series standings when they meet at Central Stadium, and there is every reason to believe that it will be a rough-and-ready engagement which escorts this 1935 series into the time-honored inter-high records.

It was Eastern and Tech last year who fought to a memorable 0-to-0 tie when the Lincoln Parkers sprang a surprise by holding the rampaging ball carriers of Tech's inter-high champs without a score. An equally stubborn fight is due to get underway at the 3:15 p. m. kick-off today.

Crimmins Is Leader.

On the strength of their records, there is no favorite. On the strength of the power-house drive of Francis (Stonecrusher) Crimmins, Tech's big fullback, there is a favorite, however, and the favorite is Tech. The chief problem concerning Eastern today is to stop Crimmins. In fact, the Eastern camp has been more or less preparing with the idea that if it can stop Crimmins, it will stop Tech.

From a pro-Eastern standpoint, on the other hand, Coach Artie Boyd has in his possession the only backfield man who has crossed the Central goal line in the series, Jack Shugrue, the former ineligible individual, alone cleat-marked the Central end zone when he raced 82 yards for the most spectacular score of the series. Hence, it is highly possible that Tech vs. Eastern will simmer down to Crimmins vs. Shugrue.

Eastern Line Best.

Eastern enters the game with a line undoubtedly superior to the best Coach Hardell of Tech will be able to muster. Eastern enters the game, furthermore, with the best pair of ends in the series in Bob Brand and Allan Miller, and it is around the ends as well as off tackles that the Tech power plays or reverses are generally aimed.

In Earl Fox and Sid Cohen, Eastern has a couple of tackles who fortify the inside-end area formidably, and Coach Boyd also is lacking neither in capable guards in Bernie Herman, Jake Madeoy or Oposscia or Billy Kemp. John Gass, nor in centers in Len Stanley Wells, the fast-traveling Tech ball carrier, adds spark to the punch furnished by Crimmins, and his passing looms on a par with that of Shugrue. It will be a rousing tussle, at any rate—a game virtually certain to feature smashing line plays, headlong passing and some thrill-backed runs.

O'Donnell's, Marvin's, Congress Heights Win

Three basketball games were played last night in the Southeast Community Center League, at Hine Junior High School. The Northeast Business Men lost a double-header when they were defeated by O'Donnell's Restaurant, 23 to 22, and Congress Heights A. C., 49 to 24.

Marvin Methodists won from Sigma Mu Sigma, 39 to 30.

O'Donnell's nosed out the Northeasterners in the last few minutes of play through the efforts of Dave Juniar, who tossed in three field goals in rapid succession. The combinaton of "Big Six" Timmons and Mike Sugrue was too much for them in their second game. Roman for the Marvin's was their high-point man with a total of 17.

G. W. Freshmen Face Terror Cubs Today

For the first time since 1931 a George Washington University freshman eleven will appear here in competition when the Colonial Yearlings meet Western Maryland's Cubs today at 2 p. m. on Gridiron No. 2 in West Potomac Park.

Coach Jean Sexton will start the same team that defeated Carney's Point (N. J.) Y. M. C. A. last Saturday, 28 to 0—namely, Innes and Berry, ends; Collins and Grbovaz, tackles; Czech and Renzaglia, guards; Benenson, center; Stamus, quarterback; Sampson and Faris, halfbacks, and Boring, fullback.

G. U. Students in Rousing Rally as Maryland Game Nears

Ryan gymnasium at Georgetown University last night was the scene of a noisy rally as Coach Jack Hagerty, the Rev. John Kehoe, S. J., faculty moderator of athletics, and the Rev. Vincent J. McDonough, S. J., prefect of discipline, addressed the students in a show of confidence in the varsity team which takes the field against Maryland tomorrow.

Star Bowlers Vie in Dixie Tourney

THE Capital will see the Nation's leading duckpin event this week-end with the opening of the fifth annual Dixie Sweepstakes tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the Convention Hall Alleys. The classic will attract more than 60 bowlers—from Atlanta Ga., to Willimantic, Conn.—and calls for 15 games in five sets, and will be held at three different duckpin establishments. The second block will be rolled at the Arcadia Alleys at 3 p. m., and the final five games at Lucky Strike at 7:30 p. m.

Hostilities will be suspended in the Southern Intercity Duckpin League, so that practically all its roster of star bowlers can compete. Nick Tronsky, ace bowler of the country last year, will lead the famous Blue Ribbon five of Connecticut in an effort to cop the Dixie for the first time. Other Nutmeg stars who will support Tronsky in an effort to bring the title North are Jack White, Mike Bogino, Bill Tato, Joe Gacek and possibly Carl Frisk. All have made numerous appearances in this city, and local fans are familiar with their exploits.

Two From Philly.

Philadelphia, which has never been represented in any duckpin event in Washington, will have two capable entrants in Richard Collins and Francis Carrigan. Lou Dewey's Connecticut Yankees, of Bridgeport, Conn., will be ably represented by "Doc" Williams, Bozo Dente, Gus Kimberley, Ben Kosky, Joe LaMastra, Jimmie Sheridan and Tony Iannarone. Atlanta has two entries in Al Liebler, 18-year-old sensation, and Howard "Strikes" Parker.

Washington, Baltimore, Richmond, Annapolis and Norfolk should contribute about 50 bowlers. Twenty from the first two cities have already entered.

George L. Isemann, N. D. P. B. C. secretary, will receive entries up to starting time. The entry fee is $25.

Bill Arnold, of Annapolis, is the defending champion, winning the event last season with a total pinfall of 1,907. Astor Clarke holds the record for the Dixie, winning in 1933 with 2,001.

48 Mount Rainier Courtmen Report

Mount Rainier High School held its first practice session in basketball yesterday with 48 candidates reporting to Coach Perry Wilkinson. The Mounts were champions of the county last year and reached the finals for the Western Shore title before being eliminated by the strong Pennsylvania Avenue team, of Cumberland, Md.

Of ten men awarded letters in basketball last year, nine have returned to take up duties in their old positions. Four were first stringers. Jimmie Glyn, star forward and long-shot artist, was the only member lost by graduation.

Other boys trying for first-team positions are Bartlett Dorr, Latimer Miller, Edgar Shinn, Paul Fullerton, all forwards; Harry Miller, Lawrence Finn, Herbert Reed and Kenneth Easton, all guards.

Post Mortems . . .

Pete Sarron, the Alexandria featherweight, is touring Texas with a rich friend in a $16,000 automobile . . . he will head back to the Bahamas for another fight in a few days . . . and is wanted by Texas Promoter Dick Griffin to open a new arena in the Lone Star State . . . Dave Smukler, Temple fullback, will play against Villanova tomorrow in a brace identical to the one Coach Pop Warner had fashioned for Jimmy Johnson when he was at Carlisle back in 1903 . . . Johnson wore the brace so effectively that he was picked as All-America quarterback that year . . . although his leg injury was not as bad as Smukler's . . . President Andrew Jackson owned race horses . . . John Schmidt, star Navy back, stands first in his classes, is a good musician and sings in the chapel choir . . . Canoe races will be on the Olympic program for the first time in Germany next year . . . Sammy Williams, the colored box fighter who performs for the Lincoln Athletic Club, was christened William Sams . . . What has become of C. C. Feminine Bike Rider Cajoles Press Into Disastrous Race

By George Considine.

HER name is Marjorie Ward. She's small and feminine. She's the champion bicycle rider of the Dominion of Canada. And she's in Washington to compete in the 6-mile Women's International Race of the National Capital Bicycle Sweepstakes, which will be held day after tomorrow on the Ellipse roadway.

Miss Ward and her sister, Joan, were on hand yesterday at the polo oval to instruct embryonic pedal-pushers in the science of cycling and, needless to say, the press was copiously represented. As a matter of fact the press was so copiously represented that the poor embryonic pedal-pushers had to be contented just to overhear their instruction.

Well, anyway, Miss Marjorie was very tactful about the whole thing. Evidently seeking relief from the barrage of fool questions that the press was hurling in her direction, she wearily raised a hand and suggested a race by the inquisitive ink-stained wretches. It was to be once around the oval, a distance of nine-tenths of a mile.

Gus Romm, local bike rental impresario, offered the required number of bikes and everything was in readiness except the gentlemen of the Fourth Estate. There, it developed, was a real problem. One had to get back to the office. Another was wearing his Sunday suit. Another hadn't ridden a bike since goshknowswhen. Another needed a month or three to get in shape. Still another never heard of a bike race.

But, somehow, Miss Marjorie wheedled the boys into trying. And so, amid wagers and squawks they took their places. The signal was given and the entire field was left at the post. After a deal of chin-jutting, they were away in a flurry of velocipedes.

Half an hour later a lone, breathless, starry-eyed gent walked his bike across the finish line. The Canadian champion stifled a snicker and asked the survivor if he were going to enter the 62½-mile Pre-Olympic race next Sunday. A pair of very tired legs buckled at the knees and their breathless, starry-eyed owner joined the oblivion of his prostrate colleagues.

'Y' Swimmers Travel.

The Y. M. C. A. junior swimming team will meet the Baltimore Y. M. C. A. junior team Saturday evening in Baltimore. It will be the first meet for both teams. The Washington team will be selected from Richard Baker, Emett Brown, Robert Burruss, Bruce Etchison, Roy Gibson, Eddie Griffin, Kenneth Kinsella, Chris Mullady, Edgar Sheppard, Robert Gooding, Ralph Metera and Jack Frost.

Hold Water Carnival.

The preps swimming class of the Y. M. C. A. will hold a water carnival for boys from 9 to 11 years of age tomorrow, from 10 to 11 a. m., in the boys pool.

Wants Grid Games.

The Georgetown Boys Club 100-pound football team is seeking a game for Saturday. Call West 2122, after 6:30 p. m.

Keep Out Reds, Quinn Tells Eastern

Such, in effect, was the ringing message flung to some 200 tense hearers by Henry I. Quinn, prominent member of the Board of Education, at the annual Eastern High football banquet last night.

Of course, what Mr. Quinn said was all in fun and his hearers laughed and applauded as the present hue-and-cry anent Communism in the local public schools was cleverly satirized by the popular Board of Education member, who was among those to vote against the teaching of communism in the schools here.

Quinn's brief but well-timed remarks were the highlight of the banquet, attended by numerous school officials as well as coaches and players. Other speakers were Birch E. Bayh, head of the physical education system, and Jack Faber, University of Maryland football coach. Faber forecast impending restriction of the lateral pass, which, he declared, is detracting from the quality of the game.

Quinn's remarks went over with a smash—and a laugh.

"Now, I don't want any Tech or Eastern player tomorrow to come out there either wearing or waving a red jersey," he warned. "I don't know but what somebody would hang you. I've been hearing so much about communism lately that I'm beginning to get suspicious of anything with red in it."

The banquet was another tribute to Eastern's perennial hospitality. Principal Charles Hart again was toastmaster. Bayh expressed pleasure at the manner in which the series had been carried off this year. Capt. Bill Shelton of Western, Capt. Gil Sheroth and Coach Hap Hardell of Tech and Co-Captains Spiro Kolius and Francis Beamer and Coach Lynn Woodworth of Roosevelt were among the guests. The entire Eastern squad and Coach Altie Boyd, Coach Charlie Guyon and former Assistant Principal John Paul Collins also attended.

Holy Cross Wins.

Holy Cross Academy took the lead in the Catholic Girls School Basketball League yesterday by defeating St. Paul's, 46 to 10, on the Holy Cross court. Holy Cross defeated St. Patrick's last week. Betty Kline, Margaret Viehman, Shirley Moran and Eleanor Daly were among those starring for the winners.

Va. Foes Today For Central, Western

Today's High and Prep School Games.
Tech vs. Eastern, at Central Stadium (3:15 p. m.).
Western vs. Washington-Lee High, at Western Stadium (3:15 p. m.).
Central vs. Petersburg High, at Petersburg, Va.
Landon vs. Friends, at Friends Field (3:15 p. m.).

CENTRAL HIGH and Western today face powerful Virginia opponents as Tech High and Eastern square off at Central Stadium. Central's interhigh championship squad left at 5 p. m. by bus last night for Petersburg, Va., where the Mount Pleasanters will face the strong Petersburgh eleven, now occupying fourth place in the Virginia State High School League.

Western will meet Washington-Lee High's top-ranking team at Western Stadium at 3:30 p. m. in a game in which the Little Generals will be heavily favored to win.

Store League Banquets.

The fourth annual banquet of the Department Store Baseball League is to be held tomorrow at the Harrington Hotel at 7:30 p. m.

Both Terps, Hoyas Seem Sure Things

Rival leaders of the Georgetown and Maryland football teams expect their hardest game of the season tomorrow when the two clash at Griffith Stadium, with each side confidently predicting victory.

Co-Captains Joe Meglen and Wally Herron, Georgetown, were unanimous in the opinion that Maryland "will know it's been in a football game, and I guess we will, too, for that matter. But, make no mistake—Georgetown's going to win."

Maryland's field captain is not elected until just before the game, but Lou Ennis, who led the team against Indiana, felt certain that "Maryland will win by at least one touchdown.

Charley Ellinger decided that "we whipped 'em last year and we can do it again," while Coleman Headley figured "Georgetown may be good, but we're better."

Turkey Shoot Planned.

A turkey shoot will be held by the Young Men's Democratic Club of the Twenty-first Election District of Prince Georges County, Md., tomorrow afternoon at the Dude Ranch, near Berwyn.

Sun Radio Booters Play Mitchell Bros.

Tomorrow the junior Sport Center players line up as follows: Georgetown at Rosedale, McMillan at Raymond, Burroughs at Sherwood "B," and Park View plays Sherwood "A" at McMillan. This last-named game brings together the pair of clubs now tied for the lead.

On Sunday, three attractive clashes are featured under Recreation League auspices. Littoria meets the fast young Silver Spring eleven, at 1 o'clock at Rosedale, and at 2:45 Mitchell Brothers opposes Sun Radio. Sabaudia and Occoquan meet at McMillan playground at 2:30 p. m.

Gold, Reserves Continue Rise To New Peaks

Total Gold 9.8 Billions, With Bank Balances at 5.7 Billions.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve member bank report yesterday disclosed that the recent heavy inflow of gold was resumed during the week ending November 20. A gain of $57,000,000 during the week, raising the total to $9,804,000,000, was reported. This level, the highest reached, is $1,728,000,000 in excess of the total at this time last year.

As a result of this gold movement, member banks reserve balances recorded a corresponding high of $5,782,000,000, a figure the board estimated to be $3,070,000,000 in excess of legal requirements. The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended November 20, as reported by the Federal Reserve Banks, was $2,491,000,000, an increase of $7,000,000, compared with the preceding week, and of $14,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

"On November 20 total reserve bank credit amounted to $2,471,000,000, a decrease of $21,000,000 for the week. This decrease corresponds with a decrease of $7,000,000 in money in circulation and increases of $57,000,000 in monetary gold stock and $10,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency, offset in part by an increase of $36,000,000 in member bank reserve balances, [illegible],000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve Banks and $9,000,000 in non-member deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Member bank reserve balances on November 20 were estimated to be approximately $3,070,000,000 in excess of legal requirements."

$100,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for two series of Treasury bills to the aggregate amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts. One series will be 110-day bills and the other series will be 273-day bills. Both series will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or branches up to 2 p. m. on Monday, November 25. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

December Cotton At New High Level

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 21.—Cotton showed increased activity today, with near months leading a further advance which carried December up to 12.08, or 16 points net higher. This established the highest price reached by that position since last March, but there was some recession near the close. The market ended steady at net advances of 6 to 10 points.

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Stockholders of McClellan Stores Co. have voted in favor of a plan of recapitalization authorizing 75,000 shares of 6 per cent preferred stock, par $100, and 1,000,000 shares of common stock, par $1, it was announced today.

Bank of France Ups Rate Again To Retain Gold

Rise to 5 Per Cent Follows Week's Loss of About $61,500,000.

Paris, Nov. 21.—The Bank of France raised its discount rate again today, changing it from 4 per cent to 5 per cent. It was the second increase in a week. The action was taken in a renewed effort to halt the outward flow of gold before it threatens the stability of the franc.

The rate for advances on securities was raised from 5 to 6 per cent and on 30-day advances from 4 to 5 per cent.

Fears of the eventual devaluation of the franc continued to find expression in the press with financial sources pointing to a drop in the value of government bonds on the bourse, the difficulty of borrowing money, and bad business as signs of fear.

Political Factors.

Technically, financiers pointed out, the franc is sound. They attributed the flight of gold from France to uneasiness over political animosities and budgetary uncertainty at the re-opening of parliament.

It appeared that speculators were staying out of the foreign exchange market since they "burned their fingers" in a futile attack on the franc last spring.

In its statement today, the Bank of France reports withdrawals 933,000,000 francs in gold (about $61,500,000) during the week ending November 15. The franc was valued on the New York market yesterday at 6.5875 cents.

This brings the gold withdrawals for three weeks to 1,768,000,000 francs with the outflow continuing at a heavy rate. The gold reserve on November 15 was 70,389,000,000 francs, providing a 73.82 per cent coverage on bank notes.

Gold Currencies Drop; Sterling Advances.

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Fresh concern over the immediate financial and political outlook in France led to the most pronounced weakness in gold currencies since last summer, both in New York and European exchange centers today.

The French franc dropped .00½ of a cent in New York to 6.58¼ cents, well under the level at which it is profitable to ship gold from France, but the loss was recovered before the close. Holland guilders yielded .41 of a cent at 67.48 cents, a figure at which gold also can be purchased in Amsterdam and transported to New York profitably.

The British pound sterling, meanwhile, was enjoying considerable popularity as a medium into which gold currencies were being converted on a large scale.

The Market By Carlton A. Shively

A Special Correspondent

Rails and Metals Lead New Advance; Wheat Jumps; Gold Currencies Fall.

New York, Nov. 21.—Financial markets looked better in most sectors. Stocks shook off their irregularity and moved moderately higher in a turnover of a little over 3,000,000 shares, more than half a million less than yesterday. Francs and the gold currencies had a bad time, as capital began to leave on fears of devaluation, but sterling was higher. December wheat closed 2⅛ cents higher at 99¼ cents a bushel.

Railroad shares were among the best of the list. Central set the pace, which was followed by the Northerns, Chesapeake, Santa Fe, and Union Pacific. Some of the lower-priced rails gained from 10 to 40 per cent in value. Motors improved, and the accessory group turned buoyant, rising 1 to 3 points. Homestake climbed rapidly on its $20 extra dividend, and other golds were firm. Copper rose with other metal and mining shares.

Telephone added to its previous best price. Radio held firm. Packing company shares were strong, the Wilsons going to new high levels on large trading. Connecticut Railway common and preferred rose 2 points. Southern Railway, Mobile & Ohio dropped more than 3 points. General Electric was quiet, at a yield of around 2 per cent. Directors are scheduled to meet tomorrow.

Losing Gold.

Since the Italian government has taken over all gold in the country and since the Bank of Italy no longer publishes a statement, no one knows how devastating have been the recent drains on the Italian gold supply, which virtually means the purchasing power of the country, for only spot cash, gold, is now able to do much for Italy. Sanctions will make the accumulation of foreign exchange more difficult, but at the same time it may tend to slacken the pace of the outrunning gold, if for no other reason because goods simply won't be for sale. As a counter to that, smuggling activities may be carried on at price levels, which will means as much outlay as before, but for less goods.

Meanwhile the drain on French gold continues. This week's statement of the Bank of France shows a fall of 933,000,000 francs in gold and also a considerable drop in circulation. The Bank of France is acting energetically along classical central banking lines to stop the loss and today put up the bank discount rate again, this time from 4 to 5 per cent. A further increase is likely. Whether the higher rates prove efficacious, they, at least, give notice that France is making an effort to stay on gold, which may offset the advertisement the higher rates give of the difficulty of the position. Bank of England gained some more gold and its reserve ratio rose with a drop in circulation.

Unfavorable Balance of Trade.

On the business side, in addition to higher dividend payments, the foreign trade news was encouraging. The fly in the ointment naturally is the uncertainty over the Government's stand on shipments of cotton, oil, copper and other goods that may go eventually to Italy. It is difficult to see how the Government can stop the trade, short of a new embargo law, but clearly the Administration dislikes the considerable rise in such exports. They doubtless accounted for the sharp gains in October exports, which were $23,000,000 over the preceding month and $14,800,000 higher than for the same month of a year ago.

Advice.

Members of the advisory council of the Federal Reserve Board were reported discussing excess reserves at their meeting with members of the board today. It was also reported that the council was preparing recommendations on the subject in which the board is much interested at the moment, may have a more sympathetic attention than did the recommendations formulated after another meeting of the council in September, 1934. Those recommendations included a return to the gold standard, budget balancing and an end of inflationary schemes. The board refused to receive them and told the council they dealt with matters which were none of its business. The council, under the law, could make recommendations upon any topic it pleased. Probably this will be the last meeting of a body whose conscientious conception of its duties in recent years has not been appreciated.

New York Central.

Although some investors would like to see a larger clearing ahead for New York Central, the road is making progress. Settlement announced today of the controversy which Chairman Jones has tried to keep alive over the bank and RFC loans to the road had a good effect on the market. Strictly from a financial standpoint, the new agreement appears to be somewhat of a draw as against the bankers and the RFC, and the road is ahead in that it will not be obliged to sell bonds at an inconvenient time or to see its loans called when it is unable to pay them all. By discharging a portion of the RFC indebtedness, Central secured a good extension of the remainder. Doubtless the banks which still hold Central's short notes were willing to see the RFC come first on repayment in order to stop the fortnightly dictation and threats.

Puts and Calls.

The put-and-call market does not indicate any great fear of a bad break in prices within the next month or so. Puts still are obtainable near the market in many active stocks. Chrysler is 5½ points away for a put and 7 for a call. General Electric is quoted 1 point away on both sides. Steel is 2 down and 3½ up. Telephone is 6 and 9. Radiator is a half down and 1 up. Smelters is 3½ and 5. U. S. Steel is 2 for a put and 3½ for a call, which is the same as the put-and-call market for General Motors, and fair enough for ordinary protection of long or short accounts, but not a great temptation to additional speculation.

Clearings Gain Here Exceeds Average in U. S.

32.5% for Washington Compares With 21.7% in 22 Cities.

The Washington Clearing House reports a volume of $20,648,599.94 bank clearings for the week ended November 20. This is an increase of $1,735,043.39 or 9.17 per cent over the previous week and a gain of $5,073,277.13 or 32.5 per cent over the same period last year.

The total for the 22 leading cities in the United States for the week ended Wednesday, November 20, as reported to the Associated Press by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $5,576,438,000, against $4,584,949,000 a year ago, an increase of 21.7 per cent. For the preceding week, the advance was 23.1 per cent.

At New York City, clearings were $3,407,508,000, an increase of 21.3 per cent over the amount reported last year, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York City of $2,168,930,000 was 22.2 per cent higher.

Clearings were very much larger at every city reporting than they were at the same time last year. The increase was especially heavy at some of the outside centers. The total for the week was in excess of that for the preceding week this year by $835,363,000, while for the same two weeks a year ago, the increase amounted to $724,673,000.

Gain a 4-year Peak.

Not since October, 1931, have aggregate clearings for the 21 leading cities in the United States, outside of New York City has been as large as they were for the past week, the increase at this time being particularly heavy at Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Chicago, Detroit, Louisville, Omaha, Kansas City, Dallas, San Francisco, Seattle and Portland.

Figures at leading centers, showing increases as of a year ago, are printed herewith; also daily bank clearings for the year to date:

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Trading was quiet on the stock exchange yesterday, operators being occupied with week-end settlements. Far Eastern bonds, gilt-edged securities and oils were firmer. Speculative issues were unsettled on continental selling and transatlantic shares eased on Wall street news. The closing was irregular.

Paris—Quotations on the bourse turned irregular yesterday under the influence of Wednesday's weakness in Wall street and the raising of the discount rate by the Bank of France. Rentes slumped, while international issues held generally firm. The market closed irregular.

Berlin—The bourse opened dull but low prices caused traders to come into the market, which closed sustained.

Bank of France.

Paris, Nov. 21 (AP).—The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes in francs: Gold, decreased 933,000,000; sight balances abroad, unchanged; bills discounted at home, increased 279,000,000; bills bought abroad, unchanged; advances, decreased 14,000,000; circulation, decreased 664,000,000; current accounts, increased 137,000,000; 30-day loans on government collateral, increased 40,000,000. Rate of discount, 5 per cent.

Dividends Raised By 3 Corporations

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Directors of the National Lead Co. today declared an extra dividend of $1 per share on the common stock together with the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 per share. The regular quarterly distribution of $1.50 a share on the class B preferred stock also was declared. Directors of Chesebrough Manufacturing Co. declared an extra dividend of $1 per share and the regular quarterly dividend of $1 on the capital stock. In Chicago, directors of the International Harvester Co. raised its regular quarterly dividend rate from 15 to 30 cents a share on the common stock.

Bankers Present Middle West Plan

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—Reorganization of the Middle West Utilities Co., giant holding concern of the Insull system, appeared assured today when bankers presented a modified plan suggested by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

Walter A. Shaw, utility expert representing the court, recommended approval and the judge set November 26 for arguments. For each 100 shares, common stockholders under the plan would receive one share in a new company, plus a warrant for purchase of one more share, at $8 the first year, $9 the second and $10 the third. Preferred stockholders would get one share of new stock for each four of the old, plus one warrant.

SEC 1935 Releases Total 1.5 Billions

Securities released for sale under the securities act during October totaled $406,086,507 as compared with $319,874,100 in September, bringing the aggregate of effective statements in 1935 through October 31, to $1,510,497,680. Sixty-five per cent of the October registrations were composed of secured bonds and debentures registered for refunding purposes, over 20 per cent were certificates of participation, beneficial interests, etc., mainly of investment trusts, and almost 14 per cent were for various stock issues.

Of the estimated net proceeds, 69 per cent are proposed to be used for the repayment of indebtedness.

Argentine Heat Drives Wheat 3 Cents Higher

Sharp Upturns Abroad Precede Advance in Chicago Pit.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—Soaring swiftly today near the closing hour wheat values gained almost 3 cents a bushel. Fears that extreme high temperatures threatening in Argentina would cause worse damage to crops already at a precarious stage did much to stimulate broadened speculative buying of wheat futures. Higher prices were also promoted through evidence of improved domestic milling demand for red winter wheat both here and at Kansas City.

Wheat in Chicago closed strong, 1½-2⅝ above yesterday's finish. December, 99¼-99⅜. Corn ½ off to ¼ up; December, 60⅝-60⅝. Oats unchanged to ¼ higher, and provision at a rise of 10 to 20 cents.

Vigorous upward swings of foreign wheat markets pereceded the upturns here. Liverpool reported a scarcity of sellers abroad, with Argentine shipments curtailed and better call for Canadian and Australian wheat. Argentine wheat exports this week were estimated as totaling only 1,176,000 bushels against 3,824,000 the corresponding time last year.

Guiana Gold Output Largest in Decade

Georgetown, British Guiana, Nov. 21 (AP).—Gold exports from British Guiana for the first ten months of this year amounted to 27,584 ounces valued at $698,727, officials announced today.

Figures for the entire year are expected to be the highest in a decade.

War Debt Installment Coming From Finland

Helsingfors, Nov. 21 (AP).—The statement of the Bank of Finland showed today that the nation would pay its war debt instalment of $230,000 to the United States December 15.

Treasury officials expressed gratification yesterday over Finland's determination to meet her war debt installments when due December 15. Finland is this Government's favorite debtor as the only nation that has never failed to meet an installment when due.

The aggregate due the United States on all war debts December 15 is $965,414,000.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Foreign exchange markets were featured yesterday by a sharp drop in French francs. The decline followed another boost in the discount rate of the Bank of France from 4 to 5 per cent. It was also disclosed that the French Bank lost 933,000,000 francs in gold in the week ended November 14.

The franc lost .00⅜ of a cent at 6.58⅜ cents in New York dealings, which was the lowest since October 4, last. In Paris the dollar closed higher at 6.583 cents to the franc.

Guilders and Swiss francs in New York were heavy apparently in sympathy with the French currency. Guilders were off .34 of a cent at 67.55 cents, and Swiss funds were down .05 of a cent at 16.91½ cents.

Sterling rallied a cent in the American market to $4.93¼. At London the dollar ended at 4.92 5-16 to the pound.

Louis Eckstein, Opera Sponsor, Is Dead at 70

Publisher and Merchant Devoted Large Portion of Fortune to Fine Arts.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—Death today claimed Louis Eckstein, 70, a director of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, and for more than 20 years the principal patron of summer opera at Ravinia, near here.

He died of pneumonia in his hotel apartment. With him at the time of his death was his wife, Mrs. Elsie Snydacker Eskstein.

Eckstein spent a substantial part of his fortune sponsoring the "Opera House of the Woods," to which he brought world-famous voices. His friends estimated his contributions to the Ravinia opera totaled $1,000,000.

For many years he was director of the enterprise, personally casting the performances, the last of which was held in 1931. The previous year he met $139,107 of the deficit incurred in furnishing Chicagoans fine music.

Born in Milwaukee, Wis., in 1865, Eckstein worked his way up from messenger boy for the Winconsin Central Railroad to general passenger agent.

In 1904, after he had resigned and come to Chicago, he entered the publishing business and introduced the Red Book, Blue Book and Green Book magazines. He was credited with encouraging Rupert Hughes, Peter B. Kyne, James Oliver Curwood and other writers in their early days.

In 1929 he sold the Red Book and Blue Book to McCall's Corporation. Publication of the Green Book had been discontinued earlier.

Eckstein was a director of the Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. and the Emporium-World Millinery Co. He was decorated twice by the King of Italy, first in 1928 as a chevalier of the Order of the Italian Crown and again two years later as a commendatore of the same order. His election as a director of Metropolitan came in 1932.

Private funeral services will be held here Friday.

Gen. Dimmick Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Full Military Honors to Mark Burial Service of Veteran Officer.

Funeral services for Brig. Gen. Eugene D. Dimmick, U. S. A., retired, who died Saturday at his home in Palo Alto, Calif., will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow from the Fort Myer Gate of Arlington National Cemetery. He will be buried with full military honors in the southern section of the cemetery. Chaplain Ralph C. Deibert will conduct the services.

The following will be honorary pallbearers: Brig. Gen. David L. Brainard, retired; Commander T. G. Dewey, U. S. N., retired; Col. Charles W. Taylor, retired; Lieut. Col. George J. Newgarden, retired; Maj. Loveland and Capt. Robert G. Carter, retired.

Gen. Dimmick was born in Athens, N. Y., July 31, 1840, and served as an enlisted man in the first year of the Civil War. He was made a lieutenant and then captain before the struggle ended. Entering the regular Army in 1867, as a second lieutenant, he served through the various grades to colonel. He was promoted to brigadier general, retired, after his retirement on March 2, 1903. His decorations included the Silver Star "for gallantry against the Spanish forces at Santiago, Cuba, July 1, 1898."

Gen. Dimmick is survived by his daughter, Miss Estelle Dimmick, of Palo Alto.

A. B. Dinwiddie Is Dead at 64

Heart Disease Is Fatal to Outstanding Figure in Southern Education.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 21.—Albert Bledsoe Dinwiddie, 64, president of Tulane University since 1918, died today of a heart ailment.

He had been associated with the university since 1906, first as assistant professor of astronomy and applied mathematics.

The serene, snowy-haired "Prexy" was an outstanding figure in Southern education. In his administration, Tulane's enrollment grew from 1,789 to 3,133 students, the faculty and staff from 329 to 511 and receipts from $417,699 to $1,021,374.

Tulane is best known for its school of medicine and it football teams. It survived the malice of the late Huey P. Long and a Carnegie investigation into the subsidizing of athletes.

Dr. Dinwiddie remained active until the close of the last school term, which was Tulane's centennial. He planned to retire at the end of the 1935-36 term. Dr. Douglas Anderson, dean of the College of Engineering, was named acting president when Dr. Dinwiddie's health failed.

He was reared in Lexington, Ky., and educated at the University of Virginia. A wife and five children survive.

Banker Dies in Florida.

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, Washington, November 12, 1935. A public hearing having been held by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia on October 7, 1935, in the matter of closing certain streets hereinafter described, and the said Commissioners being satisfied as to the equity, justice and advisability of said closings, and that the same are in the public interests and not detrimental to the interests of abutting owners, notice is hereby given that the said Commissioners have prepared the following order: "Ordered, that pursuant to the provisions of public act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the street area as shown in green on plats filed in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, and numbered as maps 1927 and 1948, is hereby ordered CLOSED, same to take effect on and after December 14, 1935, the title to said land comprised in said area so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said maps; the said street area hereby ordered closed being described as follows: (1) Closing Gallaudet street and Capitol avenue in the northeast section lying east of Fenwick street. (This involves a dedication of 10 feet on the east side of Fenwick street from Gallaudet street to West Virginia avenue, and a dedication of 20 feet on the northerly side of West Virginia avenue between Fenwick street and the east line of parcel 142/28.) (2) Closing Montello avenue running southwesterly from New York avenue between squares 4093 and 4099. (This involves a dedication of 20 feet for the widening of West Virginia avenue on the northerly side between New York avenue and the westerly line of parcel 143/25, through lot 802, square 4098, and parcels 143/25 and 153/44.)" Any and all parties interested must file objections to said closing in writing before the effective date of above order; otherwise said order shall become effective on December 14, 1935, as aforesaid, and said street area shall on and after said date become closed in accordance with the provisions of said act. INSTRUCTION 19

You're the Life of the Party with a PIANO ACCORDION

Learn to Play Popular Music in 20 Lessons With Kitt's Easy Course

This popular instrument has captured the whole country—young and old—from age 6 to 60. Hundreds have finished the course in our school alone. It's the easiest of all instruments to learn to play—average students taking our course can play popular music after only 20 lessons—so can you. Play for pleasure at home or parties or play for profit—good accordionists are in demand everywhere in orchestras, night clubs, for radio programs, etc. The cost is nominal—$1.50 per weekly lesson pays for BOTH the instrument and a full course of PRIVATE LESSONS. Absolutely no other charge—you merely come in, arrange for the instruction and we give you the accordion (in case) to take home.

BUICK'S THE BUY
the place to buy it.

We have in our used or stock 36 Buicks, all traded on the 1936 Buick. All reconditioned according to the high standard demanded by Stanley H. Horner, they represent big values at bargain prices.

TYPICAL VALUES

BUICK 1935 "46s" Coupe. Beautiful deep rich black finish. This is the "sport" model with rumble seat and trunk rack. Actual mileage 2,400 miles. A one-word description of this car is "NEW." It's not even well broken in, but you can save plenty at a full price of $795.

BUICK 1933 De Luxe Sedan. Original black finish like new; 6 wire wheels, fender wells, metal wheel covers, all new tires, trunk rack, extra-heavy whipcord upholstery, dual horns, parking lights. A spotless car with exceptionally low mileage. Unusual value at the price, $645.

BUICK 1932 "57" Sedan. You will think it has new finish, but this car has had so little use that its original black finish shines like new. Equipped with ride control and other extras, this car, driven by one owner, is as clean as any 1934 car in our stock. For a full price of only $445 this is the most outstanding value in our entire stock.

BUICK 1932 "58" Victoria. This is the 5-pass. model with built-in luggage compartment. Perfect black finish, maroon pin stripe, perfect chrome, all new tires, relined brakes, mechanically it gives new-car performance. See this very clean car before you buy. $425.

BUICK 1931 "67" De Luxe Sedan. It's a '31, but if age was based on mileage this car would be listed as a '34. De Luxe equipped, 6 wire wheels, fender wells, trunk rack, spotless black finish, even the upholstery shows hardly any wear. Big value for little money. $365.

Mrs. Otto to Address Rector's Aid Society

Using a model of the Hebrew tabernacle erected in 1220 B. C. at the foot of Mt. Sinai to illustrate her lecture, Mrs. Annie Carter Otto, Bible student and research worker, will address members and friends of the Rector's Aid Society of St. Thomas Episcopal Church, Eighteenth and Church streets northwest, at 3 p. m. today.

Mrs. Otto is niece of the late ...la Carpenter Ulen of Laramie, Wyo., who built the model several years ago. In recent years the lecturer has taken it before church groups and theological schools throughout the country for lectures upon its construction and symbolison.

Waynesboro Welfare Group Elects Officers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Nov. 21.—Officers have been elected by the Waynesboro Welfare Association with H. C. Gordon as president. Other officers are Dennis Good, vice president; Mrs. Charles A. Waynant, secretary; Mrs. S. G. Benedict, assistant secretary; Chester E. Adams, treasurer, and John B. Stoner, director of welfare activity.

The association re-elected Miss Pauline Metcalfe as community nurse for the year. In his report for the year, Mr. Stoner noted $3,019.22 spent for clothing and provisions.

Stanford, California Grads to 'Hear' Game

Washington Alumni of Stanford University and the University of California have arranged to get a play-by-play report of the football game in Berkeley, Calif. tomorrow afternoon.

Telegraphic and radio reports will be received at Wesley Hall, 1703 K street northwest, where both alumni groups have arranged a joint meeting. The game will start at 4:45 p. m., Eastern standard time.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Characters.

New York, Nov. 21.

MOST vivid of the Broadway residents are some of the characters who enliven the stem, give it tone and color and warmth . . . If it weren't for them, Broadway would just be a collection of paving blocks and mazdas; they clothe the alley in flesh and blood . . . For instance, there's Red Nose Whitey and Mother MacFadden and Cheesecake Ike . . . there's Swifty Morgan and Broadway Sam, Cockeye Beck, Commodore Dutch and Louie the Louse . . . there's Dollar John and big Dick Butler, Two Per Cent Sam and the Sunny Faced Kid . . . Sir Joseph Ginsberg, Prince Mike Romanoff and the Count give the street a touch of jovial royalty . . . some of the nicknames interpret themselves . . . Dollar John, once wealthy, got his by giving away dollar bills to stemmers in the days of his effulgence . . . Mother MacFadden, who now rents out a private car in front of the Hotel Pennsylvania, got his by mothering Vincent Lopez when he chauffeured for him . . . Commodore Dutch is a snaggle-toothed admiral without a navy, and once a year his friends attend the annual Commodore Dutch ball, which stakes him for the ensuing year . . . Two Per Cent Sam won his sobriquet by his betting system . . . he bets for and against, laying off one against the other so that he always is sure of a 2 per cent profit.

* * * *

Cheesecake Ike undoubtedly has eaten more cheesecake in Lindy's than any five New Yorkers . . . Peer into the booth here he sits and you will see him topping off each meal with a slice of the cake employed in his christening . . . Dick Butler is the bulky West Sider who smuggled Harry K. Thaw out of Matteawan . . . Butler used a milk wagon as his Trojan horse to get inside the asylum gates, and when his steed clanked out of the courtyard, Thaw was hidden in the wagon . . . Broadway Sam is one of the town's better-known ticket specs . . . Six feet 4 inches tall, always immaculately attired, with a flower in his lapel and an expensive cigar in his teeth, Broadway Sam looks like money from home . . . The big fellow is very charitable, staking dozens of former actors, now down on their luck . . . Sir Joseph Ginsberg attached himself some years ago to the retinue of Willie and Eugene Howard, and they've kept him for laughs, just as W. C. Fields once employed Vince Barnett.

* * * *

Newspaper offices are familiar with Johnny Uptown, who for 40 years has supplied editors with their batches of papers, from edition to edition . . . He knew the elder Bennett, Dana, Munsey and Stoddard, and he recalls the days when funerals used to pass over the Long Island bridges, with troupes of professional mourners uttering loud laments for the deceased—though they had never seen him . . . Artie Hitchman is another ticket spec, who attempts to rival the gorgeous apparel of Broadway Sam . . . When Jimmy Walker, Artie's idol, returned from Europe, every photo showed youthful Hitchman standing directly behind Walker . . . He probably had to fell hundreds of others to get within focus, but he got there . . . Swifty Morgan, a great friend of mine, is about 5 feet 3 inches short, and a character who might have stepped out of a Wilson Mizner folio . . . He sells jewelry or real estate or horses, and it's a pleasure to buy from him, just to hear his amazingly picturesque language.

* * * *

Senator Wild Bill Lyons, who first bobbed up around here with Jack Kearns and Jack Dempsey, and is now a friend of Postmaster General Jim Farley, is a great character . . . He says he is the first white child born in Texas, still carries the six-shooter which he alleges he used with the Texas Rangers, and startles you by yanking a sword out of the cane he carries with him . . . Pitzy Katz is a little chap in great demand around town for his Jewish dialect stories . . . He travels with a chap, whose name I forget, who has a deadly fear of fish, alive or dead . . . Pitzy, when the evening gets dull, sends a waiter out for a fresh mackerel, produces it suddenly, and his pal goes into a frenzy . . . Violinsky is another raconteur, but my pet dialectician offstage is Sam Lyon . . . Two-Gun Murphy is still around town . . . He used to be a narcotic agent, but now works for a private detective agency . . . And Sam Boston, the betting commissioner, must not be overlooked in any such poll, nor Broadway Rose, who applies the bite for quarters and half dollars . . . Apple Annie, Runyon heroine, is dead.

Fourth Death Is Attributed To Poison Soda

Three More Ill as San Francisco Continues Search for Stuff's Source.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 21.—A fourth death and three more illnesses ascribed tentatively to poisoned baking soda spurred authorities tonight to intensify their search for the source of the lethal compound.

George Purnaras, 45, a dishwasher, died in convulsions today, a few hours after taking bicarbonate of soda.

Deputy Coroner Anthony Trabucco said the soda was from a different source than that blamed for three other recent deaths and 21 illnesses.

He investigated to determine if the dishwasher might have died from another ailment, however, when the proprietor of the restaurant reported he had been using the soda in cooking. None of his customers had complained, the restaurant owner said.

Trabucco seized the package Purnaras used for chemical analysis.

The latest death came as officers were attempting to determine how 800 pounds of household soda, repacked from damaged packages by a salvage company, had become contaminated by two deadly poisons.

Theories of accident and mass murder plotting were advanced, both without substantiation.

Coroner T. B. Leland advanced a theory the original 800 pounds of poisoned soda might have been scraped from the hold of a ship or the floor of a freight car, becoming contaminated in that way. The salvage company that repacked it does not deal in poisons, he said.

Joseph Rosenthal, proprietor of the store where the soda was retailed, and Nick Manno, head of the salvage company, were arraigned on charges of selling contaminated food. Their hearing was delayed until December 2 to permit time for an inquest.

Postlude . . . .

By Ray C. B. Brown

National Symphony Orchestra, Hans Kindler, conductor; Sylvia Meyer, harp soloist; Constitution Hall, Thursday afternoon. Program: "Fingal's Cave" Overture (Mendelssohn), "Danse Sacree et Danse Profane" (Debussy), Introduction et Allegro (Ravel), Symphony No. 1 in C minor (Brahms).

Since the occasion when she played several harp solos to illustrate the tone color of the instrument at one of the concerts for young people was not a formal one, the appearance of Sylvia Meyer yesterday afternoon was her debut as soloist with the organization of which she has long been an invaluable member. The hearty welcome she received at her entrance, the demonstration between her two solo numbers, the sheaves of floral tributes, and a half dozen recalls represented the auditors' appreciation not only of her immediate delivery, but also of her faithful service.

With her virtuosic mastery of the harp Miss Meyer combines fine musical taste and intelligence. Her technique, so assured as to seem second nature, is the servant of musicianly instinct, and her readings have genuine accents of poesy. No harpist uncertain in dexterity could essay either the Debussy or the Ravel work without trepidation, and no one without as sure a sense of tonal beauty as Miss Meyer's could play them with the finesse she displayed.

To hear compositions of Debussy and Ravel side by side, as it were, was to be struck afresh by the fundamental differences in their temperaments. Opposite the dreaminess of Debussy, amounting almost to intellectual indolence, stood the Voltairian keeness of Ravel, acute and ironic. Debussy was most at home in the twilit regions of music, and even his bursts of brilliance have the evanescence of rockets against the night. Ravel sought the brightness of noon, and even his moods of quietude are lit with flashes of wit.

So pervasive are these traits that they are dominant in music designed to demonstrate virtuosity. Debussy wrote these dances to order, as test pieces for conservatory students of the chromatic harp, yet they are as indelibly imbued with his personality as though he had composed them in an irresistible impulse of inspiration. Ravel's Introduction and Allegro is also a test piece—for the performer in a concert hall—yet it sparkles as though he had been unable to repress his corruscating epigrams.

Dr. Kindler began the concert with that overture in which Mendelssohn came most closely in contact with a Wordworthian feeling for landscape. This is open-air music, unmistakable in its fresh and breezy atmosphere. One hears the surge of the sea in the undulant movement of the first measures, the crash of waves against cliffs in the crescendos, and the raucous cries of gulls wheeling above the tumultous waters. It is music filled too with that awed excitement which grandeur can awake where land and water meet in struggle, a stirring of emotion akin to joyous melancholy or sobered exultation.

That same lifting of the heart against a sombre weight of thought is discernible in the last movement of Brahms' C minor symphony.

There are doubts in this symphony, questionings addressed to an inscrutable universe, complainings of the tribulations endured, longings for an elysian peace, strivings against odds, yet all these fall behind when the theme of faith sounds forth. The meaning of the symphony may well be the triumphant emergence from a bewildered search, and that was the meaning that came from the fine reading which Dr. Kindler and his men gave it.

School Books Are Searched For Traces of Communism

Committee of 3 Named; Maurer, Georgetown, to Head Group.

He Wrote Volume On 'Constitution'

Report May Not Be Made Until After Yule Holidays.

The problem of so-called communistic textbooks in District schools was thrown yesterday into the hands of a Board of Education committee headed by a professor of Georgetown Law School, Robert Adam Maurer.

To the committee, the board president, Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, also appointed Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith and Dr. J. Hayden Johnson.

Board officers immediately turned over to the trio copies of three textbooks used in the senior high schools, "An Introduction to American Civilization" and "Changing Civilizations in the Modern World," both by Harold Rugg, and "Modern History," by Carl L. Becker.

May Take Several Weeks.

Maurer preferred not to estimate when the study would be completed, and Dr. Frank W. Ballou, school superintendent, had already pointed out that the communism sections of the books would not be reached in the course of study until after the Christmas vacation.

No deadline was set by Mrs. Doyle for the report, Maurer pointed out. Elsewhere it was predicted the study would last several weeks.

"We're going into it very carefully and deliberately," Maurer said last night. "We're going to go over every section that was criticized."

Inquiry Limited.

The study, he added, would embrace also eight supplementary readings suggested in the Becker book. But, "not unless the board tells us to," he said, would the committee go into the other textbooks used in the schools.

"There must be 35 to 50 books in the courses," he remarked.

The three books first turned over were the ones formally attacked by the Federation of Citizens Associations, through a special committee that appeared before the board on Wednesday.

The federation then asked that the persons responsible for the introduction of those books into the schools be revealed.

The board committee has only been instructed to study the books and file a report.

Maurer an Author.

Not only is Maurer, the chairman, a member of the board of education and a university professor, but he is the co-author of a textbook now used in the senior high schools in the eleventh grade, "The Constitution of the United States."

His co-author was George J. Jones, head of the history and social sciences department of the white high schools. The book was published in 1925.

From it, George E. Sullivan, attorney and member of the citizens' group, quoted approvingly in the course of his attack on the other books. Sullivan had charged that Rugg failed to credit constitutional guarantees of freedom for part of the high standard of American living. He quoted Maurer's book as follows:

"The Constitution is not a thing set apart and far removed from the people. Its guarantees are not remote. They touch the individual person directly and vitally in matters that affect his daily life. They do in reality establish justice, promote the happiness and welfare of the people and secure the blessings of liberty to all."

Says We're Indifferent.

"In the same unthinking and unquestioning spirit in which we enjoy the sunshine, we may now take these constitutional liberties very much as a matter of course. The rights other men struggled to ob-

"Is Roosevelt More Popular Than New Deal?"

The Literary Digest reports this week the first returns of a Nation-wide poll on the popularity of the New Deal. First returns indicate that the New Deal has lost considerable ground.

But what about Mr. Roosevelt? Is he more popular than his New Deal?

In Sunday's Washington Post the American Institute of Public Opinion will make its second monthly report on the current strength of President Roosevelt. In the light of recent elections in New York, Pennsylvania and Kentucky, this scientific analysis of the current political status of the 48 States is illuminating.

Tragic Story Revealed By Mother of Corinna

Mrs. Loring Describes Events Leading Up to Finding of Bride-to-Be's Body on Lonely Ridge; Girl Had No Enemies, Bereaved Parent Asserts.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Copyright, 1935, by The Washington Post.

For the first time, Mrs. George A. Loring told a reporter in her own words yesterday the story of events leading up to the mysterious disappearance of her daughter, Corinna, 27-year-old bride-to-be, the night of Monday, November 4.

In an exclusive interview the gray-haired mother described the suspense between the time of the girl's disappearance and the finding five days later of her battered and garroted body on bleak Saddleback Ridge, less than half a mile from her home at 3110 Beech street, Mount Rainier.

MRS. GEORGE A. LORING.

She told of efforts she made during those five long days to find her daughter; of the way she learned the body had been found.

But now, more than a week after Corinna's burial, Mrs. Loring still has no idea as to who may have murdered the girl only two days before the time appointed for her wedding to Richard Tear, attendant at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

"I can understand how someone might have a grudge against me, but Corinna had no enemies," the slain girl's mother declared.

She was sitting in the neat little living room of the Loring's white bungalow with Mr. Loring close by. Her cheeks were slightly flushed from the crisp air out-of-doors. She had just come in from hanging her washing in the back yard.

The grim, harassed expression so evident on the day of the funeral was gone. The lines of her mouth were soft. Frequently her cool blue eyes crinkled in an attempt at a smile. Her thick gray hair, brushed back softly from her forehead, framed a face that was pleasant in its expression.

When she referred to her daughter, Mrs. Loring frequently used the present tense as if the girl was alive and on her honeymoon instead of in a crypt at Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Occasionally the mother shook her head and said:

"It all seems like a bad dream. I just can't believe this terrible thing has happened. I still expect to see her walk through that front door as she used to."

Calmly Mrs. Loring reviewed that

New Assaults Are Launched On U. S. Laws

By Robert C. Albright.

Laboring under a staggering burden of New Deal litigation, the Government yesterday faced a new battery of business opposition to AAA processing taxes, watched additional suits take form in the lower courts, and heard the vast power industry openly defy utilities act legislation.

The new challenge to processing tax collection came from a group of lawyers headed by John W. Davis, former Democratic Presidential nominee, and member of the American Liberty League. In behalf of three corporations, Davis asked Supreme Court permission to join Hoosac Mills in testing processing tax validity.

Another group of reputed "friends of the farmer"—the League for Economic Equality—at the same time asked the right to intervene on the Government's side, while Solicitor General Stanley Reed appealed to the Supreme Court not to deny temporary injunction to Southern rice millers protesting processing tax collections.

Meanwhile, with only 9 days left in which to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the utilities act, the Consolidated Gas Co. of New York, and its subsidiaires, disclosed their intention not to register. All of the other large utility groups also are holding off, and defiance of the registration requirements may be general.

Other developments in the New Deal's legal clash with business over the constitutionality of laws were:

Vast Surplus To Stay Intact, Reserve Says

U. S. Money Experts Hold Danger of Inflation Is Slight.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Unanimity of opinion exists within the Federal Reserve system that the situation created by the unprecedented level of excess reserves, or idle money, is not one which calls for any affirmative action at the present time, it was reliably learned last night.

This was revealed following a two-day session of the Federal Reserve Advisory Council. The council, composed of 12 industrialists and financiers, each representing one of the Federal Reserve Banks, adjourned without making any recommendations to the Federal Reserve Board, which it was created to advise. The council, however, later may submit its attitude in writing to the reserve board.

The council met for several hours with the reserve board yesterday, discussing the reserve position of the system and proposed regulations governing bank loans on securities, under the 1934 Stock Exchange Control act. These regulations have not yet reached the stage of a tentative draft, although the reserve board's experts have been working on them for more than a year.

The council and board, with the latter's technical experts, discussed chiefly whether the formula or standard prescribed by Congress in the 1934 act for regulating loans on securities should be followed in applying the proposed restraints to the banks or whether a straight-out limitation or marginal requirement should not be prescribed.

The board used the standard specified by Congress as the basis for its

Ex-Sailor Arrested in Swindles Of Prominent Washingtonians

A former Navy enlisted man was held on Federal charges last night in a series of swindles by which Japanese and Chilean embassy officials and others prominent in Washington were duped into surrendering their cash.

The arrest in New York City on a charge of violating the Federal impersonation statute was announced last night by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation. Hoover at the same time gave a list of victims of the swindle. They were:

Hirosi Saito, the Japanese Ambassador; Benjamin Cohen, counselor of the Chilean Embassy; J. Harry Covington, Washington attorney and former justice of the District Supreme Court; George Thomas Dunlop, also a prominent Washington attorney, and Mrs. Custis R. Perry, wife of a Navy Yard draftsman, whose daughter is the wife of Lieut. William Lewis Benson, U. S. N.

Hoover said the man operated in New York and among socially prominent residents of Newport, R. I., as well as in Washington. Victims there Hoover announced as:

Mrs. James B. Duke, Newport social registerite; Dr. William Darrach, dean emeritus of the Columbia University Medical School; James H. Caldwell, a New York City attorney, and Maj. K. Iida, of the office of the Japanese army inspector at New York.

Hoover said the man was Carl Scheland, jr., 31, a native of Orange, N. J., where he attended the Orange High School before starting a life of adventure that included several years at sea both in naval and merchant vessels, gold prospecting in the Philippine Islands and, ac-

Hull Defends Trade Pact; Hits Critics

Reciprocal Agreements Held Only Alternative to Regimentation.

Hoover Attack Answered in Sharp Statement by Secretary.

Restoration of foreign markets through reciprocal trade agreements is the alternative to a straight and steady regimentation of American processes of production, transportation and distribution, Secretary of State Cordell Hull last night warned the country in defending the trade pact just concluded with Canada.

In a spirited statement, flaying "log-rolling lobbyists" and the Hawley-Smoot tariff act as attended by "reeking national scandal," Secretary Hull replied indirectly to the criticisms raised against the Canadian pact by former President Herbert Hoover.

He did not mention Mr. Hoover's name, but he undertook a detailed refutation of the latter's contention that the pact was another instance of "this hasty economic planning without full consideration of consequences." Mr. Hoover further complained that no opportunity had been granted for either public debate or adequate hearings on the pact's provisions.

Sharp Statement.

Secretary Hull, striking out against the "log-rolling method of the past," as exemplified in the Hawley-Smoot act signed by Mr. Hoover, explained that in the preparation of each trade agreement "hearings are given to all interested persons," with all invited to submit data and arguments covering every tariff item in question. He pointed out that it has taken from 6 to 12 months to negotiate each of these agreements. In particular, he recalled that work started on the Canadian pact last January.

But the Secretary of State did not stop by assailing the Hoover contentions. He reminded the country that unless it was willing to engage in foreign trade it must "inescapably restrict" its production to the domestic consuming capacity, with new waves of unemployment and "a permanent dole to many millions on a steadily increasing basis."

The tone of Secretary Hull's statement was surprisingly sharp and brittle, perhaps one of the sharpest statements ever to issue from the State Department, which is not in the habit of speaking outright and with sleeves rolled up.

Hits Professional Politicians.

He contended that the protests against the Canadian agreement recorded so far were confined "almost entirely to professional partisan politicians, or to some of the specially privileged individuals benefiting from excessive tariff rates." He noted that among the latter, however, there was "a noticeable division of opinion."

Hull contended that no one questions "the broad economic benefits which will result to the Nation as a whole" and that "from the standpoint of both agriculture and industry the soundness of this trade agreement is clear." He further claimed that the reciprocal trade program had the support of "probably 85 per cent of the press of the Nation."

The Hull statement clearly indicated that the Administration is determined to defend not only the Canadian pact but the entire reciprocal trade program and that the controversy will not go by default to those fighting the reductions in the American tariff wall. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace has been as ardent in his defense of the pact as Secretary Hull.

Mr. Wallace, having issued detailed statements regarding the pact on Monday and Wednesday, yesterday told the country's farmers in a radio broadcast not to be misled in this matter by the "enemies of agriculture." He described the pact as one of the "most hopeful and help-

Sea Flares Revive Hope for 2 Fliers

Plane Sent to Island Seeking Kingsford-Smith.

By the Associated Press.

Singapore (Friday) Nov. 22.—The captain of the Steamer Pasha wirelessed early today he had sighted flares on Sayer Island, shortly before midnight last night, giving rise to hopes here that they might have been lighted by Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, missing Australian flier.

Sayer Island is off the west coast of Siam in the Bay of Bengal, and it was believed the Australian and his companion, J. Thomas Pethybridge, who were lost November 8 while on a projected London-to-Australia flight, might have been forced down there.

Western Montana Hit By Severe Earthquake

Helena, Mont., Nov. 21 (U.P.).—Western Montana was rocked for several seconds by one of the heaviest earth movements felt here since the major quake of October 31.

The quake was timed at 9:01 p. m. (M. S. T.) Furniture danced and buildings creaked alarmingly. No damage was discernible immediately.

Cairo's Police Quell Rioters; 50 Are Jailed

7 Injured as Thousands Hold 'Mourning Day' Demonstration.

General Strike Attempt Fails; British Fleet Displays Power.

Yesterday's Rioting.

Seven native policemen were injured and 50 rioters arrested in Cairo demonstrations on the anti-British "day of mourning."

Arabs battled British traffic policemen in Jerusalem at the funeral of three alleged gangsters. Four were seriously wounded.

Anti-Jewish rioting in Budapest spread to the provincial towns after police had used sabers to disperse a mob. Many were wounded.

Anti-Czech demonstrators in Warsaw smashed 11 windows in the Czech legation. Police, meanwhile, sought to curb student activities directed at Jews.

By the Associated Press.

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 21.—Fifty rioters were arrested and seven native policemen injured in short-lived disorders today on Cairo's anti-British "day of mourning."

Tram windows and street lamps were smashed and some shops damaged by several thousand hooligans and a few students. For three hours paving stones were tossed about freely, but order was restored tonight and the rioters vanished.

Students, who called the "day of mourning" for their comrades slain in last week's anti-British riots, failed, however, to effect a hoped-for general strike.

Egyptian Nationalists did not join in the demonstrations as groups. A projected lawyers' strike failed, many barristers doing business as usual.

In the native quarter, some merchants draped their doors in mourning and when an American correspondent drove through the district his Arab dragoman was kept busy shouting: "American—not British!"

Cairo's famed bazaar also was shut down.

Britain Shows Power.

Off Alexandria, Great Britain's mighty armada staged one of the greatest naval displays in the history of the Eastern Mediterranean, but instead of a gesture of war, the maneuvers provided a thrilling show for Egyptian officials.

Premier Nessim Pasha and his cabinet, Prince Mohammed Ali and other dignitaries saw an impressive parade by the battle squadron of five battleships, six cruisers and two aircraft carriers. Fifty planes dropped smoke bombs and 18 destroyers laid down a 15-mile smoke screen.

The battleships smashed targets 11 miles away, each ship hurling 20 tons of steel out to sea.

Native police fired several times over the heads of ruffians intent on closing shops in side and back streets, and dispersed the mobs many times with stout clubs.

Police Stoned.

Some merchants closed their shutters and windows in other shops were broken as the hooligans demonstrated against British domination and the stand of Premier Nessim.

Several national police were stoned outside the headquarters of the leading nationalist society, WAFD.

Although 5,000 native police and soldiers were stationed throughout the city, ready for any trouble, British police who fought last week with students kept in the background and it was understood Premier Nessim had given orders today's demonstrators were not to be fired upon.

A close check of hospitals disclosed no casualties tonight. Shops and bazaars reopened and police reported all was quiet. Gay crowds returned to the streets.

Freezing Weather Due Here Tonight

Season's Low in Prospect, Says Forecaster.

Washington can expect winter temperature sometime tonight. The Weather Bureau last night predicted the mercury would go below anything recorded this season. Below freezing temperatures are expected.

The forecast for today was fair and colder, with temperatures sliding toward the freezing point at sundown.

Over a wide area of the Middle West winter appeared to have set in a month ahead of time. The Associated Press reported snow and biting temperatures in a half-dozen States.

North Dakota had the lowest temperature, 12 below zero at Minot, and the most snow, enough in some places to make highways impassable. Southern Minnesota got some snow and in northern Iowa the fall was 2 inches. Snow flurries dusted the ground in the Chicago area, where the forecast was for temperatures in the 20s tonight.

Ethiopians Rout Foes; Il Duce Reduces Army; Cut Off Oil, Ickes Urges

Asks Producers to Halt Shipments of Product to Italians.

U. S. Edges Closer To Rome Reprisals

Interior Head's Action May Involve America in Sanctions.

By Felix Bruner.

Secretary Ickes, oil administrator, yesterday called upon American oil producers to halt voluntarily their shipments to Italy.

Explaining that he had "no authority at all," the Secretary of the Interior nevertheless added that producers "should comply both in letter and in spirit to the efforts of the Government to prevent shipments of munitions to belligerents."

Simultaneously, Ickes made public a report of the Bureau of Mines showing that exports of motor fuel were higher in September than in August and explaining that this indicates "that the stimulation in this trade is due to the war scares and other factors," which the bureau said outweighed the usual seasonal decline.

The bureau added that for this reason the estimate of exports of gasoline for December has been raised to 2,400,000 barrels from the estimate of 2,310,000 barrels in November.

Ickes' statement is in line with the recent statement of Secretary Hull, referring to shipment of oil, copper, trucks and iron to belligerents as being "directly contrary to the policy of the Government."

From Rome the Associated Press reported that well-informed sources said the United States is edging ever closer to inclusion in Italy's list of nations to be dealt with by economic reprisals.

May Cripple Army.

The dispatch said that official comment on the request of Ickes was withheld pending details. It added that spokesmen did not disguise the Government's feeling that suggestions of this sort tend to place the United States in the "sanctionist" category.

Rome observers were said to believe that if United States oil is cut off, Italy will have trouble in obtaining fuel and lubricating oil for the machanized army in Africa. Between January and September of this year Italy imported 467,299 quintales of lubricating oil, of which 404,347 quintales came from the United States. America supplied little of Italy's gasoline, but this country is the chief source aside from the sanctionist countries.

An Associated Press dispatch from Houston, Tex., reported a general disposition among oil companies to heed Ickes' appeal. Officials of the Humble Oil & Refining Co., Shell Petroleum Corporation, Gulf Oil Co. and Tidewater-Seaboard Co. were quoted to that effect.

From Geneva the Associated Press reported that Ickes' request to the oil industry was considered in League of Nations circles a helpful step toward realization of an embargo on oil.

"Genius of Each Nation."

The League's committee of 18 on sanctions will meet next week to consider the possibility of fixing a date for an embargo on the exportation to Italy of oil, coal, iron and steel.

In a radio talk last night Attorney General Cummings referred to the neutrality policy as a "true reflection of the national thought."

"Each nation, of course, must approach this problem within the genius of its own institutions," he said, "in the light of its own growth and according to the will and temper of its people.

"So far as ooncerns our own country, I think our Government has given a true reflection of the

Tokyo Cabinet Faces Ouster In China Crisis

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Friday), Nov. 22.—Sources close to the government said Japanese militarists and opposing civilian leaders faced a showdown today over the North China situation, with the life of the cabinet possibly in the balance.

The issue was expected to be debated by the cabinet, with Foreign Minister Koki Hirota leading the civilian group, and Gen. Yoshiyuki Kawashima, minister of war, representing the militarists.

Hirota, informed sources said, favors a compromise which would allow the Chinese national government to retain a considerable degree of authority in the five northern provinces.

This plan was recommended by Akira Ariyoshi, Ambassador to China, who consulted with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, Chinese National government leader, in Nanking yesterday.

The proposed declaration of autonomy by the five provinces has been "postponed for the time being" in response to the urgent instructions of Chiang Kai-Shek, the Rengo (Japanese) News Agency reported from Tientsin.

This decision, the agency continued, was "reached at a conference of northern leaders convened in Tientsin by Gen. Sung Chen-Yuan (commander of the Peiping-Tientsin garrison), who arrived hurriedly from Peiping."

The newspaper Asahi said when Ambassador Ariyoshi submitted his compromise plan to Tokyo, he said: "This is likely to be my last service to the Emperor," indicating he would resign if militarists have their way. Ariyoshi has been accused by militarists of being too soft in dealing with the Chinese.

An official source said the independence plan was held up when the army high command here issued an order saying officers participating in Chinese separatist movements were exceeding their

Raiders Dispersed By Italian Askaris

100,000 Furloughed by Mussolini to Fight Economic Siege.

The War Crisis.

Ethiopia's southern forces in an offensive south of Daggah Bur were reported to have captured four Italian tanks and many prisoners.

Italian native Askaris routed a band of Ras Seyoum's raiders in the north.

Premier Mussolini ordered furloughs for 100,000 soldiers in order that they might return to the farms and factories to aid the fight against sanctions.

Emperor Haile Selassie returned to Addis Ababa from a quick air trip to inspect his troops in the field. The Emperor was understood to have issued battle orders at Jijiga.

Secretary Ickes asked oil producers not to ship to belligerents. Rome interpreted the request as indicating the United States is showing an inclination to join sanctionist nations.

Jijiga, by telephone to Harar, Nov. 21.—Spurred by a daring airplane visit of Emperor Haile Selassie, Ethiopian troops today launched an offensive south of Daggah Bur, and under heavy bombardment captured four Italian tanks and many prisoners.

The king of kings exhorted his soldiers to win the Ogaden campaign or stand responsible for Ethiopia's complete defeat. The answer from Dejazmatch Nassibu was a command to hurl back the Italian columns advancing up the Fanfan Valley toward Jijiga.

British Go to Front.

After bidding farewell to Nassibu, E. A. Chapman Andrews, British consul at Harar, and Capt. R. H. R. Taylor, military observer, left for Daggah Bur to watch the fighting. They will be the only Caucasians in the war area except Dr. Robert Hockman, of Wheaton, Ill., and his two British assistants, who are maintaining a Red Cross field hospital at Daggah Bud under severe bombardment.

The most serious clash of the war to date was anticipated near Jijiga soon. Huge clouds of smoke were seen rolling skyward, apparently either heavy bombing beyond Jijiga or exploding ammunition dumps.

Today, the Emperor conferred at length with his officers at Nassibu's headquarters and then left by automobile for Harar. After a brief visit to the scene of his earlier governorship, he continued to Diredawa, where he entered his plane and returned to Addis Ababa.

The Emperor, dressed in a khaki uniform, woolen puttees, black shoes and a cloak, was accompanied by Abbe Behana, high priest and ranking second abunda of the Coptic Christian Church. He gave his benediction to the troops on the eve of the battle.

Arrives in Touring Car.

Haile Selassie arrived at Harrar from Jijiga under the cover of night, unheralded, riding in a touring car with his chief of staff. Bodyguards rode before and after the Emperor's machine in two trucks.

After praying, the Emperor visited the tomb he is building at Harar for his father's remains, then went to the hospitals, where he spoke to each man.

"It is a good fight for your country," he told the wounded. "You are good Ethiopians!"

He received the soldiers before departing. They prostrated themselves and kissed his feet.

It was understood the Emperor's visit to Ogaden headquarters will be followed by a similar one to the northern front in a final effort to bolster his troops' morale, demanding that his warriors take the offensive and deal the Italians a staggering blow.

Mother of 16 'Sorry in a Way,' Yet 17th May Win $500,000

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, Nov. 21.—A 36-year-old mother of 16 children, who thinks "birth control is a wonderful thing," entered herself today in Toronto's $500,000 "baby race."

She is Mrs. Arthur Hollis Timleck, who claims to have given birth to nine babies in the last nine years. A tenth is expected within a few months, she said. Thirteen of the 16 children she bore are living.

Under the will of the late Charles Vance Millar, half a million dollars will be awarded in October, 1936, to the Toronto mother who has borne the greatest number of children in the previous 10 years.

Mrs. Timleck's husband, who is 38, is employed in motorboat work. The Timlecks have had to go on relief occasionally during the last few years.

"I think birth control is a wonderful thing," she asserted. "I'm sorry, in one way, birth control information was not available for people years ago. I know mothers who would have welcomed such knowledge."

The Timlecks think they have a good chance to win, or at least tie, for the fortune. They said Mrs. Matthew Kenney's claim of 11 eligible children is disputed by other candidates.

Mrs. Joseph Bagnato and Mrs. John Nagle each report nine children in the ten-year period, and Mrs. Stefano Darrigo, Mrs. Ambrose Harrison and Mrs. Gus Graziano, eight apiece.

If she wins the money, Mrs. Timleck said she would use it for the advancement of her children.

"I'd like to have a housekeeper to help with the smaller ones," she explained. "Thirteen children is too much for one woman to handle."

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Characters.

New York, Nov. 21.

MOST vivid of the Broadway residents are some of the characters who enliven the stem, give it tone and color and warmth . . . If it weren't for them, Broadway would just be a collection of paving blocks and mazdas; they clothe the alley in flesh and blood . . . For instance, there's Red Nose Whitey and Mother MacFadden and Cheesecake Ike . . . there's Swifty Morgan and Broadway Sam, Cockeye Beck, Commodore Dutch and Louie the Louse . . . there's Dollar John and big Dick Butler, Two Per Cent Sam and the Sunny Faced Kid . . . Sir Joseph Ginsberg, Prince Mike Romanoff and the Count give the street a touch of jovial royalty . . . some of the nicknames interpret themselves . . . Dollar John, once wealthy, got his by giving away dollar bills to stemmers in the days of his effulgence . . . Mother MacFadden, who now rents out a private car in front of the Hotel Pennsylvania, got his by mothering Vincent Lopez when he chauffeured for him . . . Commodore Dutch is a snaggle-toothed admiral without a navy, and once a year his friends attend the annual Commodore Dutch ball, which stakes him for the ensuing year . . . Two Per Cent Sam won his sobriquet by his betting system . . . he bets for and against, laying off one against the other so that he always is sure of a 2 per cent profit.

• • • •

Cheesecake Ike undoubtedly has eaten more cheesecake in Lindy's than any five New Yorkers . . . Peer into the booth here he sits and you will see him topping off each meal with a slice of the cake employed in his christening . . . Dick Butler is the bulky West Sider who smuggled Harry K. Thaw out of Matteawan . . . Butler used a milk wagon as his Trojan horse to get inside the asylum gates, and when his steed clanked out of the courtyard, Thaw was hidden in the wagon . . . Broadway Sam is one of the town's better-known ticket specs . . . Six feet 4 inches tall, always immaculately attired, with a flower in his lapel and an expensive cigar in his teeth, Broadway Sam looks like money from home . . . The big fellow is very charitable, staking dozens of former actors, now down on their luck . . . Sir Joseph Ginsberg attached himself some years ago to the retinue of Willie and Eugene Howard, and they've kept him for laughs, just as W. C. Fields once employed Vince Barnett.

• • • •

Newspaper offices are familiar with Johnny Uptown, who for 40 years has supplied editors with their batches of papers, from edition to edition . . . He knew the elder Bennett, Dana, Munsey and Stoddard, and he recalls the days when funerals used to pass over the Long Island bridges, with troupes of professional mourners uttering loud laments for the deceased—though they had never seen him . . . Artie Hitchman is another ticket spec, who attempts to rival the gorgeous apparel of Broadway Sam . . . When Jimmy Walker, Artie's idol, returned from Europe, every photo showed youthful Hitchman standing directly behind Walker . . . He probably had to fell hundreds of others to get within focus, but he got there . . . Swifty Morgan, a great friend of mine, is about 5 feet 3 inches short, and a character who might have stepped out of a Wilson Mizner folio . . . He sells jewelry or real estate or horses, and it's a pleasure to buy from him, just to hear his amazingly picturesque language.

• • • •

Senator Wild Bill Lyons, who first bobbed up around here with Jack Kearns and Jack Dempsey, and is now a friend of Postmaster General Jim Farley, is a great character . . . He says he is the first white child born in Texas, still carries the six-shooter which he alleges he used with the Texas Rangers, and startles you by yanking a sword out of the cane he carries with him . . . Pitzy Katz is a little chap in great demand around town for his Jewish dialect stories . . . He travels with a chap, whose name I forget, who has a deadly fear of fish, alive or dead . . . Pitzy, when the evening gets dull, sends a waiter out for a fresh mackerel, produces it suddenly, and his pal goes into a frenzy . . . Violinsky is another raconteur, but my pet dialectician offstage is Sam Lyon . . . Two-Gun Murphy is still around town . . . He used to be a narcotic agent, but now works for a private detective agency . . . And Sam Boston, the betting commissioner, must not be overlooked in any such poll, nor Broadway Rose, who applies the bite for quarters and half dollars . . . Apple Annie, Runyon heroine, is dead.

Fourth Death Is Attributed To Poison Soda

Three More Ill as San Francisco Continues Search for Stuff's Source.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 21.—A fourth death and three more illnesses ascribed tentatively to poisoned baking soda spurred authorities tonight to intensify their search for the source of the lethal compound.

George Purnaras, 45, a dishwasher, died in convulsions today, a few hours after taking bicarbonate of soda.

Deputy Coroner Anthony Trabucco said the soda was from a different source than that blamed for three other recent deaths and 21 illnesses.

He investigated to determine if the dishwasher might have died from another ailment, however, when the proprietor of the restaurant reported he had been using the soda in cooking. None of his customers had complained, the restaurant owner said.

Trabucco seized the package Purnaras used for chemical analysis.

The latest death came as officers were attempting to determine how 800 pounds of household soda, repacked from damaged packages by a salvage company, had become contaminated by two deadly poisons.

Theories of accident and mass murder plotting were advanced, both without substantiation.

Coroner T. B. Leland advanced a theory the original 800 pounds of poisoned soda might have been scraped from the hold of a ship or the floor of a freight car, becoming contaminated in that way. The salvage company that repacked it does not deal in poisons, he said.

Joseph Rosenthal, proprietor of the store where the soda was retailed, and Nick Manno, head of the salvage company, were arraigned on charges of selling contaminated food. Their hearing was delayed until December 2 to permit time for an inquest.

Postlude . . . .

By Ray C. B. Brown

National Symphony Orchestra, Hans Kindler, conductor; Sylvia Meyer, harp soloist; Constitution Hall, Thursday afternoon. Program: "Fingal's Cave" Overture (Mendelssohn), "Danse Sacree et Danse Profane" (Debussy), Introduction et Allegro (Ravel), Symphony No. 1 in C minor (Brahms).

Since the occasion when she played several harp solos to illustrate the tone color of the instrument at one of the concerts for young people was not a formal one, the appearance of Sylvia Meyer yesterday afternoon was her debut as soloist with the organization of which she has long been an invaluable member. The hearty welcome she received at her entrance, the demonstration between her two solo numbers, the sheaves of floral tributes, and a half dozen recalls represented the auditors' appreciation not only of her immediate delivery, but also of her faithful service.

With her virtuosic mastery of the harp Miss Meyer combines fine musical taste and intelligence. Her technique, so assured as to seem second nature, is the servant of musicianly instinct, and her readings have genuine accents of poesy. No harpist uncertain in dexterity could essay either the Debussy or the Ravel work without trepidation, and no one without as sure a sense of tonal beauty as Miss Meyer's could play them with the finesse she displayed.

To hear compositions of Debussy and Ravel side by side, as it were, was to be struck afresh by the fundamental differences in their temperaments. Opposite the dreaminess of Debussy, amounting almost to intellectual indolence, stood the Voltairian keeness of Ravel, acute and ironic. Debussy was most at home in the twilit regions of music, and even his bursts of brilliance have the evanescence of rockets against the night. Ravel sought the brightness of noon, and even his moods of quietude are lit with flashes of wit.

So pervasive are these traits that they are dominant in music designed to demonstrate virtuosity. Debussy wrote these dances to order, as test pieces for conservatory students of the chromatic harp, yet they are as indelibly imbued with his personality as though he had composed them in an irresistible impulse of inspiration. Ravel's Introduction and Allegro is also a test piece—for the performer in a concert hall—yet it sparkles as though he had been unable to repress his corruscating epigrams.

Dr. Kindler began the concert with that overture in which Mendelssohn came most closely in contact with a Wordworthian feeling for landscape. This is open-air music, unmistakable in its fresh and breezy atmosphere. One hears the surge of the sea in the undulant movement of the first measures, the crash of waves against cliffs in the crescendos, and the raucous cries of gulls wheeling above the tumultous waters. It is music filled too with that awed excitement which grandeur can awake where land and water meet in struggle, a stirring of emotion akin to joyous melancholy or sobered exultation.

That same lifting of the heart against a sombre weight of thought is discernible in the last movement of Brahms' C minor symphony.

There are doubts in this symphony, questionings addressed to an inscrutable universe, complainings of the tribulations endured, longings for an elysian peace, strivings against odds, yet all these fall behind when the theme of faith sounds forth. The meaning of the symphony may well be the triumphant emergence from a bewildered search, and that was the meaning that came from the fine reading which Dr. Kindler and his men gave it.

School Books Are Searched For Traces of Communism

Committee of 3 Named; Maurer, Georgetown, to Head Group.

He Wrote Volume On 'Constitution'

Report May Not Be Made Until After Yule Holidays.

The problem of so-called communistic textbooks in District schools was thrown yesterday into the hands of a Board of Education committee headed by a professor of Georgetown Law School, Robert Adam Maurer.

To the committee, the board president, Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, also appointed Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith and Dr. J. Hayden Johnson.

Board officers immediately turned over to the trio copies of three textbooks used in the senior high schools, "An Introduction to American Civilization" and "Changing Civilizations in the Modern World," both by Harold Rugg, and "Modern History," by Carl L. Becker.

May Take Several Weeks.

Maurer preferred not to estimate when the study would be completed, and Dr. Frank W. Ballou, school superintendent, had already pointed out that the communism sections of the books would not be reached in the course of study until after the Christmas vacation.

No deadline was set by Mrs. Doyle for the report, Maurer pointed out. Elsewhere it was predicted the study would last several weeks.

"We're going into it very carefully and deliberately," Maurer said last night. "We're going to go over every section that was criticized."

Inquiry Limited.

The study, he added, would embrace also eight supplementary readings suggested in the Becker book. But, "not unless the board tells us to," he said, would the committee go into the other textbooks used in the schools.

"There must be 35 to 50 books in the courses," he remarked.

The three books first turned over were the ones formally attacked by the Federation of Citizens Associations, through a special committee that appeared before the board on Wednesday.

The federation then asked that the persons responsible for the introduction of those books into the schools be revealed.

The board committee has only been instructed to study the books and file a report.

Maurer an Author.

Not only is Maurer, the chairman, a member of the board of education and a university professor, but he is the co-author of a textbook now used in the senior high schools in the eleventh grade, "The Constitution of the United States."

His co-author was George J. Jones, head of the history and social sciences department of the white high schools. The book was published in 1925.

From it, George E. Sullivan, attorney and member of the citizens' group, quoted approvingly in the course of his attack on the other books. Sullivan had charged that Rugg failed to credit constitutional guarantees of freedom for part of the high standard of American living. He quoted Maurer's book as follows:

"The Constitution is not a thing set apart and far removed from the people. Its guarantees are not remote. They touch the individual person directly and vitally in matters that affect his daily life. They do in reality establish justice, promote the happiness and welfare of the people and secure the blessings of liberty to all."

Says We're Indifferent.

"In the same unthinking and unquestioning spirit in which we enjoy the sunshine, we may now take these constitutional liberties very much as a matter of course. The rights other men struggled to ob-

"Is Roosevelt More Popular Than New Deal?"

The Literary Digest reports this week the first returns of a Nationwide poll on the popularity of the New Deal. First returns indicate that the New Deal has lost considerable ground.

But what about Mr. Roosevelt? Is he more popular than his New Deal?

In Sunday's Washington Post the American Institute of Public Opinion will make its second monthly report on the current strength of President Roosevelt. In the light of recent elections in New York, Pennsylvania and Kentucky, this scientific analysis of the current political status of the 48 States is illuminating.

Tragic Story Revealed By Mother of Corinna

Mrs. Loring Describes Events Leading Up to Finding of Bride-to-Be's Body on Lonely Ridge; Girl Had No Enemies, Bereaved Parent Asserts.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Copyright, 1935, by The Washington Post.

For the first time, Mrs. George A. Loring told a reporter in her own words yesterday the story of events leading up to the mysterious disappearance of her daughter, Corinna, 27-year-old bride-to-be, the night of Monday, November 4.

In an exclusive interview the gray-haired mother described the suspense between the time of the girl's disappearance and the finding five days later of her battered and garroted body on bleak Saddleback Ridge, less than half a mile from her home at 3110 Beech street, Mount Rainier.

She told of efforts she made during those five long days to find her daughter; of the way she learned the body had been found.

But now, more than a week after Corinna's burial, Mrs. Loring still has no idea as to who may have murdered the girl only two days before the time appointed for her wedding to Richard Tear, attendant at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

"I can understand how someone might have a grudge against me, but Corinna had no enemies," the slain girl's mother declared.

She was sitting in the neat little living room of the Loring's white bungalow with Mr. Loring close by. Her cheeks were slightly flushed from the crisp air out-of-doors. She had just come in from hanging her washing in the back yard.

The grim, harassed expression so evident on the day of the funeral was gone. The lines of her mouth were soft. Frequently her cool blue eyes crinkled in an attempt at a smile. Her thick gray hair, brushed back softly from her forehead, framed a face that was pleasant in its expression.

When she referred to her daughter, Mrs. Loring frequently used the present tense as if the girl was alive and on her honeymoon instead of in a crypt at Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Occasionally the mother shook her head and said:

"It all seems like a bad dream. I just can't believe this terrible thing has happened. I still expect to see her walk through that front door as she used to."

By Robert C. Albright.

Laboring under a staggering burden of New Deal litigation, the Government yesterday faced a new battery of business opposition to AAA processing taxes, watched additional suits take form in the lower courts, and heard the vast power industry openly defy utilities act legislation.

The new challenge to processing tax collection came from a group of lawyers headed by John W. Davis, former Democratic Presidential nominee, and member of the American Liberty League. In behalf of three corporations, Davis asked Supreme Court permission to join Hoosac Mills in testing processing tax validity.

Another group of reputed "friends of the farmer"—the League for Economic Equality—at the same time asked the right to intervene on the Government's side, while Solicitor General Stanley Reed appealed to the Supreme Court not to deny temporary injunction to Southern rice millers protesting processing tax collections.

Meanwhile, with only 9 days left in which to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the utilities act, the Consolidated Gas Co. of New York, and its subsidiaires, disclosed their intention not to register. All of the other large utility groups also are holding off, and defiance of the registration requirements may be general.

Other developments in the New Deal's legal clash with business over the constitutionality of laws were:

Burco, Inc., intervening creditor

Vast Surplus To Stay Intact, Reserve Says

U. S. Money Experts Hold Danger of Inflation Is Slight.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Unanimity of opinion exists within the Federal Reserve system that the situation created by the unprecedented level of excess reserves, or idle money, is not one which calls for any affirmative action at the present time, it was reliably learned last night.

This was revealed following a two-day session of the Federal Reserve Advisory Council. The council, composed of 12 industrialists and financiers, each representing one of the Federal Reserve Banks, adjourned without making any recommendations to the Federal Reserve Board, which it was created to advise. The council, however, later may submit its attitude in writing to the reserve board.

The council met for several hours with the reserve board yesterday, discussing the reserve position of the system and proposed regulations governing bank loans on securities, under the 1934 Stock Exchange Control act. These regulations have not yet reached the stage of a tentative draft, although the reserve board's experts have been working on them for more than a year.

The council and board, with the latter's technical experts, discussed chiefly whether the formula or standard prescribed by Congress in the 1934 act for regulating loans on securities should be followed in applying the proposed restraints to the banks or whether a straight-out limitation or marginal requirement should not be prescribed.

The board used the standard specified by Congress as the basis for its

Ex-Sailor Arrested in Swindles Of Prominent Washingtonians

A former Navy enlisted man was held on Federal charges last night in a series of swindles by which Japanese and Chilean embassy officials and others prominent in Washington were duped into surrendering their cash.

The arrest in New York City on a charge of violating the Federal impersonation statute was announced last night by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation. Hoover at the same time gave a list of victims of the swindle. They were:

Hirosi Saito, the Japanese Ambassador; Benjamin Cohen, counselor of the Chilean Embassy; J. Harry Covington, Washington attorney and former justice of the District Supreme Court; George Thomas Dunlop, also a prominent Washington attorney, and Mrs. Custis R. Perry, wife of a Navy Yard draftsman, whose daughter is the wife of Lieut. William Lewis Benson, U. S. N.

Hoover said the man operated in New York and among socially prominent residents of Newport, R. I., as well as in Washington. Victims there Hoover announced as:

Mrs. James B. Duke, Newport social registerite; Dr. William Darrach, dean emeritus of the Columbia University Medical School; James H. Caldwell, a New York City attorney, and Maj. K. Iida, of the office of the Japanese army inspector at New York.

Hoover said the man was Carl Scheland, jr., 31, a native of Orange, N. J., where he attended the Orange High School before starting a life of adventure that included several years at sea both in naval and merchant vessels, gold prospecting in the Philippine Islands and, ac-

Hull Defends Trade Pact; Hits Critics

Reciprocal Agreements Held Only Alternative to Regimentation.

Hoover Attack Answered in Sharp Statement by Secretary.

Restoration of foreign markets through reciprocal trade agreements is the alternative to a straight and steady regimentation of American processes of production, transportation and distribution, Secretary of State Cordell Hull last night warned the country in defending the trade pact just concluded with Canada.

In a spirited statement, flaying "log-rolling lobbyists" and the Hawley-Smoot tariff act as attended by "reeking national scandal," Secretary Hull replied indirectly to the criticisms raised against the Canadian pact by former President Herbert Hoover.

He did not mention Mr. Hoover's name, but he undertook a detailed refutation of the latter's contention that the pact was another instance of "this hasty economic planning without full consideration of consequences." Mr. Hoover further complained that no opportunity had been granted for either public debate or adequate hearings on the pact's provisions.

Sharp Statement.

Secretary Hull, striking out against the "log-rolling method of the past," as exemplified in the Hawley-Smoot act signed by Mr. Hoover, explained that in the preparation of each trade agreement "hearings are given to all interested persons," with all invited to submit data and arguments covering every tariff item in question. He pointed out that it has taken from 6 to 12 months to negotiate each of these agreements. In particular, he recalled that work started on the Canadian pact last January.

But the Secretary of State did not stop by assailing the Hoover contentions. He reminded the country that unless it was willing to engage in foreign trade it must "inescapably restrict" its production to the domestic consuming capacity, with new waves of unemployment and "a permanent dole to many millions on a steadily increasing basis."

The tone of Secretary Hull's statement was surprisingly sharp and brittle, perhaps one of the sharpest statements ever to issue from the State Department, which is not in the habit of speaking outright and with sleeves rolled up.

Hits Professional Politicians.

He contended that the protests against the Canadian agreement recorded so far were confined "almost entirely to professional partisan politicians, or to some of the specially privileged individuals benefiting from excessive tariff rates." He noted that among the latter, however, there was "a noticeable division of opinion."

Hull contended that no one questions "the broad economic benefits which will result to the Nation as a whole" and that "from the standpoint of both agriculture and industry the soundness of this trade agreement is clear." He further claimed that the reciprocal trade program had the support of "probably 85 per cent of the press of the Nation."

The Hull statement clearly indicated that the Administration is determined to defend not only the Canadian pact but the entire reciprocal trade program and that the controversy will not go by default to those fighting the reductions in the American tariff wall. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace has been as ardent in his defense of the pact as Secretary Hull.

Mr. Wallace, having issued detailed statements regarding the pact on Monday and Wednesday, yesterday told the country's farmers in a radio broadcast not to be misled in this matter by the "enemies of agriculture." He described the pact as one of the "most hopeful and help-

Sea Flares Revive Hope for 2 Fliers

Plane Sent to Island Seeking Kingsford-Smith.

By the Associated Press.

Singapore (Friday) Nov. 22.—The captain of the Steamer Pasha wirelessed early today he had sighted flares on Sayer Island, shortly before midnight last night, giving rise to hopes here that they might have been lighted by Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, missing Australian flier.

Sayer Island is off the west coast of Siam in the Bay of Bengal, and it was believed the Australian and his companion, J. Thomas Pethybridge, who were lost November 8 while on a projected London-to-Australia flight, might have been forced down there.

Western Montana Hit By Severe Earthquake

Helena, Mont., Nov. 21 (U.P.).—Western Montana was rocked for several seconds by one of the heaviest earth movements felt here since the major quake of October 31.

The quake was timed at 9:01 p. m. (M. S. T.) Furniture danced and buildings creaked alarmingly. No damage was discernible immediately.

Cairo's Police Quell Rioters; 50 Are Jailed

7 Injured as Thousands Hold 'Mourning Day' Demonstration.

General Strike Attempt Fails; British Fleet Displays Power.

Yesterday's Rioting.

Seven native policemen were injured and 50 rioters arrested in Cairo demonstrations on the anti-British "day of mourning."

Arabs battled British traffic policemen in Jerusalem at the funeral of three alleged gangsters. Four were seriously wounded.

Anti-Jewish rioting in Budapest spread to the provincial towns after police had used sabers to disperse a mob. Many were wounded.

Anti-Czech demonstrators in Warsaw smashed 11 windows in the Czech legation. Police, meanwhile, sought to curb student activities directed at Jews.

By the Associated Press.

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 21.—Fifty rioters were arrested and seven native policemen injured in short-lived disorders today on Cairo's anti-British "day of mourning."

Tram windows and street lamps were smashed and some shops damaged by several thousand hooligans and a few students. For three hours paving stones were tossed about freely, but order was restored tonight and the rioters vanished.

Students, who called the "day of mourning" for their comrades slain in last week's anti-British riots, failed, however, to effect a hoped-for general strike.

Egyptian Nationalists did not join in the demonstrations as groups. A projected lawyers' strike failed, many barristers doing business as usual.

In the native quarter, some merchants draped their doors in mourning and when an American correspondent drove through the district his Arab dragoman was kept busy shouting: "American—not British!" Cairo's famed bazaar also was shut down.

Britain Shows Power.

Off Alexandria, Great Britain's mighty armada staged one of the greatest naval displays in the history of the Eastern Mediterranean, but instead of a gesture of war, the maneuvers provided a thrilling show for Egyptian officials.

Premier Nessim Pasha and his cabinet, Prince Mohammed Ali and other dignitaries saw an impressive parade by the battle squadron of five battleships, six cruisers and two aircraft carriers. Fifty planes dropped smoke bombs and 18 destroyers laid down a 15-mile smoke screen.

The battleships smashed targets 11 miles away, each ship hurling 20 tons of steel out to sea.

Native police fired several times over the heads of ruffians intent on closing shops in side and back streets, and dispersed the mobs many times with stout clubs.

Police Stoned.

Some merchants closed their shutters and windows in other shops were broken as the hooligans demonstrated against British domination and the stand of Premier Nessim.

Several national police were stoned outside the headquarters of the leading nationalist society, WAFD.

Although 5,000 native police and soldiers were stationed throughout the city, ready for any trouble, British police who fought last week with students kept in the background and it was understood Premier Nessim had given orders today's demonstrators were not to be fired upon.

A close check of hospitals disclosed no casualties tonight. Shops and bazaars reopened and police reported all was quiet. Gay crowds returned to the streets.

Freezing Weather Due Here Tonight

Season's Low in Prospect, Says Forecaster.

Washington can expect winter temperature sometime tonight. The Weather Bureau last night predicted the mercury would go below anything recorded this season. Below freezing temperatures are expected.

The forecast for today was fair and colder, with temperatures sliding toward the freezing point at sundown.

Over a wide area of the Middle West winter appeared to have set in a month ahead of time. The Associated Press reported snow and biting temperatures in a half-dozen States.

North Dakota had the lowest temperature, 12 below zero at Minot, and the most snow, enough in some places to make highways impassable. Southern Minnesota got some snow and in northern Iowa the fall was 2 inches. Snow flurries dusted the ground in the Chicago area, where the forecast was for temperatures in the 20s tonight.

Ethiopians Rout Foes; Il Duce Reduces Army; Cut Off Oil, Ickes Urges

Asks Producers to Halt Shipments of Product to Italians.

U. S. Edges Closer To Rome Reprisals

Interior Head's Action May Involve America in Sanctions.

By Felix Bruner.

Secretary Ickes, oil administrator, yesterday called upon American oil producers to halt voluntarily their shipments to Italy.

Explaining that he had "no authority at all," the Secretary of the Interior nevertheless added that producers "should comply both in letter and in spirit to the efforts of the Government to prevent shipments of munitions to belligerents."

Simultaneously, Ickes made public a report of the Bureau of Mines showing that exports of motor fuel were higher in September than in August and explaining that this indicates "that the stimulation in this trade is due to the war scares and other factors," which the bureau said outweighed the usual seasonal decline.

The bureau added that for this reason the estimate of exports of gasoline for December has been raised to 2,400,000 barrels from the estimate of 2,310,000 barrels in November.

Ickes' statement is in line with the recent statement of Secretary Hull, referring to shipment of oil, copper, trucks and iron to belligerents as being "directly contrary to the policy of the Government."

From Rome the Associated Press reported that well-informed sources said the United States is edging ever closer to inclusion in Italy's list of nations to be dealt with by economic reprisals.

May Cripple Army.

The dispatch said that official comment on the request of Ickes was withheld pending details. It added that spokesmen did not disguise the Government's feeling that suggestions of this sort tend to place the United States in the "sanctionist" category.

Rome observers were said to believe that if United States oil is cut off, Italy will have trouble in obtaining fuel and lubricating oil for the machanized army in Africa. Between January and September of this year Italy imported 467,299 quintales of lubricating oil, of which 404,347 quintales came from the United States. America supplied little of Italy's gasoline, but this country is the chief source aside from the sanctionist countries.

An Associated Press dispatch from Houston, Tex., reported a general disposition among oil companies to heed Ickes' appeal. Officials of the Humble Oil & Refining Co., Shell Petroleum Corporation, Gulf Oil Co. and Tidewater-Seaboard Co. were quoted to that effect.

From Geneva the Associated Press reported that Ickes' request to the oil industry was considered in League of Nations circles a helpful step toward realization of an embargo on oil.

"Genius of Each Nation."

The League's committee of 18 on sanctions will meet next week to consider the possibility of fixing a date for an embargo on the exportation to Italy of oil, coal, iron and steel.

In a radio talk last night Attorney General Cummings referred to the neutrality policy as a "true reflection of the national thought."

"Each nation, of course, must approach this problem within the genius of its own institutions," he said, "in the light of its own growth and according to the will and temper of its people.

"So far as ooncerns our own country, I think our Government has given a true reflection of the

AMBASSADOR ARIYOSHI.

Tokyo Cabinet Faces Ouster In China Crisis

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Friday), Nov. 22.—Sources close to the government said Japanese militarists and opposing civilian leaders faced a showdown today over the North China situation, with the life of the cabinet possibly in the balance.

The issue was expected to be debated by the cabinet, with Foreign Minister Koki Hirota leading the civilian group, and Gen. Yoshiyuki Kawashima, minister of war, representing the militarists.

Hirota, informed sources said, favors a compromise which would allow the Chinese national government to retain a considerable degree of authority in the five northern provinces.

This plan was recommended by Akira Ariyoshi, Ambassador to China, who consulted with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, Chinese National government leader, in Nanking yesterday.

The proposed declaration of autonomy by the five provinces has been "postponed for the time being" in response to the urgent instructions of Chiang Kai-Shek, the Rengo (Japanese) News Agency reported from Tientsin.

This decision, the agency continued, was "reached at a conference of northern leaders convened in Tientsin by Gen. Sung Chen-Yuan (commander of the Peiping-Tientsin garrison), who arrived hurriedly from Peiping."

The newspaper Asahi said when Ambassador Ariyoshi submitted his compromise plan to Tokyo, he said: "This is likely to be my last service to the Emperor," indicating he would resign if militarists have their way. Ariyoshi has been accused by militarists of being too soft in dealing with the Chinese.

An official source said the independence plan was held up when the army high command here issued an order saying officers participating in Chinese separatist movements were exceeding their

Raiders Dispersed By Italian Askaris

100,000 Furloughed by Mussolini to Fight Economic Siege.

The War Crisis.

Ethiopia's southern forces in an offensive south of Daggah Bur were reported to have captured four Italian tanks and many prisoners.

Italian native Askaris routed a band of Ras Seyoum's raiders in the north.

Premier Mussolini ordered furloughs for 100,000 soldiers in order that they might return to the farms and factories to aid the fight against sanctions.

Emperor Haile Selassie returned to Addis Ababa from a quick air trip to inspect his troops in the field. The Emperor was understood to have issued battle orders at Jijiga.

Secretary Ickes asked oil producers not to ship to belligerents. Rome interpreted the request as indicating the United States is showing an inclination to join sanctionist nations.

Jijiga, by telephone to Harar, Nov. 21.—Spurred by a daring airplane visit of Emperor Haile Selassie, Ethiopian troops today launched an offensive south of Daggah Bur, and under heavy bombardment captured four Italian tanks and many prisoners.

The king of kings exhorted his soldiers to win the Ogaden campaign or stand responsible for Ethiopia's complete defeat. The answer from Dejazmatch Nassibu was a command to hurl back the Italian columns advancing up the Fanfan Valley toward Jijiga.

British Go to Front.

After bidding farewell to Nassibu, E. A. Chapman Andrews, British consul at Harar, and Capt. R. H. R. Taylor, military observer, left for Daggah Bur to watch the fighting. They will be the only Caucasians in the war area except Dr. Robert Hockman, of Wheaton, Ill., and his two British assistants, who are maintaining a Red Cross field hospital at Daggah Bud under severe bombardment.

The most serious clash of the war to date was anticipated near Jijiga soon. Huge clouds of smoke were seen rolling skyward, apparently either heavy bombing beyond Jijiga or exploding ammunition dumps.

Today, the Emperor conferred at length with his officers at Nassibu's headquarters and then left by automobile for Harar. After a brief visit to the scene of his earlier governorship, he continued to Diredawa, where he entered his plane and returned to Addis Ababa.

The Emperor, dressed in a khaki uniform, woolen puttees, black shoes and a cloak, was accompanied by Abbe Behana, high priest and ranking second abunda of the Coptic Christian Church. He gave his benediction to the troops on the eve of the battle.

Arrives in Touring Car.

Haile Selassie arrived at Harrar from Jijiga under the cover of night, unheralded, riding in a touring car with his chief of staff. Bodyguards rode before and after the Emperor's machine in two trucks.

After praying, the Emperor visited the tomb he is building at Harar for his father's remains, then went to the hospitals, where he spoke to each man.

"It is a good fight for your country," he told the wounded. "You are good Ethiopians!"

He received the soldiers before departing. They prostrated themselves and kissed his feet.

It was understood the Emperor's visit to Ogaden headquarters will be followed by a similar one to the northern front in a final effort to bolster his troops' morale, demanding that his warriors take the offensive and deal the Italians a staggering blow.

Mother of 16 'Sorry in a Way,' Yet 17th May Win $500,000

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, Nov. 21.—A 36-year-old mother of 16 children, who thinks "birth control is a wonderful thing," entered herself today in Toronto's $500,000 "baby race."

She is Mrs. Arthur Hollis Timleck, who claims to have given birth to nine babies in the last nine years. A tenth is expected within a few months, she said. Thirteen of the 16 children she bore are living.

Under the will of the late Charles Vance Millar, half a million dollars will be awarded in October, 1936, to the Toronto mother who has borne the greatest number of children in the previous 10 years.

Mrs. Timleck's husband, who is 38, is employed in motorboat work. The Timlecks have had to go on relief occasionally during the last few years.

"I think birth control is a wonderful thing," she asserted. "I'm sorry, in one way, birth control information was not available for people years ago. I know mothers who would have welcomed such knowledge."

The Timlecks think they have a good chance to win, or at least tie, for the fortune. They said Mrs. Matthew Kenney's claim of 11 eligible children is disputed by other candidates.

Mrs. Joseph Bagnato and Mrs. John Nagle each report nine children in the ten-year period, and Mrs. Stefano Darrigo, Mrs. Ambrose Harrison and Mrs. Gus Graziano, eight apiece.

If she wins the money, Mrs. Timleck said she would use it for the advancement of her children.

"I'd like to have a housekeeper to help with the smaller ones," she explained. "Thirteen children is too much for one woman to handle."

Borah Is Mum As Ex-Senator Indorses Him

Roscoe McCulloch Adds His Support; Norris Center of Dispute.

By the Associated Press.

William E. Borah yesterday was importuned by a former Senate colleague—Roscoe McCulloch, Ohio Republican—to run for President, but the Idahoan declined publicly to declare himself.

"Matters stand about as they were," Senator Borah reported after his talk with the Ohioan. His statement recalled to observers that last week he replied "I can't say I won't" when asked whether he would enter Presidential primaries.

Borah, himself, handed this statement to newsmen in behalf of McCulloch:

"I have had an interview with Senator Borah and, of course, it was in regard to Presidential politics. Senator Borah has a strong support in Ohio for the Presidency. Nothing has been determined definitely as yet. I am one of a great many who would like to see him make the race."

Meanwhile Chairman James A. Farley, of the Democratic committee, and Charles Michelson, publicity chief of the committee, sped toward California. Farley, as Postmaster General, will inaugurate the transpacific air-mail service of the China Clipper. He will join President Roosevelt in Georgia next week.

Townsend Plan Wins.

On another front Chairman Chester Bolton, of the national Republican Congressional committee, announced "full support" would be given Burner W. Main, Republican, nominated for Representative from the Third Michigan District on a platform including enactment of the Townsend old-age pension plan.

"We understad that Mr. Main's nomination resulted from various factors," Bolton said. "He will be given the full support of our committee and his victory at the election seems assured."

Dispute on Norris

North Platte, Nebr., Nov. 21 (AP).—Keith Neville, of North Platte, Nebraska's Democratic national committeeman, said today Senator George W. Norris, veteran Nebraska independent Republican is not entitled to Democratic support if he seeks re-election as a Republican or an independent.

"Should Norris enter the Democratic Party and be nominated he would be entitled to the support of the Democrats," Neville said, "but he is not entitled to that support if he runs as an Independent or a Republican against an able and honorable Democrat who represents the views of the Democrats of Nebraska on present-day issues.

Governor Disagrees.

Other State Democratic leaders, however, including Gov. R. L. Cochran, heartily indorsed the Democratic move in behalf of Norris. J. C. Quigley, of Valentine, State Democratic committee chairman, said he would be glad to welcome Norris into the party, but asserted he was "only the hired hand of the State committee."

When it was recently reported Senator Norris might not be a candidate for re-election, President Roosevelt said that if he were a Nebraskan, he would insist that Norris return to the Senate.

Norris has supported numerous New Deal measures.

Kurtz, Missing Flier, Found Safe on Ranch

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 21 (AP).—Frank Kurtz, 21-year-old cross-country flier, object of a two-day search, was found safe today, having landed in the face of howling winds on a ranch soon after his Tuesday take-off from Cheyenne for the West.

As searching parties set out anew by plane, automobile and saddle horse, a farm woman telephoned that the missing flier was at the ranch of Hugh McPhee.

Kurtz, who has made several transcontinental and Canada-to-Mexico flights, said he was unaware he was believed missing and so made no effort to communicate sooner with friends.

He decided tonight to halt flying plans for a time in view of continued gales.

Two Condemned Men Are Granted Reprieves

Olympia, Wash., Nov. 21 (AP).—Gov. Clarence D. Martin granted last-minute 60-day reprieves today in the death sentences imposed on Marritt Hunter, jr., 21, Olympia, and Carl Patterson, 20, Wapato.

Hunter, convicted for the slaying of Lillian Kanda, 19, his Japanese-American sweetheart, and Patterson, sentenced for killing William Simpson, Wapato farmer, were to have been hanged shortly after midnight.

By Raymond Clapper

UTILITIES have begun a "general strike" against the new utilities act. Some of the largest of them are announcing that they will refuse to obey the law, which requires that they register with SEC by December 1. This is preliminary to testing the constitutionality of the new act in the courts.

Could anything more clearly emphasize the stupidity of the system we have, which requires supposedly law-abiding citizens to violate the law, to defy it, in order to find out whether it sticks or is unconstitutional?

No one can give you an intelligent reason why this sort of thing must go on. They just tell you it must be that way. It does make business for the lawyers, and that is its only merit. But why permit such cockeyed legal boondoggling in the courts, where the millions of dollars at stake in many constitutional cases are made a judicial football?

Imagine a more illogical piece of business than this:

The directors of United Gas & Improvement, the oldest utility holding company in the country, and one of the largest, an $800,000,000 concern, meet in Philadelphia. Former Senator George Wharton Pepper, a distinguished lawyer, appears.

"Gentlemen," he says, "we have made a close study of the law and because we are convinced that it cannot be sustained we have no hesitation in advising the United Gas Improvement Co. and its subsidiary holding companies to refuse to register under the act."

Other companies are doing likewise.

Of course, if they are guessing wrong, they may go to jail. They could go ahead and conform to the law, reorganize their businesses and then find out later, perhaps, that it was all a mistake. It doesn't matter much which course is pursued. It is ridiculous that either one should be necessary.

This hocus-pocus is a good deal like having to look into a shotgun barrel while you pull the trigger to find out whether it is loaded.

Amid the agitation over the sanctity of the Constitution, one sensible idea has been put forward by Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey in an open letter to Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee.

He proposes that Congress submit a constitutional amendment which would require that all laws be submitted to the Supreme Court for a decision as to their constitutionality before they become effective. The suggestion is so simple and goes so directly to the point that probably it will go unappreciated by our best legal minds.

Gov. Hoffman's proposed amendment reads as follows:

"That all laws enacted by the Congress and approved by the President, or enacted by the Congress over the disapproval of the President, shall be submitted to the Supreme Court of the United States for a decision as to their constitutionality before they become effective. Any law held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court shall be null and void."

Gov. Hoffman says he is assured that the Supreme Court in its present form is able to carry out the terms of this amendment.

An alleged voting scandal in the recent corn-hog referendum is reported from the Unionists and Public Forum, published at Sioux City, Iowa, in the current bulletin of the American Liberty League.

An editorial in the Iowa publication says that in one township votes of the farmers were obtained by personal canvass by the corn-hog committee members. Ballots, the editorial states, were marked and collected by these personal visits. Farmers going to the polling place reported it was closed.

The editorial concludes: "The election officials merely took out of their pockets the votes they had secured in their canvass of the township from house to house and counted them, and announced the result without the trouble of going to the polling place. If any person desires to question these facts, let him call on us for the proof and we will furnish it."

Former Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, eliminates himself as a Republican Presidential possibility with the explanation that he lacks "political sex appeal."

That is too bad, because, among conservatives, Senator Reed ranks as one of the ablest. However, ability is a minor element in political sex appeal. It is desirable but not essential.

One trouble with the former Senator was that although he was a gentleman he was unable to lie like one. For instance, after his State voted for the late Bill Vare, Senator Reed, who had a low estimate of Vare, rose in the Senate and declared that the voters of Pennsylvania were a lot of "dunderheads."

Political sex appeal is a thing someone else will have to define. It takes many forms. "Silent Cal" Coolidge, who in private was quite garrulous, had it. Big Bill Thompson held on as Mayor of Chicago on the strength of a threat to "punch King George in the snoot" if he ever set foot in Chicago. Sockless Jerry Simpson in Kansas gathered votes by throwing away his socks. Whatever it is, Dr. Townsend has it, even at his age.

With politics, as with love, there seems to be no formula for success. You either have "it" or you don't. The only difference is that in politics, if you don't have it, not even your best friends will tell you. And few—Senator Reed is almost alone—ever find it out for themselves.

Verner W. Main, the Townsendite who has just won the Republican nomination for Congress in Michigan, also is for immediate payment of the bonus. And he is for a balanced budget and sound money!

He only ducked one issue. He didn't promise to walk on the water.

Judge, FERA Differ On Drinks for Needy

Chicago, Nov. 21 (AP).—Relief clients who are not teetotalers were warned by Municipal Judge Robert J. Dunne today that:

"One or two drinks a day should be sufficient."

He ordered jailing of two men arrested after a spree on cash from relief checks.

The county relief administration, however, went farther than the judge. It promptly ruled that reliefers cashing checks in taverns or handbooks would get no more cash.

Sloan Acquires $1,200,000 in Motor Stock

Transfer of 30,000 G. M. Shares Is Revealed in Securities Report.

By the Associated Press.

Purchase by Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president, of 30,000 shares of General Motors common stock, whose market value approximated $1,200,000, was disclosed yesterday in Securities Commission reports.

Sloan's report did not show the price paid for the stock. But on the basis of market quotations August 6, date of the transaction, the shares have gained about $500,000 in value.

Transactions by Sloan, other corporation officials and large stockholders are shown in the commission's regular monthly report of such operations. Filing is required by the securities exchange act.

Sloan's report also disclosed total holdings at the end of August of 770,984 shares of General Motors common with a current market value of about $45,000,000. He claimed direct ownership of only 50,406 shares, however, disclaiming "beneficial interest" in the balance.

"Beneficial interest" officials said, means that a corporation official contends he receives benefits from his holdings.

The shares in which he disclaimed beneficial interest were held through part ownership of other companies which in turn held General Motors stock.

Other reports disclosed little market activity by officers and large stockholders. Gifts of some $600,000 in August and September were shown. Previous reports have shown many millions in gifts and yesterday's filings were only supplemental.

The Sloan report gave no indication of the extent to which he may exercise control through his holdings.

Bladensburg Aviator Forced Down by Ice

Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 21 (AP).—Ice forming on the windshield of his 400-pound airplane forced Edward W. Stitt, of Bladensburg, Md., to land today at nearby Woodville, interrupting an attempted distance record flight from Davenport, Iowa, to Washington.

Stitt said he hoped to better a 529-mile record for light ships established by a French flier in 1929. Unfavorable weather kept Stitt from continuing his flight immediately.

MRS. LOUISE CLEWS VANNECK, whose mother, Mrs. Henry Clews, widow of the multi-millionaire New York banker, has announced that her daughter will wed Ian Douglas, nephew and heir to the Duke of Argyll. The marriage will take place in Europe this Saturday. The heiress was divorced a year ago.

Experts Studying Cotton Export Plan

By the Associated Press.

Senator Lonergan (Democrat), Connecticut, said yesterday there was little likelihood of action by Government officials on his proposal to subsidize cotton textile exports until after February 1.

Lonergan has suggested the Government sell to cotton manufacturers Federally held cotton at 7 cents a pound, with the stipulation that it be made into cloth for export only. A committee of Agriculture Department experts now is studying the plan.

Lonergan explained February 1 marked the expiration of pledges of cotton producers who had accepted Government advances. He said he had been told by officials of the Agriculture and Commerce departments that any plan for sale of Government cotton before that date would be unwise.

Officials Deny 'Tugwelltown' Strike Threat

Only 10 Men Have Quit at Berwyn Project, Not 50, Says Lansill.

Reports of a strike threat by relief workers at the $[illegible],000,000 Berwyn Heights, Md., housing project were ridiculed yesterday by Government officials.

Of 826 men on the unskilled labor pay roll, said John S. Lansill, of the Resettlement Administration, 10 have quit instead of 50, the number named as participating in the walkout by John Revere, leader of the discontented workers.

Lansill said he did not expect a substantial number of men to give up their jobs. He added there had been no pay cut, as contended by Revere.

Instead, Lansill explained, the administration continued its practice of deducting $15 for subsistence from the $45 monthly wage of men who worked 88 hours.

An opportunity has been afforded for the men to work 136 hours, or 17 days a month, he pointed out, if they want to receive subsistence without any deduction from the $45. The employes, he said, are under "no obligation" to live at the lodge.

Most of those concerned, he said, came from District transient relief rolls. Jobs also have been given to Prince Georges and Montgomery County unemployed.

'Mind Your Business,' Luther Tells Nations

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 21 (AP).—Dr. Hans Luther, German Ambassador to the United States, today declared nations should learn to "mind their own business."

Dr. Luther, who was heckled in Minneapolis and St. Paul by Jewish organizations protesting Nazi treatment of German Jews, addressed the Rotary Club.

"The people of one nation," Dr. Luther said, "should not attempt to interfere in the internal affairs of any other nation."

Jersey Insists Hauptmann's Trial Was Fair

Lie Detector Used to Test Veracity of Prisoner Planned by Doctor.

By the Associated Press.

New Jersey asked the Supreme Court yesterday to let State law take its course in dealing death to Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the kidnapping and murder of the Lindbergh baby.

A 30-page brief, filed by Joseph Lanigan, assistant State's attorney general, contended the Bronx carpenter had been given all his constitutional rights and hence there was no reason for the high tribunal to review his conviction.

"The State, through its courts," the brief said, "has retained jurisdiction over him and has accorded to him the fullest right and opportunity to be heard according to the established modes of procedure and now holds him in custody to pay the penalty for the crime of which he has been adjudged guilty."

May Act December 9.

Because of the State's speedy reply to Hauptmann's application for a review, the Supreme Court may announce as early as December 9 whether it will pass on the case.

If the court refuses to review the controversy, the death sentence will stand unless set aside by further proceedings. Defense counsel could ask for a new trial on the basis of new evidence (if any is found) or appeal for a commutation of the sentence to life imprisonment.

Should a review be granted, the case would be set for argument perhaps in February or March.

The conviction following the celebrated trial at Flemington was unanimously affirmed by the 13 judges on the court of errors and appeals, the highest State tribunal. Hauptmann now is in the New Jersey "death house" at Trenton.

Replying to contentions of Hauptmann attorneys that the Flemington trial resembled a "circus" and "a hysterical mob spirit prevailed," the brief prepared by Lanigan and by David T. Wilentz, New Jersey attorney general, asserted:

"His allegations of hostile public sentiment and disorders in and about the courtroom, and improperly influencing the jury against him, are supported by no evidence and should be rejected as lacking in fact."

May Use Lie Detector.

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 21 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, fighting for his life at the tribune of final appeal, the United States Supreme Court, will be given a lie detector test to determine the veracity of his testimony at his trial, Dr. William M. Marston said here today.

A psychologist and discoverer of the test, Dr. Marston said he had been requested to make the experiment on the convicted slayer of the Lindbergh baby by Lloyd Fisher, Hauptmann's counsel. Both Hauptmann and his wife are eager to have it done, the doctor added.

No date for the test, in Hauptmann's death house cell at Trenton, N. J., has been set.

"By using the lie detector," commented the doctor, "we may learn new facts about the kidnaping and killing."

Col. Norman Schwartzkopf, of the New Jersey State police; David Wilentz, prosecutor of Hauptmann, and Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey, have approved of the test for the condemned man, Dr. Marston said.

"Never Wanted to See Jafsie."

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 21.—The Rev. D. G. Werner, of New York City, Bruno Richard Hauptmann's spiritual adviser, said today Hauptmann told him he never had asked to see Dr. John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

Dr. Condon, who testified he paid the Lindbergh ransom money to Hauptmann, said yesterday in Boston Hauptmann had sent for him three times.

A statement today by Dr. William M. Marston at Rochester, N. Y., that a lie detector test had been approved for Hauptmann received no confirmation from Attorney General David T. Wilentz, the trial prosecutor, and C. Lloyd Fisher, defense attorney.

Fisher said he "never heard" of Dr. Marston.

"I will agree to a lie detector test under certain conditions," Fisher said. "They are that the State agree to abide by the test and if it shows Hauptmann is not lying that they set him free. Another is that I be present, and the third condition is that a medical man be present."

Roosevelt Arrives in Georgia

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Roosevelt in Warm Springs, Ready for a Busy Vacation

Paralysis Victims Cheer President as He Returns for Traditional Holiday With Them; Will Tackle Budget Problems.

By the United Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 21.—President Roosevelt tonight settled down for a three-weeks' stay in his temporary White House amid Georgia's pine-clad hills with plenty of unfinished Government business to occupy his time. He arrived here at 4 p. m. from Washington.

His southland sojourn is in keeping with the tradition established when he was Governor of New York State, that the Thanksgiving holiday be spent with the patients at Warm Springs Foundation, the sanitarium he helped create for infantile paralysis sufferers.

Some of those patients were on hand to welcome him when his special train pulled into the little Warm Springs station. They shouted a welcome and he smiled and waved back in characteristic fashion. Then he was driven to his cottage, "Little White House" of Georgia.

The President brought with him several boxes filled with matters relating to the 1937 budget, routine correspondence and official papers of one kind or another upon which he will work. With the exception of a conference Monday on buget estimates for three departments, Mr. Roosevelt's stay was expected to be unusually quiet.

The Monday meeting will be with Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the budget, and Chairman Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee.

By the Associated Press.

Pembroke, Ga., Nov. 21.—Gov. Eugene Talmadge renewed his attack on the National Administration in a speech near here today as President Roosevelt arrived in Georgia for a Thanksgiving vacation.

Addressing a rally of citizens from southeast Georgia at Jenk's Bridge, the Governor assailed the Government's agricultural program, charged a waste of taxpayers' money in "teaching ballet dancing and the like" and urged repeal of the Federal income tax.

Talmadge declared that "in Norris, Tenn.," the Tennessee Valley Authority town, "they won't allow a church built in the town."

"You preachers check up on that," he shouted.

The third member of the committee is the board's oldest member in point of service, Dr. J. Hayden Johnson, who was first appointed in 1916. A graduate of Howard University, he is a past president of the Medico-Chirurgical Society and lives at 1822 Vermont avenue northwest.

Witness Tells Of Fictitious Bank Deposit

The first of nine alleged fictitious deposits in the defunct Park Savings Bank made by the late Robert S. Stuntz, former vice president and executive officer of the bank, in collaboration with Benedict McNeil and his father, Alexander McNeil, was described to a jury in District Supreme Court yesterday by Eugene Sauer, special investigator of the Department of Justice.

Benedict McNeil is being tried on charges that he conspired to steal from the bank.

The deposit involved $845.93 and was booked on February 17, 1931, as being to the credit of the A. M. McNeil Co., Sauer testified. There was no accompanying cash deposit to show for the account, the witness said on being questioned by Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson.

Wilson said he would attempt to show eight additional cases in which fictitious deposits credited to persons were not made legitimately. The Government expects to complete its case today.

Mexico to Arm Rural Teachers Against Killers

Dozen Slain in Month for Socialistic Doctrines, States Charge.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, Nov. 21.—The federal secretariat of education, alarmed by the growing number of killings of rural school teachers, asked the war department today to allow teachers to arm for protection against violent measures of the opponents of socialistic education.

More than 12 such killings have been reported in the last month, most of them in the States of Puebla, Morelos and Jalisco.

Several days ago two women teachers were attacked in Puebla by rebels, who cut off their ears and threatened them with death if they continued giving socalistic instruction.

Dispatches from Puebla yesterday reported the leader of a band suspected of killing six teachers in the Texiutlan district in a single day last week had been captured and shot by federal troops.

Body Put on Display.

Convinced that vigorous measures are necessary to halt the slayings, authorities placed his body on display in the plaza in Texiutlan as a warning to other enemies of the official education.

Officials said the attacks on teachers were inspired by "fanatics."

Two killings in Morelos have been attributed by officials to "El Tallarin," insurgent leader who has evaded federal pursuers for more than six months. He is accused of numerous raids on towns in Morelos and Puebla. Federal troops have nearly captured the elusive "El Tallarin" many times and wounded him at least once. But he always managed to escape.

Socialistic education, which became compulsory through a reform of the constitution more than a year ago, has been rigorously opposed by certain sections of the populace.

Gives Child Free Choice.

The government has contended that socialistic education does not attack religion, but leaves the child free to choose whatever religion suits him and that parents are free to impart to their children any religious belief whatsoever.

The purpose of socialistic education, government officials state, is "to destroy the superstitions which prevent a child from really understanding the world, and to give him a realistic and rational idea of things as they are."

Claude Ballard Dies in Store

Claude M. Ballard, 67, chief of the publication division of the United States Forest Service, died of a heart attack in a downtown store yesterday within an hour after leaving his office.

An employe of the Government for 35 years, Mr. Ballard's public relations and welfare work in the Forest Service and the Department of Agriculture had given him a wide acquaintance throughout the Federal service. He was responsible for placing depositories in Government offices for the collection of clothing for the needy.

Coming to the Forest Service in 1909 after ten years with the Government Printing Office, Mr. Ballard was known to chiefs of the service from Gifford Pinchot, former Governor of Pennsylvania, to F. A. Silcox, the present chief.

Mr. Ballard lived at 543 Randolph street northwest. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary B. Ballard, and two daughters, Mary Louise Ballard and Mrs. Gayle B. Anderson, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in the S. H. Hines funeral home, at 2901 Fourteenth street northwest.

Aid to Handicapped Children To Be Will Rogers' Memorial

'Best Way to Perpetuate His Kindliness to Man,' Says Young; Committee Accepts $1,000,000 Hospital, $500,000 Maintenance Fund.

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 21.—Handicapped children will be the principal beneficiaries of the Will Rogers Memorial Fund now being raised throughout the Nation, the memorial committee announced tonight.

Simultaneously, the committee announced acceptance of a gift of a $1,000,000 hospital and $500,000 in cash to maintain it for five years—a subscription apart from the rapidly growing national fund.

"Handicapped children always were a concern of Will Rogers," said Owen D. Young, an official of the fund. "The committee, after considering hundreds of suggestions, decided that aid for handicapped youngsters would be the best way to perpetuate Will Rogers' kindliness to mankind."

The hospital and maintenance fund were given by the National Variety Artists Fund, Inc., and will be known henceforth as the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital. It is at Saranac, N. Y., and will be used for members of Rogers' stage and screen profession.

The maintenance fund will be paid, $100,000 each for five years, by five major theater circuits—Loew's Inc., Fox West Coast Theaters, Paramount Theaters Service Corporation, Warner Brothers Theaters Circuit and the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation.

Financial affairs and management of the hospital will be in the hands of the Will Rogers Memorial Commission.

It was announced that California and Oklahoma, Rogers' two home States, each would receive from the national memorial fund a sum not less than that raised in those individual States for Rogers memorials within their own borders, regardless of where the rest of the money is spent.

Record Flight In Stratosphere Is Made Official

Aeronautics Board Gives Balloon's Altitude as 72,395 Feet.

Stevens and Anderson shattered all altitude records, official and unofficial. Their effort surpassed the unofficial mark of 72,200 feet claimed for three Russian balloonists after their craft crashed and killed them January 3, 1934.

The Stevens-Anderson mark far outdistanced the best previous official record—61,237 feet—set November 20, 1933, at Akron, Ohio, by Lieut. Comdr. T. G. W. Settle and Maj. Chester Fordney.

Experts predicted the new record would be approved by the Federation Aeronautique Internationale in Paris, as it was based on Bureau of Standards calibration reports from the balloon's sealed meteorograph.

In the past the international organization has accepted records submitted by the National Aeronautics Association.

The official determination fell slightly below the estimate of 74,000 feet made by the fliers just after they landed.

Coroner Frees 2 In Traffic Deaths

Two men were exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday after inquests into the traffic deaths of William A. Brooks, 66, a baker at the National Training School, and James Baldwin, 50, of Baltimore, Md.

William C. Harne, 53, 1116 Orren place northeast, was absolved from blame in Brooks' death when witnesses testified Brooks' car was being operated without headlights. Brooks died Sunday from a brain hemorrhage after the crash at Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

In the second verdict, the jury released John Southworth, 59, 914 Sixth street northwest, motorman of the street car which ran down James Baldwin at Pennsylvania avenue and John Marshall place northwest Monday night. Testimony revealed Baldwin stepped from a loading platform into the path of the street car.

Fleming Named To Will Rogers Memorial Post

Banker Is Appointed Active Chairman of Drive to Raise Funds.

Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, has been appointed active chairman of the Will Rogers Memorial, District of Columbia Commission, the treasurer of the commission, Jesse H. Jones, announced yesterday.

Fleming is considering names of persons suggested for local chairmen of committees to be established in every city and town to encourage friends and admirers of Will Rogers to contribute to the memorial fund.

The campaign will close Wednesday. After the sum has been totaled a group of prominent men, with the help of public suggestions, will decide on the form the memorial is to take.

The commission has declared it will sponsor no cold shaft of marble for the warm, friendly man that was Will Rogers. Plans call for the establishing of living, continuing memorial in tribute to the charitable and beloved cowboy humorist. In keeping with his love of flying and his interest in aviation, the expenses of gathering the fund are being borne by the aviation industry.

The group which will administer the fund includes Dr. J. C. Bushyhead, of Oklahoma; Amon G. Carter, Harry Chandler, James M. Cox, Charles Curtis, John W. Davis, Charles C. Dawes, Henry Ford, John N. Garner, Harbert Fleischhacker, Will H. Hays, Harbert C. Hoover, Patrick J. Hurley, Jesse H. Jones, Alfred E. Smith, Fred Stone, Owen D. Young, Gov. E. W. Marland, of Oklahoma; Gov. Frank F. Merriam, of California; George Young, and Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Breckenridge, Tex., Nov. 21 (AP).—Burland Sandlin and A. E. Eaves, both of White, Tex., were killed when their new airplane crashed shortly after a take-off from the municipal airport today.

Salvation Army Branch To Celebrate Founding

In celebration of the founding of its first religious project in the Georgetown area ten years ago, and the more recent establishment of a united church for residents along the canal, at the end of Key Bridge, the Georgetown branch of the Salvation Army will hold services at 1075 Jefferson street northwest Sunday.

Capt. Jackson Martin, who is in charge of the work in that district, will be aided by Maj. and Mrs. James Asher, leaders of the Salvation Army in Washington.

Autoist Gets 90 Days After Double Accident

James C. Harris, 305 G street northwest, accused of overturning two automobiles after a collision at Fourteenth street and Constitution avenue Wednesday, was sentenced to serve 90 days in jail when arraigned before Police Court Judge John McMahon on a charge of driving while drunk.

The accident occurred after a chase of Harris by Policeman Spottswood Gravely, of the Fourth Precinct, when Harris is alleged to have run through a red light.

Ethiopia Seizes Many Troops, 4 Italian Tanks

Emperor's Daring Visit by Plane Spurs Natives to New Offensive.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Nov. 21.—Premier Mussolini, in a new move to oppose economic sanctions against Italy, ordered three-month furloughs tonight for about 100,000 of Italy's 1,000,000 home troops.

The temporary reduction, it was stated officially, has no international significance. The government said the action was due to increasing farm and industrial production, because of the economic siege of Italy, and the desire to send men home to the families that need them.

The soldiers will be told to be ready to return on an instant's notice.

Farmers will be sent home first, then men who are believed most needed by their families, and then those who have records of good conduct during at least eight months of service.

Others to Stand Ready.

Many othesr have been virtually instructed to be ready for a call to the colors. They are from the classes of 1901 to 1914, inclusive, who were exempted for illness or disability. They have been ordered to submit to re-examination, and those found fit must then be listed in their classes and respond to any calls for men of those years.

Il Duce recently announced he would have 1,200,000 men under arms in Italy and abroad. But informed observers, placing the home army at 1,000,000, have expressed the opinion the total force is much higher than Mussolini's figure.

The premier, directing Italy's anti-sanctions program, found time to talk with King George of Greece, who was in Rome on his way to Athens to reascend his throne. Earlier George had received the collar of the Order of Annunziata from King Victor Emmanuel, thus becoming an honorary cousin of the Italian monarch.

Signs Several Protocols.

Mussolini signed several protocols of an Italo-Hungarian trade treaty, which diverts some of Italy's former trade with countries now applying sanctions to Hungary, which supported Italy at Geneva.

Fascist leaders advocated daylight working hours as much as possible, and advised automobile owners to use as little gas as possible.

Italians also were asked to eat less meat, raise many rabbits, "buy Italian," and otherwise "throw off the foreign yoke."

Well-informed quarters said they expected little to result from Anglo-French peace talks in Paris until Italy gains a more decisive victory in Ethiopia, making Emperor Haile Selassie "easier to deal with." Then, these quarters said, Britain and the League might make the best of a bad bargain.

England Will Bury Jellicoe by Nelson

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 21.—King George and Queen Mary sent a teegram of sympathy tonight to Countess Jellicoe as the empire learned its "Nelson" of the World War would find a final resting place a few feet from Nelson of Trafalgar beneath the dome of St. Paul's.

Earl Jellicoe, hero of the battle of Jutland in 1916, died yesterday. The funeral will be held Monday and his body will be placed in a niche of the crypt which is the national Valhalla for British war heroes.

Admiral William H. Standley, U. S. N., chief of Naval Operations, sent the following message to the First Sea Lord of the Admiralty on behalf of the American Navy:

"I express our deep sympathy to our British colleagues in the death of Earl Jellicoe, admiral of the fleet. Naval officers under whatever flag will deplore the passing of this gallant officer who exemplified the attributes of a great leader, scholar and seaman.

"ADMIRAL STANDLEY."

Blast Fatal to 2,000 Chinese

Ickes Calls on Oil Producers To Halt Shipments to Italians

national thought in the recent steps that have been taken to promote peace and to protect our Nation against involvement in controversies in which the United States has no legitimate part.

"We are beginning to realize that war has become so all-inclusive in its sweeping disasters that there can be no peace except a peace common to all the world, and no lasting prosperity unless shared by all."

Meanwhile, the monthly report of the Commerce Department on exports and imports showed that in spite of the increase in motor fuel exports in September there was a sharp decline in November. The department has not yet broken down its figures according to nations and therefore it could not be determined how much oil was shipped to Italy. This breakdown is expected to be available in a few days.

The report showed that during October the value of petroleum and products exported was $19,648,000, as compared with $23,119,000 in September. For the first ten months of this year exports of petroleum and products amounted to $200,640,000, as compared with $191,112,000 during the corresponding months of last year. Declines also were shown in exports of metals and manufactures, machinery and motor trucks. Aircraft shipments declined under last year.

Exports Out of Line.

The report showed a further dwindling of the balance between exports and imports with the former only $31,975,000 higher than the latter during October, as compared with a trade balance of $76,778,000 in October, 1934. For the first ten months of this year the export balance was $96,707,000, compared with $397,557,000 during the same period last year.

Experts in the Commerce Department indicated that this country's favorable trade balance for the year may be the lowest in 25 years. Total exports during the first ten months of this year were $1,788,889,000 and imports totaled $1,692,182,000. The same period last year showed exports of $1,767,435,000 and imports of $1,371,878,000.

The end of the year, it was pointed out, usually shows an increase of exports but it appeared doubtful whether the increase would be sufficient to bring the balance to a point exceeding the 1910 low. Not since that year has the trade balance fallen below $200,000,000.

Imports Rise Sharply.

The figures showed that the total exports during the first ten months of this year were only $21,000,000 above the same period last year while imports rose $321,000,000. The export gain for October of this year as compared with October, 1934, was $14,000,000 and the increase in imports was $60,000,000.

Commodities showing an increase in imports included grains and preparations, coffee, raw silk, wood pulp and newsprint. Notable export increases were shown in unmanufactured cotton, unmanufactured tobacco, electrical machinery and apparatus, industrial machinery and automobiles.

While economists always have placed strong emphasis on an excess of exports over imports as a means to prosperity, emphasis in connection with reciprocal trade agreements has lately been placed on a large volume of both exports and imports.

Talmadge for President, Cries Pittsburgh Mayor

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Mayor William N. McNair, of Pittsburgh, today said he would place the name of Gov. Eugene N. Talmadge, of Georgia, for President on Democratic ballots in Pennsylvania for the April primaries.

"Talmadge is the Presidential hope of the country," McNair said, adding that if Roosevelt receives the nomination Pennsylvania will return to the Republican fold.

authority. It appeared to be one of the rare instances when the views of civilian leaders prevailed over plans of the military.

It was understood the high army command ruled that Japanese troops in Manchuria would not be permitted to cross the Great Wall unless given an imperial order to do so. An imperial order is issued only in the gravest emergency.

Continue Campaign.

Military officers in Tokyo and north China continued a campaign of publicity designed to justify an eventual armed Japanese intervention in north China.

Interviews emanating from the war office stressed that the Japanese army must oppose forcibly any attempt of the Nanking government to send troops to that area.

Newspapers indicated the army is ready to send troops into China at the first indication of disorders menacing lives or property of Japanese residents. Such an expedition into Shantung Province in 1927-28 resulted in bloody fighting between the Japanese and Chinese Nationalists.

British Aid Seen

London, Nov. 21 (AP).—Informed sources hinted tonight that Great Britain has played a strong diplomatic hand both in Tokyo and Nanking to check the move for an autonomous north China.

Just what had been done was not officially clarified, but there were indications British influence had been used both to curb the activities of Maj. Gen Kenji Doihara, Japan's "Lawrence of Manchukuo," and to stiffen the resistance of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, military overlord of the Chinese Republic.

At the same time, it was believed the British told the Japanese they have no desire to interfere with normal and pacific economic penetration of north China by Japan.

Optimism over the reported collapse of the separatist movement was expressed in authoritative quarters. These sources felt a pacific settlement of the Sino-Japanese difficulties now was much nearer.

However, officials were keeping a close check on developments, which already have led to consultations with the United States.

Britain, it was pointed out, has kept both China and Japan steadily informed of the British viewpoint—a policy, it was understood, of maintaining peace and quieting unrest so all nations may pacifically develop mutual, legitimate interests under stabilized conditions.

Duce Gives Flier Sons Yule Holiday at Home

Rome, Nov. 21 (U.P.).—Premier Benito Mussolini's sons, Vittorio and Bruno, on duty with the air corps in Ethiopia, will be granted short furloughs to spend the Christmas holidays with their parents and brother, Romano, and baby sister, Anna Maria, at Vill Torlonia.

Vittorio and Bruno will return to the war front immediately after the holidays, accompanied by Vito Mussolini, their cousin. Vito, editor of Il Duce's newspaper, Popolo d'Italia, published at Milan, recently was made a lieutenant in the air corps. He is a son of the dictator's late brother, Arnaldo.

station and wrecked three police cars at Haifa today.

The rowdies were dispersed by police, wielding truncheons, and quiet was restored later in the day, the Palcor Agency reported. Moslem shops remained closed.

Two of the traffic policemen were wounded seriously by the demonstrators, estimated at 2,000. Two rioters were wounded.

Police said an alleged terrorist arrested in yesterday's skirmish in which five Arabs and one British constable were killed, had disclosed the existence of a secret armed band which roamed Palestine and incited against British rule.

The Jewish Telegraph Agency said the prisoner confessed this band of so-called Moslem Arab patriots had been organized secretly at Haifa to kill Jews and Englishmen for the honor of Islam and the fatherland.

Budapest, Nov. 21 (AP).—Anti-Jewish rioting spread tonight to provincial towns after police, swinging sabers, had broken up a demonstration at the Budapest Conservatory of Music and had wounded a number of the rioters.

After attempting a demonstration at the closed University of Budapest and seeing 100 of their number arrested, students marched through the Jewish district and attacked the conservatory. Brisk fighting raged in and around the building, but the police gained the upper hand.

Warsaw, Nov. 21 (AP).—Anti-Czech demonstrators smashed 11 windows in the Czechoslovakian legation today, while authorities sought to curb student excesses directed at Jews.

Minister of Education Chrylinski was quoted by the Jewish Telegraph Agency as saying he would take immediate measures to restore peace in the schools and universities here and at Lwow.

Italians Rout Ras Seyoum's Tribe in Hills

Cunning Ethiopian Chieftian Eludes Trap Set by Il Duce's Troops.

By the Associated Press.

Asmara, Eritrea, Nov. 21.—Defeat and rout of cunning Ras Seyoum and his Ethiopian warriors by four Italian battalions in a mountain battle, was reported today to the Fascist high command.

In full flight and carrying their dead, the tribesmen melted away into the Tembien fastnesses. The battalions and a squadron of Italian horsemen pursued, hoping to encircle the enemy before Seyoum could rally his men.

Ethiopian losses were not known. The Italian losses were described as "small."

From their lofty mountain positions the Ethiopians opened up a sharp machine-gun fire, but after some hours of fighting, fled when they realized the superior strength of their foes.

An aviation reconnaissance over the Mai Mescic Valley region disclosed, meanwhile, that Ethiopian forces, scattered by Monday's air raid, were concentrating again in the same locality.

The tribesmen were using every possible means to shelter themselves from another such aerial raid, but the Italian observers said their efforts were crude.

(Italian sources said there were 2,000 killed or wounded in Monday's bombardment, but the Ethiopian authorities asserted their losses were meager.)

Mystery Note Found in Files Of Miss Loring

'Tuesday Night at 8:—Parlor F,' Says Paper Uncovered in Inquiry.

A cryptic note, scribbled by Corinna Loring on a scratch pad, was found among her shorthand books and ledgers yesterday in the office she used at 1343 H street northwest.

The note read:

"Tuesday night at 8:—Parlor F."

Corinna disappeared Monday night, November 4, from her home in Mount Rainier, Md., two days before she was to be married. Her beaten and strangled body was found the following Saturday afternoon on Saddleback Ridge, a quarter of a mile away.

Police planned to go through all her accounts and stenographic notes in the hope of finding a clew. Her dictaphone records in the office were found to be blank.

State's Attorney Alan Bowie announced in Upper Marlboro last night that another Baltimore detective had been assigned to the Loring case by Charles T. Gaither, police commissioner of Baltimore. He is Sergt. Leo T. Vogelsang, and will arrive this morning to assist lieut. Detective Joseph H. Itzel, in charge of the inquiry.

Late yesterday, Lieut. Itzel scotched a rumor that had traveled like a prairie fire through Washington and nearby Maryland. As it spread, telephone switchboards in newspaper offices were swamped with calls.

Was it true, the callers wanted to know, that someone had been arrested and had confessed?

"Nothing to it," Itzel declared.

In the desk Corinna used in the Peoples Life Insurance Building, investigators found a Gregg shorthand book, on the fly leaf of which was written this couplet:

"Life is one fool thing after another;
Love is two fool things after each other."

Persons employed in the office said that, while the book was on Corinna's desk, they did not think it belonged to her.

A Busy Stenographer.

Corinna's ledger indicated she was a busy stenographer and scrupulously careful in keeping her accounts. She had listed 15 Washington business and professional men for whom she did part-time work, taking their dictation and typing their letters and briefs.

Her ledger also bore the name of Mrs. M. Virginia Devine, partly blind widow, of the Dresden Apartments, to whom Corinna read The Post every day from 10 to noon. The ledger showed she received something over $1 for every reading.

Robert W. Hicks, District investigator, who has been analyzing evidence in the case, cruised around within a 3-mile radius of Mount Rainier yesterday collecting paper napkins at barbecue stands.

Threw "Clew" Away.

He said he wanted to compare these with one found at the murder scene, the idea being that he might be able to determine whether Corinna visited a particular barbecue stand before she was murdered.

However, there seems to be some doubt that a paper napkin exists for Hicks "confirmatory analysis."

Police Chief Eugene Plumer, of Mount Rainier, said a paper napkin was found on Saddleback Ridge, but that he threw it away, feeling that it was without value as a clew.

Bori, Crooks, Tibbett To Open 'Met' Season

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Two American artists and a third American by adoption will participate in the Metropolitan Opera's traditionally glamorous opening December 16.

The opera will be Verdi's "La Traviata," and the principals will be Lucrezia Bori, Richard Crooks and Lawrence Tibbett, the latter two natives of the United States. "Traviata" is being remounted for the occasion, with new sets and costumes by Jenel Jorgulesco.

The opera also will introduce the American ballet, the Metropolitan's newly acquired feature, as well as the ballet's director, George Balanchine.

Mother of Corinna Reveals Circumstances of Tragedy

fateful Monday night when Corinna disappeared.

"Dick (the girl's fiance) brought her home in his car some time between 6:30 and 7," said the mother. "I don't remember the exact time, but I remember she was late—she usually got home about 6—and I had gone ahead and eaten my supper. When she came in I warmed hers up for her. She was excited and happy because she and Dick had been buying things that afternoon. She showed me a couple of small purchases and then took them up to the attic where she kept all the things they had bought for their apartment."

Soon after Corinna got home her sister, Florence, the latter's husband, Leo LoJacono, and their baby daughter dropped by for a visit, Mrs. Loring said.

"While they were visiting I got dressed for church," the mother continued. "Florence and Leo didn't stay long—I learned afterward they hadn't had their supper—and about ten minutes to eight they left. Corinna had got out the ironing board and iron and was sprinkling a few pieces. I don't know whether she ever actually turned the iron on or not. I was sitting here by the radio waiting for time to go to church, but I got interested in a serial love story and so I was a few minutes late getting to services. I remember looking at the clock in the church right after I got there and it said seven minutes past eight."

Found Note on Door.

When Mrs. Loring returned to the Beech street bungalow "about a quarter to 10" from a testimonial meeting at the Mount Rainier Methodist Church, she found a note attached to the front door. It was from Richard Tear who had called at 8:40 to keep an appointment with his fiancee. He had found the house locked; it apparently was empty.

The note explained that he waited until 9:15 on the front porch and then had to go to work.

"When I first saw the note," said Mrs. Loring, "I thought it was a notice of a telegram. Then I took it inside and read it. My first thought then was 'Well, it wouldn't have hurt him to wait a little longer.' Then I got to thinking it over and I decided the note was a blind; that Dick had become impatient and talked Corinna into getting married that night instead of waiting until Wednesday."

And so Mrs. Loring got ready for bed, fairly secure in the thought her daughter had eloped. She admited yesterday that she went into the girl's room several times in the course of the night. Early the next morning she went to a next-door neighbor and called Tear's home.

"When Dick came to the phone," the mother continued, "he said he hadn't seen Corinna the night before; that he had had to go to work. But I thought he just didn't want to tell me they'd got married. I thought she was over there with him.'

But ten minutes later Mrs. Loring's "blood turned to water." She realized "something" had happened to her girl.

Found Purse in Bed.

"I went in to straighten Corinna's bed—she had mussed it up a little when she came in Monday evening—and there under a thrown-back cover was her purse. That's when my blood turned to water. I knew something was wrong if she went out without taking her purse with her."

After this discovery Mrs. Loring got a neighbor to drive her to the LoJaconos. Corinna was not there. They had not heard from her since the brief, informal family gathering of the night before. Mrs. Loring had them take her immediately to the Twelfth Precinct, where she told the police of her daughter's disappearance.

That was Tuesday morning, November 5.

"The Civic League was to meet at my house in the afternoon," said Corinna's mother. "A couple of neighbors came over and took charge of the meeting. I couldn't stay there. I had to look for my girl."

And so the search, which ended the following Saturday with the finding of Corinna's body, was begun.

How They Broke the News.

"I'll never get over the way they broke the news to me," said the mother. "Sometime Saturday afternoon—I don't know what time it was—a policeman came to the front door. I opened it and said, 'What do you know about this story of a taxicab cruising up and down the street the night my daughter disappeared?' The policeman said, 'I've got bigger things than that on my mind. The body of a murdered woman with her head bashed in has just been found over on the ridge.'

"It was my girl," said Mrs. Loring simply.

If ever the guilty person is found no punishment can be too severe for him, the mother said. But after a moment she added:

"Still, that wouldn't bring Corinna back."

She has not read early newspaper accounts of the crime and probably never will, she said yesterday.

"I read about the funeral and the papers since then," Mrs. Loring explained.

For a moment her eyes flashed anger.

"And this talk about Corinna's insurance—of course, she had it made out to me. Any girl would be likely to have her insurance made out to her mother. But I'm not going to touch it until all this talk and fuss has died down. The agent was here the other day, but I told him I didn't want to do a thing about it now."

Again Mrs. Loring's face settled into a kindly expression.

"I haven't been out of the house alone in the evening since this awful thing happened," she confided. "I'm nervous. Sometimes I wonder if I'll ever have the courage to go out alone again."

What about staying on in the white bungalow, still filled with reminders of Corinna?

"I'm not ready to say anything about that yet," she said.

The LoJaconos are still staying with her. Mr. Loring is still at home, though he may be called back any time to his job on the Eastern Shore with the Maryland State highway commission.

Mrs. Loring suddenly leaned forward and said:

"Would you like to go through the house? Would you like to see the things we're supposed to be hiding? Oh, I know all the things people have said about us. You're welcome to go all over the house."

After a moment she continued:

"I can't understand how people can be so cruel. And morbid. Why, they even tried to carry off the flowers from the funeral for souvenirs. I wanted to stay with my girl a little longer in the chapel at the cemetery. But I couldn't bear those people. I couldn't stand their morbid actions and their evil thoughts."

New Deal Loss In Five States Shown by Poll

Literary Digest Reveals 21,342 to 18,711 Are Against Policies.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 21.—The Literary Digest current poll on New Deal acts and policies shows a majority in five States voting against it, the magazine published tomorrow will reveal.

A total of 40,053 ballots was received for the initial tally from Georgia, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma.

On the question "Do you now approve the acts and policies of the Roosevelt New Deal to date?" 18,711 answered "yes" and 21,342 "no."

In Georgia and in Oklahoma the majority was favorable, in the other three States it opposed the present status of the New Deal.

The magazine says the tabulation showed 53.28 per cent no and 46.72 per cent yes, and that a previous poll on the same issue addressed to "practically the same voters" in the spring of 1934 resulted in a 61.15 per cent favorable sentiment and a 38.85 per cent opposing vote.

The initial tally by States:

	Total Votes.	Yes. Votes.	No. Votes.
Georgia	3,947	2,778	1,169
Iowa	17,156	7,309	10,447
Kansas	4,218	1,884	2,334
Missouri	11,779	5,515	6,264
Oklahoma	2,353	1,225	1,128

Governmental Unit Goes Over Top for Chest

Last-Minute Gifts Send Fund Up, but Exact Figures Wait on Audit.

Eleventh-hour gifts yesterday enabled the governmental unit to be the first of the five major divisions to exceed its Community Chest campaign quota.

While the drive proper ended Wednesday, the Federal employes among the canvassers continued soliciting until they raised beyond 100 their earlier quota percentage of 98.44.

"We haven't the exact figures," said Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, unit chairman, "but we are sure we've passed our quota of $678,504."

Volunteer workers in other units also resumed their "clean-up," but delayed making their reports.

Herbert L. Willett, Chest director, announced a final campaign audit would not be completed before December 6 so all post-drive gifts could be included.

Meanwhile, Dr. William McClellan, general chairman, congratulated the canvassers on their "fine help" and encouraged them to contact any potential subscribers who so far have failed to donate.

His letter to all solicitors in part follows:

"Officially the campaign is closed, and I want to express to every worker my personal appreciation of the time and energy and enthusiasm that you have put into it. I only wish that I could say it to you personally.

"Actually the campaign is finished only for those who can conscientiously say that every possible source of contribution has been tapped.

"Campaign headquarters at the Willard will be closed. But the unit chairmen and secretaries will be on the job at the Chest office, 1101 M street, Metropolitan 2284, ready to help you achieve the glorious completion of the work that I know is possible for practically every worker."

Grayson Is Granted Sixth Delay of Trial

The sixth postponement of the trial of John Cooke Grayson, former Treasury Department official, was granted in District Supreme Court yesterday.

Grayson is under indictment on a charge that he warned the late Robert S. Stuntz, vice president and executive officer of the Park Savings Bank, of impending visits of National bank examiners.

United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett sought the delay because many of the Government's witnesses were engaged in the current trial of Benedict McNeil, former assistant cashier of the same bank.

"The court reluctantly grants the motion of the District Attorney," Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue said. "When the case comes up January 13, the court expects it to take precedence over any other appointments of the District Attorney and defense counsel."

'Trick Questions' on Ballot Draw Fire; Local Groups Announce Stands.

By the Associated Press.

Polls close at midnight Saturday in the referendum on "recent trends in Federal legislation" conducted by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Employes of the national chamber said yesterday they have received several hundred returns from local chambers and trade associations throughout the Nation.

Letters containing the marked ballots, they said, are being placed unopened in a safe as fast as they are received, and will not be inspected until the counting begins Sunday.

For that reason, employes said they were unable to estimate how many local chambers have refused to vote on the four referendum questions, based on a report highly critical of the New Deal, submitted by a special committee of directors.

Nine Refused to Vote.

At least nine local groups, however, have announced locally their refusal to vote. The Bristol, Tenn., chamber was the latest to take such action, its directors announcing on Wednesday the questions were so worded and so broad in scope as to make satisfactory replies impossible.

Another report on Wednesday said only one-fifth of the 500 members of the Springfield, Mass., Chamber had voted. One member there, in returning his ballot unsigned, said the questions were "palpably worded to discredit the Administration."

Directors of the Decatur, Ill., Chamber also declined to participate in the referendum, after receiving a committee report which criticized "trick questions" and added:

29 Vote Against "Trends."

"Public announcement of the inevitable results will be interpreted as a continuation of the unfortunate and destructive misunderstanding recently existing between the Administration and the United States Chamber of Commerce, detracting uselessly from the prestige of both."

Others announcing their refusal to participate include chambers at Jacksonville, Fla.; Knoxville and Chattanooga, Tenn.; Des Moines, Iowa; Grand Forks, N. Dak.; Salt Lake City, and Columbia, S. C. The Columbia Chamber resigned from the national organization, its board of governors charging the United States Chamber of Commerce with "anti-New Deal proclivities."

At least 29 chambers have voted overwhelmingly against the reported "trends," the latest to report their actions locally being those at New Orleans, Rockford, Ill., and Columbus, Ohio.

The only chambers which have announced approval of the trends are those at Helena and Kalispell, Mont.

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—John W. O'Leary, chairman of a United States Chamber of Commerce committee, whose study of Federal legislation led to polling of member chambers on their attitude toward legislative trends shown by the last two Congressional sessions, said tonight that failure of some chambers to vote might restrict the chamber from acting on the results.

By-laws of the national organization require that a minimum number of votes be cast before a poll can be the basis for a group expression, he said. He asserted he did not recall the details of the requirement, nor did he know how the poll was running.

Hull Statement on Trade Pact

Text of Secretary of State Cordell Hull's statement defending the American-Canadian trade agreement and indirectly replying to criticism of it by formr President Herbert Hoover was as follows:

The reaction of the country to the trade agreement between the United States and Canada has been overwhelmingly favorable. I have noted a number of protests, confined almost entirely to professional partisan politicians or to some of the specially privileged individuals benefiting from excessive tariff rates, with a noticeable division of opinion, however, among the latter. Such protests as have been made are confined almost exclusively to a very few particular interests. No one questions the broad economic benefits which will result to the Nation as a whole. From the standpoint of both agriculture and industry the soundness of this trade agreement is clear. A few months of practical operation will demonstrate the value of the agreement in terms of increased trade to the mutual benefit of both countries.

I had the experience of closely observing the conditions and circumstances attending the consideration and passage of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill in 1909, and all subsequent tariff measures. I have seen the Capitol overrun with highly paid lobbyists representing most tariff items. They were to be observed in virtually every corridor, passway and dark corner from the House to the Senate end of the Capitol. Through log-rolling and similar insidious methods they harassed Congress and succeeded in securing their own abnormally high rates, especially in the notoriously unsound Hawley-Smoot act of 1930, which, more than any other factor, was responsible for our loss of exports to Canada, aggregating $600,000,000. The reeking national scandal thus attending the passage of this act is well remembered.

This Administration, in striking contrast with the log-rolling method of the past, is at present carrying on in the most careful manner a temporary program to meet the depression emergency by seeking to restore the large volume of trade between this and other countries lost during the years of depression. This extremely important program is being conducted in a strictly nonpartisan manner and thus far with the support of probably 85 per cent of the press of the Nation. It means mutually profitable trade, greater employment of labor and a fuller and more stable measure of domestic prosperity.

The methods employed in formulating agreements and the conduct of the program are open, careful and thorough. In the case of each agreement hearings are given to all interested persons. Invitations are submitted to all to submit data and arguments concerning every tariff item in question. During the succeeding six to 18 months in which trade proposals are being studied each detail pertaining to each tariff item is, in the light of the data submitted, of independent study and of informal consultation, fully and carefully examined by capable, nonpartisan specialists from the various Government departments concerned.

Consideration of the Canadian trade agreement began in January last and its preparation comprised more than ten months of strenuous labor and consideration. Scores of briefs and statements were submitted, both at the oral hearings and in writing at other times. All received the most careful attention. The final outcome represents a judgment based largely on this material. Few legislative hearings have afforded such ample and systematic opportunity for effective presentation of all views and interests.

Our agricultural exports slumped from $1,884,000,000 in 1927 to $694,000,000 in 1933. In other words, we lost markets for some $1,200,000,000 of our farm surpluses. Either we can seek a restoration of most of these foreign markets or we can abandon the idea of increased sales of surpluses and move straight and steadily along the pathway of a regimentation of our processes of production, transportation and distribution. If we cannot sell surpluses abroad we must inescapably restrict our production to our domestic consuming capacity. This means new waves of unemployment, and a permanent dole to many millions on a steadily increasing basis.

The many millions of wage earners thrown out of employment from 1929 to 1933 and of farmers thrown into conditions of bankruptcy during the same period, who know their present improved and steadily improving condition, will, I imagine, think twice before giving heed to the small but powerful Hawley-Smoot wrecking crew that dominated the agricultural, business and economic affairs of the Nation during the years prior to 1933.

Hull Statement Assails Critics Of Trade Pact

ful things for American agriculture that has happened in a long time."

Secretary Wallace suggested to his farm audience that "when anyone says it is going to harm agriculture, ask him to supply the evidence—all the evidence, and ask him to include in that evidence the general welfare of the whole United States."

He contended the pact would "benefit agriculture as a whole" and that it did not injure any producing group. The "enemies of agriculture," however, may attempt to "stir up certain farm groups to act against their own and the Nation's long-time welfare," he asserted.

Meanwhile the opposition to the Canadian agreement took another turn when former Senator C. C. Dill (Democrat), of Washington, now a lawyer here, suggested that the lumber interests, which he claims have been sharply hit by the pact, join with other industries to test the constitutionality of the reciprocal trade agreements act, under which the pact was concluded.

Discussing the situation facing industries hurt by tariff reductions in the agreement, Dill said they could either seek legislation by Congress imposing excise taxes to overcome the tariff reductions made by the President, or they could seek court action to test the legality of granting power to the President "to make treaties without ratification by the Senate." He thought the President would veto any act imposing excise taxes to nullify the terms of the agreement.

WPA to Aid Map Project In Maryland

17 Persons to Be Assigned to Work as Plans Are Co-ordinated.

Approval of WPA aid for the proposed co-ordination of all mapping projects in the State of Maryland, was given yesterday by Francis H. Dryden, State WPA director.

In a letter to Prof. S. S. Steinberg, head of the department of civil engineering at the University of Maryland, Dryden promised that 17 persons would be assigned to the work. The project will be sponsored by the university and the Maryland Planning Commission.

The workers will be assigned to two field parties and an office staff. These will be directed by Prof. Steinberg. The university will furnish office facilities. Objects of the mapping project are:

To co-ordinate efforts of many agencies, including Federal, State, city, county and private agencies, in making surveys and maps in Maryland, thus preventing duplication and overlapping.

To develop permanent records of surveys and maps within the State.

To collect and preserve all worthwhile survey data, thereby salvaging for future use much available information now being lost, and to transcribe information to a master map.

To became a depository for file copies on Maryland maps made by all agencies and established permanently as a library of maps and charts of States.

Sets Salute Deadline.

Everett, Wash., Nov. 21 (AP).—Ray Triechel, principal of the Silver Lake Grade School, today set Saturday noon as the deadline for three young girls to take part in the daily flag salute exercise—or be expelled. Because of religious beliefs of their families, the children, whose names are withheld, declined to salute Thursday. Their parents are to confer with Triechel and County Superintendent C. C. Carpenter.

3 Accused as Regicides Granted Delay in Trial

Aix-en-Provence, France, Nov. 21 (AP).—Continuance of the trial of three Croats accused of complicity in the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia was put over today until the January term of the court.

The defendants — Ivan Rajtich, Zvonimir Pospechil and Mio Kraj— ended their two-day hunger strike, begun after the court disbarred their attorney, Georges Desbons, who was engaged by American Croats. They agreed to let Andre Berthon, whom the court named as their attorney, handle their defense. The postponement was ordered to give Berthon time to study the case.

Union Accepts 2-Day Truce In Ohio Strike

Fear of New Riots Passes; Way Opened to End 9-Week Fight.

By the United Press.

Barberton, Ohio, Nov. 21.—Peace was assured for at least 48 hours in the Ohio insulator strike tonight when a mass meeting of union men and Sheriff James Flower of Summit County accepted a three-point truce proposal effective until Saturday night.

Acceptance of the truce is believed to have paved the way for negotiations between company officials and union men toward settlement of the strike, called nine weeks ago.

The company had no hand in drafting the truce tonight, it was understood. A six-man citizens' committee drew up the proposal which was approved by both the strike committee and Sheriff Flower and later was ratified by the union membership.

To Confine Guards.

The truce provides that: (1) All company guards be confined within the grounds of the Ohio Insulator Co.; (2) All picket lines as of November 19 be re-established; (3) No one be permitted to enter or leave the plant except the sheriff and his regular deputies. "Regular deputies" were understood not to include the 100 company-hired deputized guards who battled with rioters yesterday.

No further efforts to settle the strike would be made tonight, it was learned, although a Federal mediator, Hugh D. Friel, was here. Friel said he was unable to arrange a conference with company officials today, but that he expected to make an appointment tomorrow.

New Riots Doubted.

Fears that a repetition of last night's fierce fighting would be resumed at the plant tonight were dissipated with announcement of the truce. It had been rumored earlier that union sympathizers from Akron were planning to drive to Barberton to augment the pickets.

Company officials in Akron said they had not confered with Friel yet because other business had been arranged previously. They said they were willing to confer with anyone at any time. Union officials also said they were ready to bargain.

The strikers demand 20 per cent wage increase, union recognition and senority rights.

The first violence in the nine-week strike occurred yesterday when the company reopened its doors to those who wished to return. Fierce fighting started when 75 employes were rushed through the picket line into the plant. Hand to hand encounters between club-swinging pickets and gas-bomb hurling guards continued all day and far into the night.

Less than 200 pickets were sent back to the picket lines tonight.

Ex-Rep. Milligan Gravely Ill Here

Physicians attending the former legislator declined to indicate the nature of the illness other than to confirm the seriousness of his condition. Mrs. Milligan arrived here by airplane yesterday to be at his bedside.

Milligan formerly was an assistant Democratic whip in the House. After 13 years in the House he unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination for Senator in the 1934 primary. Since retirement he has resumed law practice here and in Missouri.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

COLLEGE presidents indicate in letters that they do not ask or expect any special favors for college graduates in the Government service or elsewhere. These letters are arriving in response to the charge made by E. Claude Babcock, president, American Federation of Government Employes, that the examinations now being given by the Civil Service Commission appear to favor formal education as against practical experience.

BAKER.

"It seems to me clear that there should be no discrimination either for or against college men in the public service. Obviously there are some positions of technical and professional nature where a college education is essential. On the other hand, there are many positions where experience in practical affairs and long-time service with the Government is certainly equal to a college training. I believe that whenever any vacancy occurs in the Government service, candidates should be judged entirely on ability and performance. In some instances this may mean a man with college training would have the advantage; in other cases that a man who has had no college training but who has served the Government faithfully in less important jobs would have more claim. As a college executive, I recognize the fact that our democracy by no means depends upon men with college training. Such men, of course, give excellent service, but many men and women who have never seen the inside of a college have shown ability and devotion equal to that displayed by any college graduate."

William Lowe Bryan, of Indiana University, feels that noncollege men should have at least the opportunity to compete for appointments and promotions.

E. A. Gilmore, of Iowa State University, expresses a similar view, holding that whatever advantage accrues to college men should be the result of competency; not the mere fact that they are college trained.

The Drafting Section of Soil Conservation Service, under supervision of W. F. Beamon, chief draftsman, has moved from the fourth floor of the Printcraft Building to larger quarters on the eighth floor of the same building.

CCC Educational Program.

Howard W. Oxley, director of CCC Education Programs, has called a series of meetings of district educational advisers in all parts of the country to co-ordinate the educational work of the camps and to plan future activities. Recent meetings have been held in Boston, New York, Baltimore and Atlanta.

Next week's programs calls for a meeting in Omaha, Monday; Chicago, Tuesday, with Wednesday's meeting to be held in Indianapolis. The corps area commanders in the various regions have issued invitations to the following Washington officials:

Robert Fechner, director, ECW work; F. A. Silcox, chief, Forest Servie; H. H. Bennett, chief, Soil Conservation Service; Arno B. Cammerer, director, National Park Service, and Dr. J. W. Studebaker, Commissioner of Education.

You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Lowe's Fox (Ed Lowry, Slate Brothers and other acts; screen, Three Marx Brothers in "A Night at the Opera); or to P, Loew's Palace (second week of Clark Gable, Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone in "Mutiny on the Bounty"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (stage, Adrienne, the international mental marvel; screen, William Powell and Rosalind Russell in "Rendezvous").

The Athletic and Recreational Association of Agriculture announces a dance and entertainment to be held at the Washington Hotel December 7. A. C. Edwards, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and Joseph Bentolini (P), are handling ticket sales.

Justice Postettes.

Miss Eileen Daly is enjoying a vacation in Wilmington, Del. Miss Thelma Harvey and Miss Mary Silvestro are on extended sick leave. Miss Marie Reilly recently enjoyed a vacation at Skyland, Va. Miss Joyce Pelton and Miss Rose Marie Beatty are enrolled in a course in criminal law.

Solicitor General's Office.

Q. Is the Solicitor General's office a separate unit of the Department of Justice?—S. D. (C).

A. The Solicitor General is the Attorney General's chief assistant, and his office is a major unit of the Justice Department. By special provision of law he exercises the duties of the Attorney General in case of a vacancy in the office of Attorney General or in his absense or disability.

The Solicitor General also has special charge of the business of, and appears for and represents the Government in the Supreme Court of the United States.

When requested by the Attorney General, the Solicitor General may conduct and argue any case in which the United States is interested in any court of the United States, or may attend to the interests of the Government, in any State court or elsewhere. No appeal is taken by the United States to any appellate court without his authorization.

Stanley F. Reed is the present Solicitor General.

Agriculture Graduate Courses.

Q. Please advise me if it is too late to register in the classes offered by the Department of Agriculture and where I can get a list of courses offered.—Helen Gerson (P).

A. Information regarding the Department of Agriculture's Graduate School and the courses offered may be obtained from Dr. A. F. Woods, the director of the school. It is too late to enter the courses this semester, but some new courses will be offered in January and a revised list of courses will be available iate next month.

Q. How can I get in touch with John A. Marshall, director of the District Unemployment Compensation Board?—Pearl E. Noble (C).

A. Mr. Marshall, who is also superintendent of insurance for the District of Columbia, may be reached at his office in the Ford Building, 451 Pennsylvania avenue, northwest. The Unemployment Compensation Board has not yet set up an establishment however.

Clipper Carries First Air Mail To China Today

Huge Craft Is Ready for Take-Off; Heavy Load for Orient.

By the Associated Press.

Alameda, Calif., Nov. 21.—The transpacific air mail will start operating tomorrow.

Final blind-landing tests put the big China clipper in shape today for the inaugural 8,000-mile flight.

Letters poured in from stamp collectors everywhere to make up more than a ton of mail cargo. Special planes brought last-minute mailings from Eastern cities.

Postmaster William H. McCarthy, of San Francisco, said it would constitute the largest single consignment of "first cover" mail of record "on land, sea or air." About 85,000 pieces accumulated.

The inaugural flight, set to start at 3:30 p. m., Pacific standard time, is to be preceded by ceremonies in which Postmaster General James A. Farley will present a message from President Roosevelt.

The schedule calls for one hop each day on the westward trip—to Midway the second day, Wake the third, Guam the fourth and Manila the fifth.

Germany Bars Jews From Stock Markets

Berlin, Nov. 21 (AP).—Jewish stock exchange traders, on orders of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, minister of economics, will be excluded from exchange floors beginning tomorrow. Germany has eight exchanges.

Schacht's brief announcement said he had taken the step on the ground of the Reich citizenship law, enacted at Nurnberg.

Refusal To Register.

The United Gas Improvement Co. has refused to register with the S. E. C. by the end of the month, as the holding company act requires, and has filed a bill of complaint in the Federal District Court at Philadelphia to restrain the Government from enforcing provisions of this law against it. The justification of the action cannot be challenged if, as asserted, the company's constitutional defenses against enforcement would be impaired by immediate registration or if such registration should operate to delay a final test of the validity of the law.

Otherwise there is no excuse for noncompliance with admittedly simple registration requirements calling for information that would have to be supplied under any reasonable system of Federal regulation of holding companies. Assuming, therefore, that the U. G. I. merely wishes to expedite legal proceedings, and is not opposed to registration as such, the wisdom of its action can only be judged by awaiting the outcome of the controversy. When lawyers disagree as to the proper or expedient course to pursue, as they apparently do in the present instance, the layman is certainly not in a position to weigh the merits of different methods of procedure.

It is, however, quite certain that the public interest as well as that of the holding companies calls for a speedy determination of the constitutional issues raised by the new regulatory law. Until a test case has reached the Supreme Court the companies will be forced to mark time. Until they know whether they are to be dissolved, reorganized, or permitted to exist under a less rigid regulatory system, they will be unable to plan for the future. They can neither ask nor expect investors to put new capital into the industry under present conditions. The prevalent uncertainty prevents an extension of plant and equipment which would bring increased demands for the products of the heavy industries, more employment for labor, and better service for the general public.

Utility managements, of course, are primarily concerned to overthrow those provisions of the law which they regard as oppressive, unreasonable and destructive of their property rights. But whether they win or lose in challenging the constitutionality of the act, they are performing a public service by pressing for a decision at the earliest possible moment.

The Pressure Of Sanctions.

Italy's threat to apply her own "sanctions" to League states now boycotting her goods is a very naive attempt to fortify domestic morale. It is equivalent to telling these countries that the Italians will not only themselves help to enforce the League sanctions, but will even tighten the restrictions which have been imposed. It is impossible, of course, to take these threats seriously, although the spirits of the populace may be momentarily improved by hurling defiance at so-called League oppressors.

The pressure of sanctions will of itself speedily limit Italian purchases abroad to essential commodities for which means of payment can be found. In view of Italy's limited financial resources and her lack of credit, it is safe to say that her buying will be done in those markets that offer the best bargains in goods not banned. Other things being equal, Italy will doubtless prefer to place her orders in non-League countries which are prepared to receive her exports in exchange. Since purchases are largely on a cash basis, however, the closing of export outlets by sanctions will rapidly deprive Italy of cash resources. These cannot be replaced by possible increased sales to a few countries not parties to the League boycott.

The tightening of Italian belts, the increasingly stringent restrictions upon imports, the threats of further trade curtailment ahead, are not evidences that Italy can successfully defy sanctions. They indicate rather that she already recognizes the desperate battle which must be waged to survive their rigors. The recent announcement that all gold in private hands must be turned over to the Government is another indication that Italy has been put "on the spot" by the League boycott. With cash balances held abroad depleted by sanctions, gold becomes increasingly indispensable as an alternative means of payment. Consequently Italy is husbanding her already severely curtailed gold reserves and trying to augment them by gathering in nonmonetary supplies now in private hands.

The Fascist Government may pretend that its greatly reduced ability to buy abroad is a form of revenge, but few will be deceived by this patent bluffing.

Japan Holds Her Hand.

The sudden relaxation of pressure upon China does not indicate that Japan's imperialistic policy has been abandoned or even substantially modified. It does suggest that the Tokyo government is apprehensive over the world-wide resentment which her brazen attempt to subjugate China proper has aroused.

Not all the maneuvers preceding the abrupt shift in tactics can be clearly seen at this time or distance. But it is known that Maj. Gen. Doihara, Japan's military chieftain in China, was all set to force establishment of an autonomous" government in the northern provinces. Inspired statements had prepared the world for the announcement of a new puppet state intended to weaken the authority of the Nanking government and extend the area over which Japan exercises commercial and military control. Then, suddenly, the Chinese government stiffened its resistance and Gen. Doihara's plans have been disowned. Seldom has a responsible Japanese commander suffered such "loss of face."

Numerous elements contributed to this favorable turn of events. Foreign interests are far more extensive in the Peiping-Tientsin area than in Manchuria, Jehol or the occupied parts of Outer Mongolia. With the aid of diplomatic conversations, Tokyo civil authorities have probably been impressed by the hazardous complications that would arise from any military campaign in this area. Undoubtedly the Far Eastern visit of Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, chief economic adviser to the British government, has contributed to the more cautious Japanese policy now in evidence.

Britain's support of the new Chinese silver policy, which has political as well as economic significance, is likewise a factor in the unity and fortitude of China's national authorities in resisting Japanese invasion. Japan could easily enforce its ultimatum upon the Nanking government in spite of that convergence of forces. To compel separation of the northern provinces at present, however, might result in hostilities that would be extremely embarrassing for Japan. Moreover, Russia is watching every development in China with interest sufficiently intense to warn Japan against becoming involved in any extensive conflict.

Perhaps as important as all these influences is the forthcoming assembly in London of the 1935 naval conference. Japan could not sincerely recommend a reduction of navies, nor ask in good faith for an increase in her ratio, with her armed forces in the act of garroting China. Whether or not recognition of the Japanese-created state of Manchukuo becomes an issue at the conference, further violation of the Nine-Power Treaty while the conference is in session would certainly be fatal to every aspiration of the Tokyo government for equality in naval armaments.

The blundering militarists who have been busily applying the thumbscrews to north China took no cognizance of these danger signals. Japan's more astute civil authorities have properly intervened. But the breathing spell granted China is not likely to have permanent value unless it is utilized by Nanking in forming a united front for the preservation of national independence.

Facing New Local Taxes.

Information assembled by the Commissioners' special tax committee clearly shows that the District must face the alternatives of higher taxes or lower standards of municipal service. Local expenditures on schools, libraries, streets, bridges and other permanent improvements have sunk to a low level. The government is being operated, for the most part, on a subsistence basis, in spite of the fact that the city is growing rapidly. Plant replacement and expansion cannot long be neglected without multiplying deficiencies in some instance already acute.

Local authorities are well advised to confine this study to new tax levies. There should be no increase in the general property tax if that can possibly be avoided. Indeed, carefully devised levies that would relieve home owners of part of the burden they now carry would be welcome. Impartial analysis of the need for new revenue is likely to convince forward-looking citizens, however, that new levies of some sort are inevitable. Washington cannot keep pace with the other large cities of the country unless its citizens are willing to finance essential community service.

The discouraging aspect of the situation is the unwillingness of Congress to pay an equitable share of this expense from Federal funds. There is a self-evident obligation for the Government to finance the extraordinary items placed in the District budget merely because this city is the Nation's Capital. Yet the Federal contribution has fallen from $9,953,256 in 1920, when total appropriations amounted to only about $20,000,000, to $5,700,000 in 1935, when appropriations reached $38,952,765. Part of this reduction was probably justified. But with the budget again expanding in response to city growth and the accumulation of delayed necessities, a larger Federal contribution becomes imperative.

It is now evident that the local authorities are ready to met Congress half way along the road to an equitable adjustment. They will be ready to suggest new taxes in return for an increase in the so-called "lump sum." If Corporation Counsel Prettyman and his colleagues can also devise a formula by which the Federal allowance to the District could be automatically adjusted, on a fair basis, without the familiar squabble in Congress each year, Washington's most acute financial problem would be happily solved.

A Furtive Attack.

In the current issue of Today Raymond Moley deplores what he calls the "furtive character of the negotiations for reciprocal treaties by the United States." He objects to the way in which the Canadian trade agreement was consummated "without knowledge on the part of the people at large." Mr. Moley concludes his editorial with an indorsement of George N. Peek's proposal that tariffs be reduced only on the basis of bilateral bargaining, with a view to preservation of "American price levels."

Evidently Mr. Moley not only objects to the alleged furtiveness of the preliminary negotiations, but he is opposed in principle to everything that the Department of State has done to lower tariff barriers by agreement. The secrecy which he denounces did not prevent interested parties from presenting their case to the proper authorities. It merely kept the uninformed public, which could not have been enlightened by the publication of any amount of detailed information, from being prejudiced in advance against the agreement. It is forgotten that this procedure offers protection against the vicious log-rolling and propaganda that formerly characterized all attempts at tariff revision.

Certainly Secretary Hull has made no secret of his intention to bring about a general lowering of the tariff through reciprocal treaties, as an alternative to the primitive bilateral bargaining which Mr. Peek has so indefatigably espoused. Mr. Moley is within his rights in objecting to the more liberal policies which the Administration chose to follow. But he would himself seem less furtive if he openly denounced those methods instead of joining Mr. Hoover in suggesting that the treaty is a product of subterranean bargaining that ought to arouse the suspicion of all good citizens.

Decision Deferred.

For the ninth time since the Nobel Peace Prize was established, in 1896, by Alfred Bernhard Nobel, the awarding committee has failed to designate a recipient. Obviously, in the opinion of the committee, no individual or society merited the honor. Thus the monetary benefits which would have accrued to the winner have reverted to the fund, in keeping with the provisions of the Nobel will. Of the five fields in which the awards are made—physics, chemistry, medicine, literature, and peace—the prize for the last named has been reserved most frequently. Here is a biting comment on the uneven advance of civilization.

At present when peace sentiment is predominant among peoples everywhere and when most nations are bending every effort toward outlawing war, it seems inexplicable that the committee could find no person or society deserving of its recognition. Such failure raises the question as to whether the prize is presented as candy is given to children—when they are good. This is sharpened by the fact that similar reservation of the award was made during the year of the declaration of war, and again in 1918. Yet how much more fitting if it should be utilized in times like these as an active agent in the work for peace! This would not only be more effective but would seem more in keeping with the intent of the award to promote "the fraternity of nations and the abolition or diminution of standing armies and the formation and increase of peace congresses."

There is no doubt that the Nobel Peace Prize Committee is thoroughly painstaking and conscientious. And in excessive caution may lie the real reason for the committee's apparent failure to recognize extraordinary effort now being attempted by the peace-preservation machinery of the League of Nations.

The Better Part Of Valor.

One of the last remaining great commanders of the World War, John Rushworth Jellicoe was born to the old English tradition of salt water and grew up in it. After the great battle of Jutland, he did excellent work as first sea lord and chief of naval staff. But that battle was the outstanding event of his long life, and now "The Little Admiral" dies, at 76, with the Jutland controversy still undecided.

Surely, as the historical perspective intensifies, indecision cannot continue. German experts have pointed out that, although Von Scheer was materially weaker, he gave more punishment than he received. British critics add that Jellicoe deliberately allowed his enemy to show a clean pair of heels and so lacked, they declare, "the Nelson touch." Von Scheer could afford risks, whereas Jellicoe had nothing to gain by pursuit—everything to lose. At Jutland "the Nelson touch" would have ruined a Nelson. The strategy of Jellicoe passed triumphantly the sole test of conflict: it kept the German grand fleet out of action until the end of the war.

Just as Admiral Robley Evans was known among his admiring men as "Fighting Bob," so Jellicoe—with an equal want of reason—was known to his adoring sailors as "Hell-Fire Jack." Actually, the chief virtue of both of these brave officers was the rare virtue of a level head. Any fool can fight. Those who stand out in history are the leaders who gain their essential objectives, the fighting being purely incidental to that goal.

"The Constitution of the United States isn't held in contempt by any true American!" shouts an orator. On the basis that familiarity breeds contempt, the assertion undoubtedly is true.

Imagine That!

The Right To Know.

To the Editor of The Past—Sir: As a one-time city school superintendent of the District of Columbia, I have a definite and intense interest in the present discussion respecting the oath to be taken monthly, it seems, by the teachers of the public schools of the National Capital.

For many years in two different institutions of the higher learning, I have been a teacher of economics and of law; and such a person naturally comes to look at the questions involved from particular angles.

It may be possible that when the Congress passed the act and the President signed it to prevent the spread of communistic doctrines in the land, they meant by the phrase "teach or advocate" something that does not quite run along with the interpretations now apparently assumed to be correct. There is difficulty not only with one word, "teach," but with two words, and the second is "or." It would be easy enough to cite cases where the courts have construed the second of two words connected by "or" as a synonym or an equivalent or an interpretation of the first word. In such a case, "or" comes to mean, "that is." Hence the phrase, perhaps, really means "teach, that is advocate" communism.

I submit as common sense the proposition that it is peculiarly dangerous in this age to send youth into the free world with no knowledge whatsoever of such social philosophies as communism. Certainly I desire none of my numerous grandchildren to be released into the existing social scene in total ignorance that there is such a philosophy as communism. On the contrary, I desire that they should know what it is and wherein it is dangerous to the social order, to progress, to ethics. And I have never met any persons more competent to interpret communism to youth than the teachers of America whether in public schools and colleges or in private.

Boys and girls have the right to know what the adult world is thinking and doing. Communism is a menace; why let our youth out into life with this menace ready to be hurled at them, and they in total ignorance of its existence and nature?

There is another aspect of the matter, however, in which I am in perfect sympathy with the authorities; there is no good reason why teachers should not take daily, if so required, the oath of allegiance to Constitution and to country. There is plenty of room in America for liberty of opinion under the Constitution and the laws. If I am to teach the commandment "Thou shalt not steal," I must first teach what stealing is. If I am to teach that communism kills property, self, reliance, liberty, good morals, I must first teach—that is—explain what communism is.

Therefore, I suggest that the act really means that no employe of the schools shall "teach, that is, advocate" communism; the teachers who have courses involving social science or ethics or law should not only not be forbidden to explain communism, but they should be required to do so. Explanation explodes communism.

No Valid Parallel.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the imposition of economic sanctions on Italy by the League, representing 52 nations it would appear, superficially at least, that Italian ambitions in Ethiopia will be thwarted and Italy ruined economically.

Yet does the memory of the English, instigator of sanctions, hark back to Napoleonic times and the Continental System? This system, put into force by Napoleon and directed against England, excluded British ships from all ports under French control and that meant all ports of the continent; the idea was to ruin British trade and bring that country to submission.

Let us make a comparison between the sanctions against Italy and the Continental System against England; it is the picture reversed because sanctions are taken by 52 nations versus one, Italy. [Editor's note: It is also reversed because the League members are applying sanctions voluntarily, whereas Napoleon dictated the Continental System to his subject states.]

And what was the result of the Continental System? As we know the continental countries under control of Napoleon saw themselves economically ruined and by degrees not only disobeyed the rules of the Continental System, but were sufficiently angered by it to take up arms once more against their conqueror.

What will be the result of the sanctions? Like a boomerang they will seriously injure the 52 nations, disrupt their trade, impoverish the countries and result in a general break-up of the League, with England, like Napoleon, standing alone and discredited.

"Shocked And Disillusioned."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am not a Catholic, but, as a Christian, I have gloried in the leadership of the Pope for world peace. Throughout the World War his voice rang out above all interracial hatred and religious antagonisms, demanding a just peace, based on the supremacy of right above might.

Today I am shocked and disillusioned by his appallingly nationalistic suggestion (if press reports be true) that if the League will delay the application of sanctions peace may be secured by the collapse of the Ethiopian defense!

That the Italian priest who has assumed the title of the Vicar of Christ on earth should propose such a means of obtaining peace to the nations which have united to outlaw an aggressor nation—a nation which is defying all the ideals of peace and justice and is relying on the principle of might against right to attain its selfish ends—seems utterly incomprehensible.

Only Communism Was Banned.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see that the red Russians, and also the red Americans, are calling for the teaching of communism in our public schools!

Far be it from me to say that the innocents—the ignorant—should not be instructed in the rudiments of these isms: Nazism, Fascism, communism—but why the stress on communism? There are many other isms which may be held important by their advocates; why not give them a showing, too?

We have wandered far from our necessary and somewhat neglected three R's. The ordinary mind seems to hold just so much. Do not let us try to fill it to overflowing with evil.

Two Viewpoints On Intervention

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although you did not publish my letter of October 30 criticizing your editorial "Outrages Abroad" of the preceding day, I venture to try again. I cannot believe that you are so sensitive to criticism leveled at yourself when you are so free in criticizing others.

It seems that when you undertake to write on Mexico you forget entirely anything you might have learned about logic. Let me show you the weakness of your stand as judged from your own words:

1. You say that in answering the letter of the Knights of Columbus President Roosevelt probably (italics ours throughout) had the Golden Rule in the forefront of his mind.

2. You write also that the intervention of the United States in the Mexican matter would probably have only a negative value.

3. Furthermore, you state that the Department of State presumably (you probably wanted to write probably) supplied the President with the basis of his assertion.

4. Your answer to the argument that the United States has repeatedly expressed sympathy for other peoples under less aggravated circumstances is that we may (i. e., probably) have so intervened far too often.

Probabilities imply uncertainty. Facts give certainty. Ever since the Borah resolution nothing is more certain in this whole Mexican mess than the fact that the anti-Catholics of this country do not want facts about Mexico.

REV. URBAN ADELMAN,
O. M. Cap., St. Francis Capuchin College, Washington, Nov. 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The reply of President Roosevelt to Supreme Knight Martin H. Carmody should properly put a quietus on the ill-advised activities of certain churchmen and laymen who want an official investigation by the United States of religious conditions in Mexico.

"It has been the policy of this Administration to refrain from intervening in such direct concerns of the Mexican government. That policy I shall continue to pursue." These words from the President emphasize the historical course pursued by the United States in similar past situations.

In a letter printed in The Post April 5, 1935, I pointed out that in his analysis of American policy in Mexican relations, James Morton Callahan found no instance of intervention on purely religious grounds. A reaffirmation of this well-settled policy will do more to maintain the long standing cordial friendship existing between our Southern neighbors and ourselves than the religious interventionists would have us believe.

The Post Impressionist

Ante-Beagle Dog Days

Post Office, Friday.

FROM "Over in Virginia," the National Beagle Trials will soon provide the moment's sole enthusiasm for Washington dog lover and hunting folk. Obviously such a moment is the characteristic one for the contrary-minded Post-Impressionist to be reminded—and so to remind his readers—that the hunting dog was not a beagle.

In fact, he belonged to a breed never greatly used by American sportsmen. He was the greyhound.

The old fellow wrote that his "Booke" contained some matter "from mine own experience and conjecture"—matter which, to the modern mind, may sometimes well seem more of the latter sort than of the former. For the rest, that volume was, with the exception of a single chapter, a translation from "La Venerie" of Jacques du Fouilloux as published in 1560. Yet the exceptional chapter is significant, and Turbervile explains it thus:

"Because I find nothing in mine author particularly written of coursing with greyhounds it seemeth unto me that they have not the kind of venerie so much in estimation in France as we hold it here in England . . . We here in England do make great account of such pastime as is to be seen in coursing with greyhounds at deer, hare, fox or such like . . ."

Well, there is another old writer's comparison: "As one who only lets loose a greyhound out of the slip is said to 'hound him' at the hare."

How the greyhound ever got to England it is not for The Post-Impressionist to say. There are authorities who contend that the breed is all of 2,000 years of age. Close cousins and cousins many times removed are employed for hunting in a score of countries. They differ in coat and size, but their variations appear to be merely environmental.

There is many a greyhound asleep at the crossed feet on many a crusader's tomb. Did the crusaders bring their dogs back from the East? No—for the greyhound was in England before any English left there to retake the Holy Land for Christendom, and to pillage Christian Constantinople . . .

Somewhere it has been suggested that this animal was a companion of the Celts: He adventured westward with them in their earliest occidental migrations.

At all events, he was on the westward side of the Channel when Canute reigned there. He was a perquisite of gentility and a subject of sumptuary laws.

Vide Canute's forestry legislation. That monument of justice lays a heavy penalty upon anybody daring to sport a greyhound beyond his means. Before you could keep such a distinguished pet, you had to be the owner of land that brought you in at least £100 per annum.

That thoroughly Anglican chapter introduced by Turbervile into his version of du Fouilloux tells how British huntsmen coursed the red deer with greyhounds in his day. It indicates that the sport was conducted according to an almost regal ritual.

Among much else, one reads that the pack was divided, and leashed, into three grades, or social sets, rather like the classes in the real Spanish bullfights—not the calm Catalonian fights lately described in this newspaper by sportsman Pegler. The first brace were "slipped" at the entire herd of deer and acted as scouts, separating from his fellows the prey best worth the hunter's while. The second brace provoked resistance. The third——

But take Tuberville's word for it: "A red deer will bear sometimes four or five brace of greyhounds before they can pull him down, such wonderful force has he, and so easily shakes off a greyhound when he pincheth him."

This is an amusement which has long since disappeared from England, whereas, in the odd phraseology of the London Times' kennel expert, "coursing the hare being a sport that does not admit of many variations" between centuries, "it is not surprising that it was conducted in the same way in Queen Elizabeth's reign as it is today. Changing times do not seem to have made much difference."

We wish some expert would tell us when and how English hunters chased Reynard "with greyhounds." To be sure, the only pack with which—or after which—the Post-Impressionist ever hunted the British fox was the Staintendale Hunt's; but the Staintendale's traced its history all the way back to the time of King John, and it was a pack of—well, foxhounds.

Also, to become metrical, we'd like to ask:
When did the beagle
First follow the bugle,
Or bay to the hunting horn?

Bullfights And War.

Madrid, Nov. 21.

It is with heavy heart that your correspondent has to reveal that the ancient, romantic sport of bullfighting has its practical aspects no less disenchanting than those which disclose themselves to intimate students of the prize fighting industry in America. Bull fighting, with its splendor and rituals, royal patronage and noble literature, has many points of contact with the vulgar trade of churning human ears into cauliflowers and human beings into twitching, slobbering imbeciles with furious lefts and rights to the body.

There are, for example, many in the bull fighting profession who perform an office similar to that of a prize fight manager and sport writers specializing in the bull fight branch of journalism who are not above accepting a donation from the manager in return for a few words of praise next to pure reading matter.

Mr. Gene Tunney, in one of his literary confidences, whispered for all the world to hear that he had at one stage of his career prostituted two members of the press in New York to obtain the reputation which he had not earned within that sweat-and-bloodstained square of canvas which is classically known as the roped arena.

• • • •

Bullfighting, however, being a distant and thus a glamorous sport, seemed pure in heart, fine and altogether noble, except that there have been persistent objections among the fair-haired races to the brutality which is inflicted on the bull.

As to the charge of brutality, however, the Spaniards long ago formulated their answer. They have cited the case of the English or North American sportsman who goes out fishing for the small but courageous trout fish and, having snagged him by the lip with barred hook, delights to torture him until the trout runs out of strength and fight and submits to capture. The trout fish is held in the highest respect because his courage compels him to fight against a human being who has more strength in one fist than the trout has in his whole body and who outweighs the trout by the ratio of 100 to 1 and up.

There also is the case of the fox hunt, a popular sport among the English and a social diversion, if not exactly a sport, among the second generation duces of American aristocracy along the Eastern seaboard.

Joining in the hunt are a great parcel of wealthy gents and ladies, many of them more than half-plastered so early in the morning, having drunk their breakfast as an antidote to the dinner which they finished drinking not so many hours before. These characters sit on large and expensive horses bedecked in formal hunt costumes, and they emit queer cries not unlike the idiotic "skinny wow wow" of the University of Illinois at certain stages of the chase.

• • • •

So it hardly behooves the cat which tortures the mouse to peer down its nose at the toreador who tortures the bull, and your correspondent herein feels sad, only it has just been explained to him that bullfighting, like prizefighting, is a business having its angels.

There's small chance at the worst that the toreador will lose the decision to the bull, for he has a corps of assistants in the ring to wave cloaks at the victim in case the bull should become offensive and divert him from his attack. Thus, with barbed darts imbedded in his muscles to torture him at every move, with his wind and strength failing and with the whole team of opponents making distracting passes at him, he does not know who his opponent really is until presently a sword enters his back, severing his spinal column and drops him paralyzed, exhausted and threshing in pain upon the sand.

In the extraordinary event, however, that the bull should pick out the man with the sword and tear after him, refusing to be turned away by the fluttering capes of the seconds, it is not at all undignified for the toreador to make for the exit and climb over the wall to regain his composure. Having gained sufficient confidence and experience on soft bulls, after the manner of Primo Carnera in the ring and Benito Mussolini in Abyssinia, the bullfighter then advances from preliminary boy and is knocked down.

Mussolini was ditched for his debut in the star bout class when the British fleet went into the Mediterranean, but the contest has been indefinitely postponed. But now that he is fighting in main events the bullfighter still maintains his team to agitate and divert the bull when going becomes too rough. And he still has his manager and press agent to explain that he was out of shape or sprained his ankle if the bull chases him over the wall.

Your correspondent has even heard that most bullfighters are just great big good-natured kids and good to their mothers. So the sum of it all is that the Spaniards are only a people, after all, a prey to publicity and their own idolatrous imagination, even as the American public, which for half a dozen years, at the cost of more than two million dollars, refused to accept its own conviction that Jack Sharkey was the most colossal false alarm in the history of the prizefight racket.

'As Canada Sees It

By William Marchington.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Ottawa.

The people of Canada generally are so heartily sick of the hard times experienced during the last five years that they welcome the prospect of a return to comparative prosperity which increased trade with the United States promises under the agreement recently signed at Washington. Some manufacturers, who fear that keener competition from their American rivals will mean reduced profits, are predicting ruin, but they are receiving scant sympathy from the Canadian government, which is fully aware that the tariff barriers are still higher than they were before the Bennetts, the Smoots and the Hawleys raised them to the highest levels ever known in North America.

Under the policy of economic nationalism, tariffs have run as high as Haman's gallows. Moreover, Canadian trade and production since 1930 have been restricted with the result that agriculture has been prostrated, industries have languished. The Nation's foreign trade, which formerly exceeded $2,000,000,000 annually, has been slashed to $1,000,000,000 annually. The four western provinces and scores of municipalities have become virtually bankrupt. The railways have piled up deficits of $50,000,000 annually. Salaries and wages have been cut by from 10 to 40 per cent, half a million potential wage-earners have been unemployed and more than 1,000,000 men, women and children actually have been dependent upon official and private charity for their daily bread.

While realizing that they will not gain access to the rich markets of the United States on anything like the favorable terms they enjoyed before the Fordney-McCumber and Smoot-Hawley tariffs went into effect, the farmers of Canada greatly appreciate the substantial concessions President Roosevelt has granted in respect to live cattle, horses, seed potatoes, hay, poultry, cream and other products of the farm.

The annual quota of 155,000 which the United States gives Canada on beef cattle will be sufficient to remove from the Canadian market the surplus which has depressed domestic prices and it is officially estimated that the Canadian cattle grower will receive an additional $9 per head for every butcher steer that he is able to ship across the line.

• • • •

The substantial concessions which the United States has accorded to Canadian producers of cream, seed potatoes, clover and grass seeds, hay, turnips and maple sirup and sugar are considered of "prime importance." Previous to the imposition of the Smoot-Hawley tariff, which was prohibitive, Canadian cream producers shipped to the cities of the Eastern States nearly 5,000,000 gallons of cream annually. The experts who framed the agreement are hopeful that the reduction of duty from 56 to 35 cents per gallon will partially revive the trade, but Canada is to be restricted to a quota of 1,500,000 gallons at the lower tariff rate.

Canadian lumbermen are pleased by the concession accorded by the United States on forest products and the experts believe this favor is likely to lead to the largest volume of trade in the next few years. Some years ago Canadian producers were virtually deprived of the American market by the imposition of a tariff and excise tax totaling $4 per 1,000 boardfeet and an annual trade which totaled $38,000,000 in 1929 dwindled to around $5,000,000 in the last few years. Fortunately, Canada was able to make a bargain with the United Kingdom whereby a market was opened in the British Isles for $18,000,000 worth of Canadian timber last year. It is now hoped that the partial reopening of the American market will rejuvenate an industry that has languished in comparison with the prosperous days before the depression and tariff wars. Free entry to the United States of Canadian newsprint for a further period of three years will enable the paper manufacturers of the Dominion to maintain their exports.

Canadian manufacturers generally have accepted the sweeping tariff reductions on the fabricated products of the United States philosophically. Henry C. Cockshutt, former governor of Ontario, and chairman of the biggest plow manufacturing company in Canada, complains that the United States gets the plum and Canada gets the dynamite. Other manufacturers vociferously suspect that Uncle Sam, as usual, got the better of the bargain, but thus far no factories have been closed.

As a matter of fact Canadian industries have more to fear from the abolition of dumping duties and arbitrary customs valuations, which permitted overnight changes in the tariff, than they have to fear from the actual reductions in the tariff itself. The truth is that while the new Canadian government is slashing the sky-high tariffs imposed by former Prime Minister Bennett, the most-favored-nation tariffs, which Canada now extends to the United States, are approximately the same as the highest tariff, which existed when the Liberal party was in power prior to 1930, with Mackenzie King as Prime Minister and Charles A. Dunning as Minister of Finance. The duties on American plows, cultivators, binders and reapers and other farm machinery will be 12½ per cent under the new tariff structure as against 10 per cent under the budget brought down by Dunning in 1930. Under the lately defeated Bennett government the tariff on American farm machinery coming into Canada was 25 per cent.

• • • •

Canadian motorists are pleased with concessions in the trade agreement with the United States which provide for the admission to this country of automobiles and gasoline at lower rates of duty. Within 24 hours after the terms of the pact were published the Ford Motor Co., of Canada, announced price reductions on all models effective at once.

Canadian consumers and householders will also benefit by price cuts on such articles as electric refrigerators, radios, kitchen ware, vacuum cleaners, washing machines and sewing machines, table cutlery, stoves and ranges of all kinds, textiles and wearing apparel, rugs, carpets, rubber goods, glass tableware, fruits and vegetables and numerous other products.

It is a curious thing that no one has suggested consummation of the trade agreement will eventually result in the annexation of Canada to the United States as conservative politicians did in 1911 when a less comprehensive treaty was advocated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Strangely enough, Sir Thomas White, who fought the 1911 pact on many platforms and became minister of finance in the cabinet of Sir Robert Borden after Laurier had been ousted in the reciprocity fight, says the lowering of American tariffs on lumber, fish, agricultural products and other commodities should "prove of material advantage to Canadian primary producers." Twenty-four years ago he was one of the "Noble Eighteen" Liberals who deserted Laurier and raised the hatchet against him for negotiating a trade treaty with President Taft providing for easier admission of Canadian natural products to the United States. His attitude is typical of many.

Canadian financial experts, surveying the benefits of the new agreement, estimate that frozen assets to the value of $2,000,000,000 held in Western Canada and other agricultural areas by Canadian financial institutions will be gradually thawed out as a result of the rejuvenation of trade and industry. Release of these frozen assets will come about through the stimulation of purchasing power among the farming community, it is believed.

Canadians generally argue that the longer the life of the agreement the greater will be the movement of commerce northward and southward and the greater the long-range benefits for both countries.

Import Fiction.

What with everybody drawing up new tariff schedules these days, it behooves this department to nominate a few books for the honorable free list. Also, with an eye to the general welfare, to suggest a 1,000 per cent duty on certain others. No barrier, in these latter instances, could very well be made too high.

Welcome as the day is long, on this side of the Atlantic, is any book by David Garnett. Grandson of old Richard Garnett, voluminous author and keeper of printed books of the British Museum; son of Edward (ditto to the first part, though less prolific, and ditto to the second) and Constance (famed translator of Russian novelists), little Davy did his teething on a goose-quill pen. Now 45, he has to his credit a fair-sized series of works marked by two things—a lucid and enchanting style, and a conspicuous originality of subject-matter. There's no dullness in David Garnett, as can be attested by any reader of "A Man in the Zoo," "The Sailor's Return," "Go She Must!" "No Love," "The Grasshoppers Come," "Rabbit in the Air," and "Pocahontas." Largely, these have proved him a master of the cherrystone tour-de-force.

Well, that's a good long breath to take on the way to the 154 pages of this curious story, "Beany-Eye" (Harcourt Brace, $1.25). Old Beany-Eye, seemingly half-mad, with a ferocious temper, and ready to spill strange lore and yarns at any moment, was a sort of handy-man and protege around the Garnett house. Little Davy, aged eight, watched and listened in awe, and here in the first person, part fact and part fancy, is Mr. Garnett's reconstruction of how Beany-Eye and his violent doings appeared at the time. Oddly, in its picture of the senior Garnett and his trials with Beany-Eye, the tale is not unlike Clarence Day's "Life With Father." But along with that gentle humorousness there is depth and pathos. Mr. Garnett has carved a novel on his cherrystone.

• • • •

Still on Schedule A of the free list, we come with delight to Roger Vercel's "Capt. Conan" (Holt, $2). M. Vercel showed his mettle with that excellent novel of French fishermen off Greenland, "In Sight of Eden." Now—this is the 1934 Prix Goncourt novel— he tells of an energetic little draper from Brittany who, after the Armistice in the Balkans, had turned into the very devil of an adventurous soldier. The war made him, released him for what he really was and then, at the end, the peace broke him. It is a clear, stirring, bitter tale, impossible to forget.

"Gone Away!" (Macrae-Smith, $2.50), comes under import fiction, because it was written abroad by Edward Acheson, The Post's London correspondent. But it is set in the huntin' and ridin' counties of Virginia, all very smart and brilliant, with a nice love story and a shrewd picture of red-coat and M. F. H. manners. Sprinkled in the palatibility are glints of the real stuff, and the sternest among you will enjoy this novel.

• • • •

Now let's pounce on Schedule Z. Peter Chamberlain's book of short stories—"What the Sweet Hell?" (Holt, $2)—won't hold us long. Naive, self-conscious, much-watered bits of British writing, these tales are just exactly what all of us composed in the adolescent gloryings of freshman English. Some of them possess merit, to be sure, but one couldn't discourse long upon such merit unless one were a teacher of freshmen intent upon justifying one's existence. Personally, I writhed while reading the things. Slap on the tax, Mr. Collector of the Port!

John Hargrave's "Summer Time Ends" (Bobbs-Merrill, $3) has been withering for weeks on my shelf now. For, with all the conscientiousness of a deplorably Puritan ancestry, I have been trying earnestly to enjoy it. I must now admit failure.

Here are 877 pages of ungodly tediousness. Mr. Hargrave follows through 13 depression months a gallery of English characters, ranging from love-on-the-dole at one end to industrial barons at the other—and that's no especial treat. Worse yet, he does it with a technique to lift the literary gorge—an obstreperously modernistic device of short single lines like free verse, of repetitious stream-of-consciousness paragraphs, of a commingling of diverse scenes, to give the impression of concurrent action on many stages. Don't put me down as a fuddy-duddy; I revel in V. Woolf and venerate Joyce. But "Summer Time Ends" is simply little-boy stuff in comparison—a two-pound volume of no go at all.

'You Earthly Satan!' She Calls Policeman

Chicago, Nov. 21 (AP).—Motorcycle Policeman William McCullough knows virtually all the staple and fancy epithets, but a motorist hurled a new one at him today.

It was: "You earthly Satan."

He told Judge John Gutknecht in traffic court:

"I stopped Mrs. Frances Leach on South Chicago avenue when she was doing 45 miles an hour. She started out by calling me an earthly Satan and wound up by saying she was only doing 38 and, furthermore, there was no more righteousness before the Lord."

Mrs. Leach was fined $1.

WPA's 'Failure' Laid by G. O. P. To Roosevelt

Republicans Say President Is Attempting to Shrink From Blame.

President Roosevelt is attempting to "shrink" from responsibility for the works relief program, the National Republican Congressional Committee said yesterday, in answer to the President's recent talk to the United States Conference of Mayors.

Answering the talk made to the same group by Harry L. Hopkins, WPA Administrator, the committee said that "Mr. Hopkins has made a feeble attempt to defend the absurdities and utter waste involved in many of the relief experiments."

The committee asserted that President Roosevelt "evidently is attempting to shift responsibility for the failure of part of his relief program and for the waste involved in the mass of ludicrous projects initiated by the Works Progress Administration."

Sees Move to Shift Blame.

The committee statement said the President attempted to place responsibility on local officials.

"This effort is, indeed, alien to the President's attitude when he thought he could make a success of the program," the committee said. "Certainly he was given enough money to make it successful.

"Time and time again spokesmen for the President asserted he assumed personal responsibility for the program. It was only after such a reiteration of responsibility, following his demand on Congress, that the money was made available to him under broad powers to use at his discretion."

The statement recalled the President's message to Congress last January in which he said the Federal Government is the only governmental agency with sufficient power and credit to meet the situation, and added that "we have assumed this task and we shall not shrink from it in the future."

Note Change in Attitude.

"How differently the President speaks now," the committee said. "Under an avalanche of criticism of the profligate waste coming from the works program, Mr. Roosevelt is attempting to 'shrink' from it. He asked for the responsibility. He cannot escape it now. Roosevelt, the waster, not local officials, must answer for this huge waste. He, not the mayors or any other officials, approves allotments for these boondoggling projects."

The committee said that Hopkins "also sought to make the mayors partners in many projects which, for utter absurdity and complete futility in creating jobs, outrank in foolishness anything heretofore conceived."

"Mr. Hopkins' criticism of his critics is that they hold that many of these projects seem to be absurd and wasteful. The fact is that many are absurd and wasteful and a growing number of people in this country are rapidly coming to that realization. No amount of Hopkinsesque wriggling can change the picture of the many absurdities in the relief program. Nor can he change the justifiable criticism that few jobs are made available in comparison with the gigantic expenditures being made nor the fact that the taxpayers are going to suffer for these fantastic outlays of their money."

Show business is getting exciting. It is evidently making a play for the outdoor fight customers.

In Charlotte, N. C., the other night, during an Earl Carroll revue, there was a free-for-all, which included the novelty of an actor stepping out of his part in the middle of a comedy skit and haranguing the audience with a speech on the workingman's rights.

• • • •

The actor, playing in a comedy skit, took off his wig in midskit, walked to the footlights and delivered one of those Union Square "Are we mice or are we men?" orations. Everything went haywire until the producer, assisted by the gendarmes, restored order. After which the comedian put his wig on again and resumed acting.

• • • •

According to reports the audience, completely confused over what was in the script and what was not, had more fun than a barrel of monkeys.

• • • •

Broadway is studying the matter closely, and the idea may be developed in coming musical shows.

• • • •

There is bound to be great suspense when the audience never knows at what moment the comic is going to stop gagging and start swinging. Or just when a toe dancer is going to take an orthodox soap box stance and call for a march on the White House.

• • • •

The element of surprise so sought after by producers is bound to come when the chief comedian demands, "Why does a chicken cross the street?" and the stooge, punching him in the schnozzle, shouts, "To get on the side of right, justice and the brotherhood of man!"

• • • •

Or when the chorus girls begin singing numbers like "Dancing Fist to Fist," "Isn't This a Lovely Fight?" "Red Walls in the Sunset," and "I Wish I Were Aladdin; I'd Smack You With a Lamp."

Dr. George Gallup (left), managing director of the American Institute of Public Affairs, is pictured talking with Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper at the National Press Club yesterday.

Press to Keep Opinion Polls, Claims Gallup

Author of 'America Speaks' Says Paper of Future Will Retain Surveys.

The newspaper of the future will have as a regular part a department of public opinion, Dr. George H. Gallup, managing director of the American Institute of Public Opinion and author of "America Speaks," which appears every Sunday in The Washington Post, told newspaper correspondents yesterday at a luncheon in the National Press Club.

"It is just as important for modern newspapers to cover ideas as events," he said. "What people think is as important as the fact that several persons were killed in an automobile accident."

Dr. Gallup explained the methods by which he and his staff obtain a cross-section opinion of the Nation on such issues as Roosevelt's popularity, repeal and the neutrality of the United States in event of a European war. After his talk he answered questions asked by correspondents.

Secretary of Commerce Roper, one of the guests, asked whether it would be feasible to make a poll of public opinion on the varied features of the New Deal rather than on the whole New Deal, as is being done by the Literary Digest. Dr. Gallup said it is not only feasible but "the common sense" approach.

Explaining his methods in making a survey of public opinion on national issues, Dr. Gallup expressed the belief that his technique of obtaining a cross-section poll of all classes of economic society, instead of gathering millions of votes on a mass scale, would prove the more accurate in the end.

Dr. Gallup praised the Literary Digest for its pioneer work in surveying public opinion, for its accuracy in the past in predicting the outcome of Presidential elections, and for reflecting the revolt against prohibition a year before repeal, but he pointed out that the present poll on the New Deal might be misleading as a basis for predicting the outcome of the 1936 elections.

"Were I a betting man," he said, "I would bet 1,600 to 1 that the New Deal will be opposed by 60 per cent of the people in the Literary Digest poll, but that doesn't mean that many people are against President Roosevelt."

He recalled that ballots sent out by the American Institute of Public Opinion on both Roosevelt's popularity and the New Deal were returned marked "yes" for Roosevelt's re-election but "no" to continuation of New Deal policies.

Dr. Gallup said his service was prepared to take a national poll of public opinion on current issues and announce the results within 12 days, thus keeping abreast of developments in the news.

Ickes Charges Steel Concerns With Collusion

Identical Bids Submitted by 4 Firms; Roosevelt Given Evidence.

Secretary Ickes revealed yesterday that he had sent to President Roosevelt, before the latter's departure for Warm Springs, Ga., evidence of alleged collusion of steel makers in bids on steel for the Triborough Bridge in New York and the ocean terminal at Morehead City, N. C.

Ickes said he believed there was prima facie evidence of collusion. Both he and the President had previously indicated that alleged collusion would be investigated by the Federal Trade Commission. Ickes declined to make public details of his charges other than to say that bids in both instances were identical.

"I can't feel that the cost was the same to all the companies," Ickes said. He pointed out that bids on the Triborough bridge were f. o. b. New York.

Transfer of the steel contract for the Triborough Bridge to the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation of Pittsburgh proves, Ickes said, "that they didn't have to buy German steel in the first place."

Ickes said that he did not know how the Triborough Bridge Authority selected the Jones & Laughlin Co. from among the four identical bidders. The other three were the Inland Steel Co., the Carnegie Steel Co. and the Kalman Steel Corporation, a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Co.

Ickes said that in previous instances in which cement manufacturers submitted identical bids for PWA projects the bidder whose plant was farthest from the scene of the work was selected.

"That was so the railroads would get more business," he explained.

The Associated Press reported that officials of the steel companies which Ickes charged with collusion had declined to comment.

Roosevelt Seen Set to Extend Gold Act Fund

2 Billion Stabilization Pool May Be Held to Avoid Inflation Risk.

Reports were current here yesterday that President Roosevelt, some time in January, would issue a proclamation extending for a third year the life of the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund.

This fund was established in the gold devaluation act of January 30, 1934, "for the purpose of stabilizing the exchange value of the dollar" and "to deal in gold and foreign exchange and such other instruments of credit and securities" as the Secretary of the Treasury might deem necessary to carry out the stabilization purpose.

"All the powers conferred by this section shall expire two years after the date of enactment of this act, unless the President shall sooner declare the existing emergency ended the operation of the stabilization fund terminated, but the President may extend such period for not more than one additional year after such date by a proclamation recognizing continuance of such emergency."

No confirmation was forthcoming from official quarters as to whether the President would extend the life of the fund for a year, but it was believed he would take such action because of the lack of any international agreement on stabilization of currencies and consequently the necessity for the Treasury to have some check on their fluctuations.

If the fund were terminated next January 30, its $2,000,000,000 taken from the so-called gold profit resulting from devaluation, would revert to the general fund of the Treasury and could be used either for reduction of the national debt or for payment of current expenditures.

Use of this $2,000,000,000, it is believed, would result in a currency inflation to that amount. It is not believed that the President desires this use to be made of the fund, and a year ago, at his press conference on the budget, Mr. Roosevelt pointed out the desirability of keeping such a nest-egg in the Treasury.

Advocates of cash payment of the bonus have looked with envious eyes upon this nest-egg, contending it could be used to pay off the World War veterans at small cost to the Treasury.

The President may issue his proclamation tying up the fund for another year early in January in order to put the fund outside the reach of the bonus bloc in Congress.

Burton Holmes to Show Pictures of Ethiopia

Motion pictures and lantern slides of Ethiopia will be shown before the National Geographic Society in Constitution Hall tonight.

The pictures and slides will be described by Burton Holmes, noted traveler and lecturer. Mr. Holmes, attending the coronation of Haile Selassie in Addis Ababa during 1930, took many pictures of the colorful ceremony. Motion pictures of recent activities in the war zone will supplement these reels.

New Court Attacks Launched On AAA Taxes and Utility Act

of the American States Co., appealed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals from a decision of Federal Judge William C. Coleman, declaring the utilities act wholly invalid. As counsel for another intervening creditor, Davis also had figured in this case. While Burco supported the law's legality, Davis contended it was not constitutional. Attorney General Homer S. Cummings said the Government will file a brief in the case.

Tax Injunction Asked.

A day after the United Gas Improvement Co., of Philadelphia, had taken parallel action, the Delaware Electric Power Co., in Wilmington, claimed "irreparable damages" from the utilities holding company act, and sued in a Federal court for an injunction. Another court challenge was filed by the Philadelphia Electric Co.

As the National Bituminous Coal Commission completed plans for the regional control board, the Pittsburgh Coal Co. went into a Pittsburgh Federal court for an injunction against collection of penalties and taxes under the Guffey coal-control act, charging compliance would "destroy the plaintiff's business and property rights."

Lawyers representing the country's leading railroads were in Washington studying a proposed court test of the railroad retirement act, revised by Congress last session after it was declared invalid by the Supreme Court. The rail attorneys are considering methods of procedure, following decision of the carriers to challenge the law.

AAA Tax Fight.

Ultimately all of these cases may find their way to the Supreme Court, where interest now centers on AAA processing taxes involved in the Hoosac Mills suit, scheduled for hearing December 9, and in the rice millers' suit for injunction, on which an early ruling is expected.

Davis yesterday asked permission of the Supreme Court to intervene as a "friend of the court" on the side of Hoosac Mills. Also signing his brief were Nathan L. Miller, a former Governor of New York, and William R. Perkins. They represented the Hygrade Food Products Corporation, National Biscuit Co., and P. Lorillard Co., whose lower court suits are among more than 1,000 legal protests of processing taxes already pending.

Petition Charges.

Their petition charged:

AAA in all of its essentials has been and still is a complete counterpart of NRA, which already has been invalidated by the Supreme Court.

Crop control by the Federal Government under AAA is unconstitutional and renders the whole act "abortive and void."

Taxation may not be imposed nor revenues from them expended by the Government for control of intrastate activities and the benefit of private citizens, as provided in AAA.

The "general welfare" clause of the Constitution does not grant independent power and furnishes no support for provisions of AAA.

AAA provisions were unconstitutionally delegated by Congress, and the amendments enacted last session did not remedy their invalidity.

AAA and NRA Alike.

In contending the AAA and NRA were counterparts, the Davis brief reasoned:

"The two acts are complementary expressions of the same theory of the nature, scope and function of the Federal Government. Both attempt rehabilitation through regulation by a centralized power. The NRA of industry through a regimentation vested in the discretion of the President, and the AAA of agriculture through a regimentation vested in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture. In both, for the very same fundamental reasons, the attempt is in total disregard of the rights of the States and the citizens, as well as of the diverse powers vested in the co-ordinate branches of our Government, and on that account utterly unconstitutional."

Attorney General Cummings said he had no comment to make on the filing of the Davis brief, other than to say the Government would not opppose Davis' intervention in the case.

Nation's Leaders Cited.

The lengthy petition was studded with names such as Hamilton, Jefferson, Madison and Monroe, as opposed to broad delegation of powers, while three chief justices and eight Presidents were quoted in opposition to the New Deal's "general welfare" interpretation.

In asking the Supreme Court not to grant an injunction to eight Southern rice millers against collection of September processing taxes, Solicitor General Reed championed the doctrine of "pay first and litigate later" as an elementary principle in our taxation system.

Reed argued the general equity rule is that collection of taxes can not be enjoined where there is adequate remedy at law, and that the rice millers have such a remedy. He contended the millers would be "unjustly enriched" if payment of the tax is withheld. In an earlier brief, the millers said they might be unable to recover their taxes even if the law were found unconstitutional.

League Upholds AAA.

Asking permission to join with the Government in defense of AAA processing taxes involved in the Hoosac case, the League of Economic Equality, like Davis, who was on the other side of the question, interposed as a "friend of the court."

The league was represented by Vernon A. Vrooman, of Des Moines, Iowa, who said it comprised farmers and friends of farmers in four corn-belt States—Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and South Dakota.

Using many of the arguments used by the Government in its brief opposing Hoosac Mills' claims, Vrooman contended no undue delegation of power was involved and the AAA act "does not contravene, in its tax provisions, any limitations which the Constitution imposes." Like Reed, Vrooman stressed the "general welfare" clause of the Constitution, held the farm problem constituted a national emergency and said the AAA was "a program for the co-operative efforts of free men."

Victims Paid 'Custom Fee' Expecting Packages From Relatives.

cording to Bureau of Investigation records, arrests on larceny and confidence charges in six cities of the United States and at Honolulu.

Since November, 1934, Hoover said, Scheland turned his talents to a variation of the old "package" racket. In the Navy, Scheland was rated as an apprentice seaman. In operating his confidence game—Hoover said the man confessed—he posed as a naval officer of rank no lower than lieutenant.

Approached Relatives.

His usual method was to approach persons of prominence whom he knew to have either relatives or friends in the naval service—first learning from a careful watch of published Navy transfer orders, that the officer concerned was out of the country—with information that he had a package for them from abroad on which a customs fee was due. Scheland, Hoover said, collected the fee—invariably an amount small enough to dispell suspicion—and disappeared.

Mrs. Covington told The Post last night that she and Judge Covington were out of the city, when the man posing as Commander Stanton bilked a member of the former justice's law firm out of $48.45 for customs duty on a "package." Attorney Dunlop said he talked with Scheland on the telephone about a fee on a package he was given to understand was being sent him by his son-in-law, Langland Bond, vice president of China Airways.

Hoover said Scheland called at the Japanese Embassy about a rug for the Ambassador from a Mr. Imaru, manager of the Tokyo Imperial Hotel. The Ambassador was at lunch at the time—October 22—and negotiations were handled by Otoshiro Kuroda, an embassy attache.

Went to Navy Yard.

Kuroda accompanied Scheland, Hoover said, to the navy yard where the rug was to have been delivered. Delivery of the rug was not made, but Schleand has confessed to persuading delivery of $32.11 as the usual customs fee and to have bought a dog at a local pet shop with a worthless check accepted on the strength of the official Japanese car in which he was returning from the yard with Kuroda.

A little more than a week before his call at the Japanese Embassy, Hoover said, Scheland swindled Cohen, Chilean counselor, of $50 in "customs fees" on a rug. Cohen accompanying him to Baltimore where the rug was to have been delivered.

Hoover said the department had been looking for Scheand since he first began the alleged confidence operations, but he evaded the law until his arrest by New York City police October 26 on a grand larceny charge involving theft of $110 worth of liquor.

Federal authorities then linked him, Hoover announced, with impersonation of naval officers in collection of $9 from Maj. Lida and $14.70 from M. Y. Inomata, of the Japanese Tourist Bureau, in New York. Scheland was arraigned before a United States commissioner in New York yesterday in the alleged fraud on Maj. Lida.

Mrs. Perry, who paid $45 "duty" on a rug she believed she would receive from her son-in-law, Lieut. Benson, in Shanghai, said the man came to her home at 2018 G street northwest last August. Last night she recalled:

"He was so nice. He was dressed in a fresh white linen suit and blue tie. His hair and eyes were dark—very good looking. He introduced himself as Lieut. Evans, and the first thing he said to me was, 'I guess, Mrs. Perry, you knew my dad.' I gathered from that his father was a naval officer and we fell to talking about all the Navy people we knew. Why, I even left him alone in the house while I went out to do my marketing.

"I didn't mind losing the money so much. What made me mad was how sorry he made me feel for him. He was so nice."

Rail Users to War On Federalization

Rule of 65% of Freight in U. S. Claimed by League.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—The National Industrial Traffic League, an organization of big shippers claiming to control 65 per cent of the Nation's freight, launched a fight against Government ownership of railroads today.

Delegates representing 700 members—traffic managers, industrial and business concerns and Chambers of Commerce—voted unanimously at the annual convention to set up a "national committee for the prevention of Government ownership of railroads."

Members ascribed their action to their belief that private operation of the carriers would best serve their interests. They described it "the most important move made by the league in ten years."

It was planned to obtain representation of all sections of the Nation on the national committee. Its main aim will be to turn public opinion against Federal control of the rail lines.

U.S. Takes Steps To End Strike In Gulf Ports

Secretary Perkins, Chief of Longshoremen Confer in New York.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 21.—Secretary Frances Perkins said tonight she was "hopeful of a solution" of the Gulf ports longshoremen's strike which union leaders have threatened to extend to all Atlantic and Pacific ports.

After a 90-minute conference with Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, Miss Perkins said:

"This is an intricate and confusing situation. I believe we have made progress toward a method of solution, but our method cannot be revealed at this time."

The Secretary of Labor was accompanied by E. P. Marsh, of the United States Department of Labor conciliation service. Marsh said he was "familiar with the West Coast situation" where union longshoremen have refused to unload boats coming from gulf ports.

"Big Stick" Ruled Out.

"Government intervention must be orderly," Miss Perkins said. "We can't use a big stick, because the Government doesn't have one."

Although Miss Perkins made a special trip from Washington to see Ryan, they conferred in a hotel lobby while a dance orchestra played a few feet away. Both refused to discuss their talk.

The I. L. A. seeks union recognition in the Gulf.

Miss Perkins said the possibility of the I. L. A. extending its boycott from the srtike center to all American ports was "seriously considered."

"I hope the method we have devised will take care of the situation," she said.

Miss Perkins Returns.

Further details of the "method" will be given out in Washington either tomorrow or Saturday, she said. Miss Perkins planned to return to the Capital tonight.

In New York approximately 300 longshoremen demonstrated today against the United Fruit Co. Lines, demanding payment of the wage scales of the I. L. A. Company officials said its wage scale met union requirements.

Police said truck drivers moving fruit had been molested. Two men were arrested.

One Killed, 29 Hurt In Pittsburgh Blast

By the United Press.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 21.—One man was killed, a second is near death and 28 workers were burned when a metal mold exploded at the Mesta Machine plant late today.

John Eves received fatal burns. Eleven of those burned needed hospital treatment. Frederick Buhr, burned over the entire body, was in a critical condition.

W. B. Harris, Princeton Professor, Dies at 70

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 21 (AP).—Walter Butler Harris, 70, professor emeritus of the engineering faculty of Princeton University, died today at his home. He was born here, the son of the Rev. William Harris, treasurer of the university, and Christina Van Alen Butler. He organized the department of geodesy in 1895.

Professor Harris retired in 1934.

He invented a system of jetty protection, now used on the Jersey coast, and he was an architect and landscape gardener.

His wife, the former Anne L. Eyeomans, of Princeton; a son and two daughters survive.

Military Classes Called.

Berlin, Nov. 21 (U.P.).—The military classes of 1913 and 1916 will be recalled to the colors at an unspecified date next year, it was announced officially today.

Wedlock Today Held Unstable In Court Suit

Ex-Wife Asks 'Rights' Be Clarified in Petition to U. S. Tribunal.

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court was told yesterday that marriage "is ceasing to have any other meaning than a legal arangement to live together, not 'until death do us part,' but until one spouse happens to find another whom he likes better than the old one."

That view was expressed by Mrs. Jessie Margaret Wilson Budlong, of Tucson, Ariz., in a petition asking the high court to determine her rights as the lawful wife of Milton John Budlong, socially promient in New York City and Newport, R. I.

They were married at Scranton, Pa., on November 9, 1898, and he obtained an absolute divorce in Rhode Island in 1928.

In her petition, which was denied by the Federal district court at Tucson and by the circuit court of appeals at San Francisco, Mrs. Budlong contended the divorce was fraudulently obtained and void because no specific charges were made against her and she did not have a fair trial.

Vast Surplus To Stay Intact, Reserve Says

regulations regarding marginal trading in stocks in regulations applicable to brokers, issued more than a year ago. Under those rules, brokers may not lend to a customer more than whichever is the higher—55 per cent of the current market value of the security, or 100 per cent of the lowest market value of the security during the previous three years, but not more than 75 per cent of the current market value.

As is obvious from its description, the rule is somewhat intricate, and brokers have criticized it as unnecessarily confusing and burdensome. The problem of regulating bank loans on securities is more intricate than that of brokers' loans. For that reason objections have been raised to imposing on banks regulations based on this standard.

If the existing formula is abandoned in framing the regulations for the banks—and there is a question whether this can be done under the act—it would also be necessary to revise the regulations now applying to brokers. Otherwise the result might be to discriminate against brokers.

Consideration of this problem yesterday by the council, the Reserve Board, Dr. Carl E. Parry, chief of the board's division of security loans, and Dr. E. A. Goldenweiser, director of research and statistics for the board, is not related to the recent increased trading on the stock market, but flows from the provisions of last year's stock exchange control act.

The opinion appears to exist in Federal Reserve circles that no reason exists at this time for any tightening of stock market credit. Indeed, aggregate security values have increased many times faster than bank loans, while brokers' loans, although up somewhat, are not unusually high, it is pointed out.

This aspect of the matter leads into the second general problem discussed with the board by the advisory council, the system's reserve position. The latter at present centers around the fact that excess reserves total the unprecedented figure—higher almost every week — of $3,070,000,000, brought about by an inflow of $1,728,000,000 in gold within the last year.

These excess reserves—that is, idle money deposited by member banks with the 12 reserve banks in excess of the legal reserve requirements—would support a credit inflation of from $20,000,000,000 to $30,000,000,000, regarded as more than sufficient for a disastrous inflation, if it got under way. For that reason these excess reserves have caused widespread concern and discussion in financial circles within the last three or four months.

All aspects of this question have been canvassed and studied closely by the Federal Reserve Board's experts. They also have been examined and analyzed by the Open Market Committee of the Federal Reserve Banks—comprising the 12 governors of those institutions. Now it has been discussed by the Advisory Council, which was designed to bring the viewpoint of business and industry into the operation of the reserve system.

These three agencies are reported in agreement that, surprising as the new height of excess reserves may be, there is nothing alarming about the situation at this time, chiefly because there is no tendency on the part of the general public and business to use this idle credit. Consequently, none of these reserve authorities believe the board need take any action at this time.

Please judge this rich Rye whiskey by its Flavor not by its price!

The object of this advertisement is not to paint a glowing high-pressure picture of whiskey quality—but merely to invite you to taste Hiram Walker's popular-priced Rye, a blend of straight Rye whiskies. Judge it against the very best whiskey you ever tasted. Hiram Walker's Rye is moderately priced—but it is the finest blend of straight Rye whiskies Hiram Walker has made in 77 years. When you taste it, notice especially that rich, billowy flavor of true, clean Rye. Notice its soft touch, and its delightful aftertaste. Ask yourself if Hiram Walker's Rye is not the smoothest, tastiest whiskey you ever tried.

La Paree Goes Barnum; Offers Circus Tonight

Clowns, Acrobats, Daisy, the Wonder Horse—All Are Ready.

By Chanticleer.

Step up, one and all, and see the big show!

Yes, sir, the circus has come to town—a real big-top show with clowns, acrobats, tumblers and a genuine wild animal or two for good measure—opening tonight, ladeez and gentlemun, at La Paree.

Nothing like it ever before, folks. The real goods, folks, right on the patch of hardwood where only last night the dancing gals held forth. Right where the night lights blaze and the orchestry hips her up when the clowns are back in the make-up tent and getting ready for the next big performance.

And Maestro Emory Daugherty all dressed up just like a circus clown leading the band in the grand opening on the floor for each show. And there'll be Daisy, the Wonder Horse, doing some fancy tricks as the main attraction.

For the first time, so far as I know, a complete cricus routine comes to a Washington nightery—and La Paree is going the limit to make the novelty a smash hit with the citizenry. Ringmaster Joe Murphy says—bring the kids.

Ethel Pastor, the Russian Troika songbird, holds a niche all her own in the world of cabaret entertainment. Having been featured in Broadway musicals, she's an actress as well as a prima donna. And La Pastor never leaves the Troika after the day's (or rather night's) shows are completed without having provided at least one number for every one. Her particular favorites, by the way, are gypsy songs in their original languages, although most of her requests are for light opera.

That dance floor out at the Dude Ranch probably is the largest in the city. Whether that's contestable or not, Kay and her Kadettes continue to do a nice job of covering said floor—having been held over another week. Ralph Garren for the dancing and Milt Barrett for a hearty reception at the front door. They say that Rubinoff's brother was an impromptu performer as well as guest last Saturday night at the Ranch.

* * * *

"Gobs of Joy," the revue holding forth at the Lotus Restaurant this week, came to town fully expecting to stay longer than one week. That's smart business for you. The impresario just naturally knew the big show with its cast of 25 would strike the Washington fancy—so he brought a complete change of wardrobe, routines and tunes for this week. Chic Stanley and Lou Kaplan are highlighting the production with an all-comedy pantomime — knockabout stuff. Bill Strickland and his Capitolians for dancing and little Judy Ellington for vocal choruses.

* * * *

* * * *

Jay Howard, who sketches and does things with masks at Child's Gingham Club these evenings, continues to draw the fancy of the customers. He's made a collection of masks of the bigger and better personalities of Hollywood. Phil Lynch and all the Lynchians play for dinner and supper dancing.

* * * *

Sultana, originator of Spanish dances, will be right at home in the Madrillon's Spanish atmosphere when she opens a new show there tonight. And just to add a complete continental flavor, Mme. Lucie Delza will be present to sing French and English songs. The third star of the bill is Suzanne Austin in acrobatic and control dances. Leon Brusiloff and his orchestra see that you are royally entertained between floor shows.

It won't be long now—until the Ambassador knows who the lucky girl will be. Auditions were closed yesterday and the finalists will have a showdown before newspaper and radio judges next Monday night. The idea, as you perhaps already have noted in this space, is to get a gal soloist for Harry Albert's band. To celebrate the occasion, Monday night at the Ambassador's Ambassador room has been designated "Discovery Night." Come on down and see the lucky lady win.

Rudy Schramm is learning that his N. B. C. radio appearances are making friends for him with the patrons at Ramon's—and that the Ramon guests listen to him on the air. Many of his requests at Ramon's are from folks who have heard him on the radio and drop in to have him do a couple of numbers personally, as it were.

* * * *

Art and grace fill every moment of the dancing of Ramon and Renita, stars of the current floor show at the Shoreham ballroom. Their appeal is accentuated by their own novel dance creations, including the unraveling of Ravel's Bolero—into their own Ravelero, with five distinct dance rythms. And their Love Walt, too, a beautiful number in single timing. Renita has the tiniest of dancing feet. She wears size No. 1½ shoes!

The next time you drop in at the Club Habana give Paul, the smiling captain of the waiters, a more deferential greeting, if you please. In a recent conversation the topic changed to "old New York." Someone asked Paul if he remembered the old Cafe Savarin. And Paul grinned and recalled that, as a waiter at the Savarin, he carried a tray each morning at 7 to the banking house of J. P. Morgan—for Charles (Million Dollar) Gates. "They were, in truth, the good old days," Paul says, adding that it's darned hard to carry hot ham and eggs through the snow on a cold winter morning—and get them to the guest before they get cold.

* * * *

None other than Marty Rubin will be found pictured elsewhere on this page. Marty is synonymous with Pete Macias' Heigh-Ho Club. Everyone who enjoys that intimate note in singing at the table on the floor is Marty's life-long friend, which brings around to the observation that Ol' Massa Pete has a very versatile crew of musicians. Five of seven of the boys "double," meaning they can do a lot of things other than play just one instrument well. DeAngelo and Porter, the new dance team, are okay.

* * * *

Dancing, as you may already know, is a very important element of recreation in the lives of all Russians, and quite naturally plays an important part in the floor shows at Club Volga Boatman. Just by way of example: Larinova and Bolshakoff. Each week they do completely new numbers (unless you like and request the old ones). This week they're doing a Ukrainian peasant thing in native costume.

Maryland Club Gardens announces a new band. And it's none other than Jimmy Harris and an All-Washington group! The sax team is comprised of Louis Williams, Eddie Pearce and Francis Cruitt—whose arrangements are something to write home about. Eddie Whiteneck, the bass fiddler, formerly played with the National Symphony—and, of course, Jimmy Harris is a household name so far as patrons of nighteries are concerned. He's been with Pete Macias and Sidney—and his guitar and banjo solos are really the business. Garron and Bennett head this week's floor show. In the meantime, drop in and give Jimmy Harris a big welcome.

It's to be a very special dinner you'll be getting on Thanksgiving Day at Griffith Farms, out the Marlboro pike. A blazing log fire to give the season's touch and dancing to the music of the Varsity Six.

* * * *

Wanderbirds' Route Is Goose Creek Canal

CrumblingDams and Locks Will Be Seen on 6-Mile Hike.

By Robert Shosteck.

It was over 100 years ago, March, 1832, to be exact, that Goose Creek first came into public notice as the site of a canal and navigation system which was to extend from as far off as Ashby's Gap and Little River, to the mouth of Goose Creek, at Edward's Ferry. When the Wanderbird hikers trek through this region on Sunday's hike, they will see the crumbling dams and canal locks of part of this great navigation system, which made it possible for grain and timber laden barges to reach Washington by way of the Potomac River and the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal. In addition to the 6-mile hike to the river, Dr. Ulke will lead a group to Trap Rock quarry, if a sufficient number of hikers are interested.

We meet in front of The Post Building at 10 a. m. and board buses which will take us to the Goose Creek Tavern, the starting point and end of the hike. The round trip fare will be 80 cents and reservations must be made in advance at NAtional 4200. Bring lunch, a cup of coffee, and food for supper, unless you plan to buy a supper at the tavern. A campfire party will end the hike, and arrangements have been made for the use of the tavern floor for dancing. Leave hobnail shoes at home, and be prepared for a late return—about 10 p. m., unless a bus load wishes to leave earlier.

The trail along the right bank of the creek affords easy going and it traverses scenic woods nearly the entire distance to Edward's Ferry. The old locks, dams and canals, which are seen along the way, take on added interest when it is learned that the Virginia Legislature passed an act in March, 1832, which recited that "it shall be lawful to open books for receiving subscriptions to stocks for opening and improving the navigation of Goose Creek, Little River and other branches of said stream, in the town of Leesburg, under the direction of the following commissioners . . ." The charter of the Goose Creek & Little River Navigation Co. not only granted broad rights of navigation and waterway improvement, but also conferred the right to build and operate a steam railroad.

At Edward's Ferry the barges from Goose Creek were towed across the river to the inlet canal which conected with the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal. The ferry was also linked with the Leesburg turnpike by a road which the hikers can follow on the return trip. The group should return to the tavern by 4 p. m. all ready to prepare supper around the campfir in the nearby woods. A la carte meals can be obtained at the tavern. After a rest and a sing around the campfire, there will be dancing for about two hours on the fine floor of the inn.

Wanderbirds who plan to go on Saturday afternoon's work trip in the vicinity of Chain Bridge will meet at 2:30 p. m. at Stop 20 on the Cabin John car line, or, if coming by auto, at the far end of Chain Bridge. The writer can take a few hikers who make arrangements in advance at Atlantic 3915. Bring your axes with you on this trip!

Add to the growing list of hiking groups the Vita Health Hickers, a group which combines hiking and good living. Sunday they meet at the end of the Rock Creek Bridge car line, continuing in a group to Connecticut Avenue Military road, the starting point of their hike. The route is cross-country to Fort De-Russey, ending up at the Sixteenth Street Reservoir. Mr. Dawe will lead.

The P. A. T. C. work trip this Sunday will be in Mont Alto State Forest, Pa. The group will go by bus, starting at the Treasury at 7 a. m. K. W. Perry, phone Col. 2883, is in charge of this trip. The Red Triangle's annual oyster roast will be held tomorrow night at the Clubhouse, out Canal road. Lots of oysters at 50 cents a person. Mrs. W. B. George, 5016 Illinois avenue, handles reservations.

Amnesia Victim Here Is New York Salesman

A man found wandering in Union Station yesterday, and who was sent to Gallinger Hospital, was identified last night as Mark H. Bassett, 54, automobile salesman.

Bassett said his memory left him after he arrived yesterday from New York and checked his bags. He said he had no particular address, but had a niece, Mrs. Helen Aird, living at 1014 West Jackson street, Plainsville, Ohio.

AAA to Push New Tobacco Crop Contracts

Producers Are to Receive Agreements Before 1935 Market Opens.

By the Associated Press.

The Farm Administration announced yesterday its new four-year contract for growers of Burley, fire-cured and dark air-cured tobacco would be ready for producers' signatures before the markets open.

The new contracts, covering crop years from 1936 to 1939, inclusive, provide for continuation of acreage and production bases already established, with adjustments designed to make them equitable. Provision is made for one benefit payment at the end of each contract year.

The contract provides a payment will be made to make up the difference between the average farm price and the parity price on the portion of the crop used domestically. The amount of payment for each year will be determined after the crop is sold.

Minimum Is Guaranteed.

A minimum payment for Burley of not less than $2.25 per 100 pounds of base production is guaranteed for 1936. A minimum of $1.50 per 100 pounds is guaranteed for dark air-cured tobacco.

The Burley contract provides the adjustment from the base shall not be greater than 50 per cent in any contract year, and the fire-cured and dark-air cured contracts provide maximum adjustments of 40 per cent.

J. B. Hutson, director of the AAA Tobacco Section, said it was believed the adjustment for 1936 would be from 30 to 40 per cent for Burley tobacco and 25 to 35 per cent for dark types.

Crops to Alternate.

The contract requires that the acreage of soil improving and erosion preventing crops will be increased by an amount equal to that part of the base acreage left out of tobacco production. The contract may be terminated by individual growers or by the Secretary of Agriculture at the end of any year.

If tobacco is produced by share tenants or share croppers payment will be made direct to the operator and to each tenant or cropper in the proportion they share in the crop.

The contract provides the number of share tenants and share croppers on the farm and the percentage of tobacco acreage grown by tenants and share croppers, shall not be reduced below the number and percentage in 1935.

County control associations composed of contract signers will administer the programs locally.

Murder in the Capital

By Karl Schriftgiesser

Who was the slayer of quiet Corinna Loring, almost on the eve of her bridal day?

As ace detectives seek to unravel this ghastly crime, The Washington Post has been delving into the histories of unsolved murders in and around the District.

The notorious and gruesome murder of Mary Baker, pretty clerk in the Navy Department, is recounted by Mr. Schriftgiesser today.

More than five years have passed since Mary Baker was found dead, the victim of a vicious criminal assault by some unidentified man, who clawed and beat her, and then fired three pistol shots into her body. Practically none of the questions that came first to mind when discovery of her body was made public have been answered in that interim. Today about all that is definitely known about the case is that Mary Baker was murdered, her body thrown into a ditch near the Sheridan Gate of Arlington National Cemetery. It remains perhaps the most mystifying of Washington's many mystifying crimes.

Perhaps the reason the Mary Baker case has fascinated Washington throughout the half decade it has gone unsolved is because Mary Baker, like so many thousands of others in the District, was a Government clerk. Headline writers called her "Navy Girl," which meant in this city that she was a clerk in the Navy Department. She was not a beautiful girl, but those who knew her said she was attractive. Unlike Corrina Loring, whose recent murder seems to be following the familiar pattern, she had had affairs with men, with many men, in fact. And yet she was known as a quiet girl, the daughter of a Virginia pastor and herself an attendant at a Washington church.

In fact, Mary Baker left a Lenten service at the Church of the Epiphany to go to her cruel death. She had gone to the church directly after leaving her desk at the Navy Department, that same desk which housed certain secrets of her heart in the form of love letters, some from married men. With her were Miss Inez Eyre and Miss Ora Smith, two friends. When Mary Baker left after services she asked Miss Smith if she cared to walk to her car, so that Mary Baker might drive her home. The car was parked at Seventeenth street near B street. Miss Smith declined. That was at 20 minutes of 6 on the evening of April 11, 1930.

"Bundle" in Car.

Twenty minutes after Mary Baker left her friend, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh R. Wood, who had been to see the cherry blossoms, were walking near the Ellipse. Also nearby was a man named Francis Rice. These three saw a florid-faced and heavy-set man seated in a parked Ford car. Rice, on passing, thought he saw a bundle in the car but as he went by the "bundle" came to life. It was a girl's head that was lifted, he said. Blood was streaming from her lips. The florid-faced man threw the car into gear and drove rapidly north on Seventeenth street.

Rice and the Woods thought they heard three muffled shots. The couple rushed to a police station and there the first official notice of the Mary Baker case was taken when the desk sergeant took their report—and called another station house to investigate. While all this was going on, Olga Skinner, a friend of Mary, was impatiently waiting in a downtown department store for the girl who was never to be seen again alive. Miss Skinner, after a long wait, went home to Lyon Park, Va., where she lived with Mary and a girl named Mildred Sperry, also clerks, in a small but neat cottage.

The next day was Saturday. Miss Baker, who had not come home, did not appear for work. Miss Eyre, worried, called the two housemates, but they too were in complete ignorance of the "Navy girl's" whereabouts. Worried themselves in turn by now, the girls sought out an architect for the Navy Department, and a friend of them all, but especially of Mary Baker. He was reputed to be one of her closest friends.

Bloody Car Found.

Meanwhile, in Arlington County, unknown to the worried friends of Mary Baker, a blood-stained automobile was found on Cemetery road, about 100 feet from Military road, near Arlington Cemetery. Torn shreds of a parasol were found nearby. The car was Mary Baker's.

And so was a body they found, stuffed into a culvert hard by Sheridan Gate.

In this body were three bullets. One had entered the side of her neck, severed the jugular vein and wounded the right arm which had been raised when the shot was fired as if to ward off a man's blow. The second had penetrated the left side, ricocheting off a rib, and passing almost through the body. The third had lodged in the flesh of the girl's back. Parts of the girl's lingerie were missing; so was some of her other clothing; so was her pocketbook. But it was not a crime for greed.

The body was identified by Miss Skinner and Miss Sperry. Miss Baker's parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Thomas F. Baker, Oak Groove, Va., were notified. And the following authorities took up the man-hunt: Sheriff Howard B. Fields of Arlington County, Detective Edward Kelley, of the Metropolitan police homicide squad; other Washington officers, the United States Park Police and members of the Department of Justice.

They took the body for examination and found that death had not come from leaden bullets or from blows struck by a lust-mad man, but from strangulation. Sheriff Fields of Arlington County combed Hells Bottom, a nearby Negro district and arrested two very scared Negroes, who had in their possession the Baker purse and scarf. But they established alibis, admitting they had taken the clothing from the car when they found it parked on the road. They denied having taken Mary Baker's coat, which also was missing.

Story Verified.

The architect friend was taken to police headquarters and grilled at length, as the reporters put it. He admitted he had a "date" with Mary for the afternoon of the murder and that he had waited for her near her Ford car. When she did not appear at 5:30 he said he went home. Yes, he had known Mary for a long time; had been seeing much of her for several months. But that afternoon? No, he had not seen her. Police checked his story and were satisfied. He was released.

Miss Sperry and Miss Skinner were questioned briefly. Then they rushed off to Mountcastle, Va., to "evade reporters," and two days later they were questioned for two hours by detectives. They did not give much valuable information, as it turned out, but what they did tell made detectives rush pell-mell to Warsaw, Va., armed with a murder warrant.

Mervin Sisson was arrested, charged with the crime. With him was also arrested one Julian Gallagher, who, like Sisson, was a traveling salesman. Yes, said Sisson when questioned, he knew Mary Baker. Yes, he had broken an appointment with her. But on the day of the crime he had not seen her. Police checked his alibi—and he, too, was released.

"Confession" Proves Untrue.

The investigation moved "forward" through familiar channels. The keys to the car were discovered on the road leading to the Agricultural Department Experimental Farm. Near the keys were some torn letters, a bill for $50 for professional services by a Washington doctor. Investigation revealed the dead girl had been treated for sinus trouble. Articles of clothing were found in a nearby sewer.

Thus three suspects were eliminated. Police ran around in the proverbial circles, getting nowhere.

Mary Baker was buried and other events stole the headlines. Then police arrested Howard L. Brewster, a soldier stationed at Fort Myer, who said that Mary Baker had been his girl and he had killed her. Unfortunately he was lying and authorities said he was a "psycopathic case." He, too, was released.

These two questions police had not been able to answer, nor have they since:

Did the murderer assault Mary Baker on the road, kill her, take her body to the culvert, and return to where the car was found?

Or was Mary Baker killed in Washington?

Had they been able to answer these questions they might have got somewhere, but they couldn't. Then a Virginia real estate agent threw himself into the case. Among other things he ran a miniature golf course—it was in that forgotten and cuckoo era that the crime was committed—and people would flock, he thought, to his place once they heard he was mixed up in a crime that was on everybody's lips and in every newspaper in the country.

He got his publicity. He got more than that. He got arrested. And he got more than that, too. He got tried for the murder of Mary Baker.

It was in May that he walked into Sheriff Field's office and threw a .32 calibre Spanish type revolver on Mr. Fields' desk. He told a long story about that gun; how a strange man had come to his office with mysterious questions about it; how it had been missing from his home; how it had turned up later in his office in Oakcrest. And he suggested that perhaps an itinerant house painter might have been the one who took it. The painter, said the man with a wise look, had once mentioned that Mary Baker, the then unknown Navy Department clerk, was his friend.

Alibi Unshaken.

It was not until July that police found the painter and then he had an ironclad alibi. In the meantime the gun had been identified as the "murder gun." The real estate man was grilled, sternly.

Inspector Kelley questioned him, and he replied:

"Kelley, I'm sorry I lied to you. Yes, I was near the Sheridan gate that day, but I was with a married woman, a friend I have known for years."

Later he said, "You've enough to indict, convict and electrocute me but if I were to tell you I killed her I would not be telling the truth!"

They charged him with the murder, though, on July 21, 1930. He was placed on trial exactly three months later. Maj. Calvin Goddard, known far and wide for his entrance into the Sacco-Vanzetti case in Massachusetts, was a State witness. He said the bullets in Mary Baker's body came from the gun.

But the real estate man brought in many witnesses to prove he was not near where the murder was committed on the day it was done.

A jury acquitted him after scarcely more than half an hour's deliberation. In December, Beulah Limerick was killed and Mary Baker forgotten.

In between the acquittal and the sensational murder at the Anacostia Flats a Schenectady, N. Y., convict confessed the murder. But he was only looking for a vacation from his five-year prison sentence. They never even brought him to Washington. Then, in 1931, authorities wondered if perhaps Harry F. Powers, the so-called Blue Beard of the Mail Order Wives, might not have done it, but they did not manage to connect him with the crime and now he is dead from an electric shock in a death house, for another crime. In 1932 Isador Matin, alias Ted Martin, twice confessed it, and in 1933 a Negro, Howard Simms, made a deathbed confession which lacked essential facts and knowledge of the case. It seems a lot of people wanted credit for doing what police more easily proved they didn't do than they ever could prove someone else did.

And after all this the authorities, none of them, could tell you answers to these fundamental questions:

Where was Mary Baker killed?

Was she shot first, then attacked, then strangled inside the car?

Or was she attacked and strangled outside the car and then shot and her body carried to the culvert?

Had she a prearranged rendezvous with death?

Or did some man, never in her life before, step in—to end it?

What was the exact hour of her death?

And what motive, except passion, was there for killing her?

The police can answer none of these; neither has anyone else succeeded in doing so. All they know is that Mary Baker, who went to church, had dates with men, who craved excitement, and who worked for the Navy Department, is dead, just as dead and just as mysteriously dead, as she was in 1930, when found in a culvert near the Sheridan gate.

Miss Wright Ends Travels OnContinent

Spends Month and Half as Guest of Claracs in Teheran.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Another interesting and enterprising young person has returned after an absence of several months. Miss Barbara Wright has joined her mother, Mrs. Hamilton Wright, in their home on Massachusetts avenue after spending the last four months traveling in Europe and the Near East.

Miss Wright has several fine pieces of writing attributed to her pen, and during her trip collected more interesting material for several articles. She visited in Cairo, Syria and Bagdad, meeting interesting people and having many adventures and finally arrived in Teheran, where she was the guest for a month and a half of M. and Mme. Claude Archille Clarac. M. Clarac is well remembered in Washington, having served for several years as a member of the staff of the French embassy. His marriage took place some time ago, and since then he has been attached to the French legation in Iran.

First Trip to Berlin.

After leaving Teheran Miss Wright travelled over the Caspian Sea and thence to Moscow, later going to Berlin, a city she had not visited previously.

Her last stop before sailing for home was England, where she visited with her brother-in-law and sister, Group Capt. and Mrs. G. R. Macfarlane Reid, who are being congratulated on the birth of a son some weeks ago. Mrs. Reid was formerly Miss Leslie Wright her marriage to the former Air Attache of the British Embassy having taken place in London, September 27, 1934. Miss Wright had spent the previous summer visiting with Capt. Reid's mother, Mrs. George Macfarlane-Reid at Dunara, Trestwick, Ayshire, Scotland.

Attached to Air Ministry.

Shortly after their marriage, Capt. and Mrs. Reid returned to Washington and the former's post at the embassy, and last winter were popular members of the younger diplomatic set. This autumn Capt. Reid was relieved of his duties at the embassy and he and his wife went to England, where he is attached to the Ministry of Air.

While in Teheran, Miss Wright also met Mme. Entezam, the former Miss Margaret Hume, of Washington, who has recently been visiting in the Capital with her mother, Mrs. Charles Hume. She and her two children left in the early autumn to join Mr. Entezam in Europe. They are residing in Teheran, where Mr. Entezam is attached to the Foreign Office. Their marriage took place in Washington some years ago when Mr. Entezam was attached to the Persian Legation here.

Presented to Washington Society at Tea

Underwood & Underwood.

MISS MIRIAM SCOTT, who was introduced to Capital society at a tea given by her grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. William Holland Wilmer, yesterday afternoon.

Wadsted to Visit 'Little House' Today

The minister will be greeted by a former girl guide from Denmark, who will wear the Danish girl guide uniform and speak to him in their native language.

Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, Girl Scout commissioner of the District of Columbia, and a group of Girl Scouts will escort the minister through the house, where he will view many of their "home making" and "leisure time" activities.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Resident

The Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite will arrive from New York today. The Minister went there to meet Mrs. MacWhite, who has been in New Mexico for several months.

Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, accompanied by Mrs. Emily Lowell, of Greenwich, Conn., will leave today by motor for New York, where Mrs. Cummings will be the guest of Miss Ann Callaghan for a fortnight.

Representative Samuel Dickstein is at the Carlton.

The Charge d'Affaires of the Netherlands and Baroness van Breugel Douglas will return today after spending several days at the Ritz-Carlton in New York.

The newly appointed First Secretary of the British Embassy, Mr. M. Vyvyan, arrived in New York Tuesday aboard the Berengaria and has come to Washington. He will stop with the Third Secretary of the Embassy, the Hon. W. N. McG. Hogg, at his home at 84 Kalorama Circle until he finds a suitable residence.

Before his appointment to Washington, Mr. Vyvyan was in the foreign office in London, and in Moscow.

The Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Harry Wallace Blair have as their guests their daughter, Mrs. Mellville Forsythe, of Cleveland, Ohio, and her twin daughters.

The former Secretary of State and Mrs. Frank B. Kellogg have arrived from their home in Minnesota to spend the winter and have leased the home of former President and Mrs. Herbert Hoover on S street.

Gov. and Mrs. John C. B. Ehringhaus, of North Carolina, and Dr. and Mrs. Hubert Haywood, who have been stopping at the Shoreham and attended the North Carolina State Society there Wednesday, have gone to New York to spend a few days before returning to Raleigh, N. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Huston Rawls, who arrived in New York on the Berengaria, have joined the latter's sister, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, at the Pierre.

Mr. Clarence Hewes will entertain at a dinner at his home on Massachusetts avenue, December 5.

Commander and Mrs. Donald Royce are in residence at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. Anne Archbold has issued invitations for a musicale Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in her home at 3905 Reservoir road. The guest artists will be Florence Sindell, soprano; Mildred Kolb, pianist, and the Washington String Quartet.

Commander and Mrs. Philip Seymour, of New Orleans, are spending a few days at the Martinique.

Mrs. E. D. Gothwaite will be hostess at a luncheon at the Russian Troika tomorrow in honor of Mrs. William Mann.

Other guests will be Mrs. George Seabold, Mrs. John Rimmey, Mrs. Ella Van Zandt, Miss Myrtle Sherrill, Miss Hattie Crouch and Mrs. Joseph Furness.

Miss Nancy Benedict Harrison has issued invitations for a tea in her home at 1430 Thirty-third street, December 15, in honor of Miss Margaret Matheson, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Matheson.

Miss Jane Thorpe, daughter of Col. and Mrs. George C. Thorpe, entertained at a small, informal cocktail party yesterday afternoon in the home of her parents at 3218 Woodley road.

Miriam Scott Makes Debut

Daughter of Mrs. Russell Lard Presented by Her Grandparents.

Dr. and Mrs. William Holland Wilmer entertained at a tea yesterday afternoon in their home, 2101 R street, when they presented their granddaughter, Miss Miriam Scott, daughter of Mrs. Russell Sard, to society.

The debutante wore a gown of peach velvet made on long lines with a high gathered neckline, and gold slippers. She carried an arm bouquet of Johanna Hill and Talisman roses.

Miss Scott was assisted by Miss Frances Andrews, Miss Yoande de Mauduit, Miss Marguerite Hagner, Miss Emily Davis, Miss Angelica Lloyd, Miss Augusta Poe, of Baltimore, and Miss Hope Procter, of New York.

At the tea table were Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Mrs. Hugh Wallace, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone and Mrs. Cabot Bruce, of Baltimore.

Anne M. Wyant Wed in Capital To Philip Gore

Reception at Washington Club Follows Afternoon Ceremony There.

The wedding of Miss Anne Moore Wyant, daughter of Mrs. Adam M. Wyant, of Washington and Greensberg, Pa., and the late Representative Wyant, to Mr. Philip Larner Gore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Gore, took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Washington Club, with the Rev. Albert J. McCartney, of the Church of the Covenant, officiating, assisted by Canon Albert Lucas.

Mr. Adam Martin Wyant, jr., escorted his sister and gave her in marriage. The bride wore a gown of ivory antique satin, fashioned on classical lines with a high draped neckline and long fitted sleeves. The skirt, made on straight lines, had two deep godet pleats on each side, which fell into a wide circular train. Her veil of tulle was held in place by a coronet of old lace and was caught at the sides with clusters of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Cousin Is Maid of Honor.

Miss Polly Cooke, a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a period frock of white moire fashioned with tiny puffed sleeves and full skirts, a coil of white velvet in her hair, and carried an arm bouquet of white snapdragons.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. F. Eberhardt Haynes, sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. Armistead Boothe, Miss Mary White, Miss Marion Dunlop, Miss Virginia Cooke and Miss Frances Carter. They wore costumes like that of the maid of honor and carried muffs of gardenias.

Mr. F. Eberhardt Haynes served as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Armistead Boothe, Mr. Andrew Parker, Mr. J. William Fullbright and Mr. Harold Fangboner.

After the ceremony, which was witnessed by members of the two families and a few friends, there was a reception at the club, to which additional guests had been invited. Mrs. Wyant and Mrs. Gore received with the young couple, the mother of the bride wearing a gown of black embossed chiffon with a black velvet hat, and Mrs. Gore wearing a gown of hyacinth blue crepe, the tunic of which was embroidered with silver. Her hat was of silver and black.

Bride Is Junior Leaguer.

Later Mr. Gore and his bride left for a wedding trip, the latter wearing a frock of hunter's green velveteen with a hat to match and a fur coat. The bridegroom's parents will leave shortly to spend the winter in the South and during their absence the young couple will occupy the Gore home on Garfield street.

Young Mrs. Gore attended Holton Arms School and Smith College. She is a member of the Junior League and has been an active and popular member of the younger set.

Mr. Gore was graduated from Princeton in 1931 and received his law degree from George Washington University in 1934. He is a member of the Key and Seal Club of Princeton.

Sunshine Society Party Will Take Place Today

The annual card party of the Sunshine and Community Society will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at 2400 Sixteenth street.

Mrs. J. Edwin Reid, assisted by the officers will receive the guests. Mrs. W. W. Taylor, chairman of the ways and means committee, is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Worthington R. Bean is chairman of the patronesses.

Wed in Washington Club

Honoring Miss Gladys Broz, daughter of the retiring First Secretary of the Czechoslovakian Legation and Mme. Broz, who will sail November 29 from Baltimore for their home in Prague, Miss Katharine Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wrisley Brown, entertained at luncheon at the Sulgrave Club yesterday. In addition to Miss Broz, the guests were Miss Dorothy Howe, Miss Fontaine Flannery, Miss Virginia Flannery, Miss Mary Wells, Miss Sally Mitchell LeFevre, Miss Angelica Lloyd, Miss Jane Thorpe, Miss Helen DeFrees, Miss Jane Esther Platt, Miss Betty Mattingly, Miss Eleanor Mattingly, Miss Anne Sterrett, Miss Benedicta Gannon, Miss Anne Moussot, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Miss Jehanne Burch, Miss Helena Shaforth and Miss Mary Katharine Bentley.

Mrs. Walter J. Cummings, of Chicago, who is being extensively entertained during her visit, was the guest in whose honor Mrs. John Allan Dougherty entertained at luncheon at the Army and Navy Country Club yesterday.

Mrs. Dougherty and her nephew, Mr. Allan E. McGraw, will spend the week-end in New York and the following week-end in Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Beachman, jr., who make their home at the Barclay Hotel in Philadelphia, will entertain at luncheon for Mrs. Dougherty and Mr. McGraw.

Friday Dancing Class to Start Series on Dec. 6

Dates Selected for Six Events to Be Held at Willard Hotel.

The first dance of the Friday evening dancing class will take place at the Willard Hotel December 6. This group is not to be confused with the series being given on Fridays during the season at the Sulgrave Club, but is an older organization which originated at the Massachusetts avenue home of the late Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh, who invited a large group of her friends each Friday for dancing in the ballroom in her home, which, by the way, is now leased as an office for one of the Federal agencies.

After Mrs. Walsh closed her home, those who had enjoyed her hospitality decided to keep the group together, and selected the Willard as their meeting place.

A distinguished group which forms the committee for the dances includes Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Panama; Mrs. Morris Shepard, wife of Senator Shepard; Mrs. William H. King, wife of Senator King; Mrs. Marcus Coolidge, wife of Senator Coolidge; Mrs. William H. Standley, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations; Senora de Baron, wife of the Minister-Counselor of the Cuban Embassy; Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the Solicitor General; Mrs. Charles Riggs, wife of Rear Admiral Riggs; Mrs. William S. Culbertson, wife of the former United States Ambassador to Chile, and Mrs. Parker West, secretary and treasurer of the dances.

The men's floor committee includes Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Coleman, Brig. Gen. Perry Miles, Col. Edward Clifford, Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, chief of the Far Eastern division of the State Department; Mr. Franklin Roudybush and Mr. John McClure.

Dates which have been selected for the other dances this season are December 31, January 31, February 28, March 20, April 3 and May 1, which will be the annual dinner dance.

Lieut. Col. Harvey S. Burwell has arrived at the Martinique with his family from Langley Field for a week's visit.

Miss Anne V. Connor Becomes Bride of Raymond Ratcliffe

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Ren Connor, of Tersana, Manassas, Va., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Anna Virginia Connor, and Mr. Raymond Jackson Ratcliffe, which took place at 7 o'clock last night in Trinity Episcopal Church of Manassas. Mr. Ratcliffe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Raymond Ratcliffe, also of Manassas.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Stuart Gibson in Trinity Episcopal Church, which was decorated with white and yellow chrysanthemums. The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a gown of antique ivory fashioned on princess lines with a long court train. With it she wore a veil of tulle attached by clusters of orange blossoms to a cap of lace which had been worn by her grandmother. Her bouquet was of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was her sister, Miss Walser Connor, who was frocked in rust velvet with a turban of matching velvet and maline, and who carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids, who were frocked alike in models of gold velvet with matching accessories and carried rust chrysanthemums, were Miss Anna Bruce Whitemore, Miss Lucy Arrington, Miss Rose Ratcliffe, a sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Susan Stuart Gibson. The flower girl was little Miss Ray Burhen, daughter of Lieut. Commander and Mrs. Raymond Burhen, of Long Beach, Calif., who was frocked in white and carried a basket of white chrysanthemums.

Mr. Harry Bubb, of Williamsport, Pa., was the best man, and the ushers included Mr. Henry Pen Conner, jr., of William and Mary College; Mr. Robert Fox, of Washington, D. C.; Mr. Norman Connor Kincheloe, Mr. Charles Walton Lewis and Mr. John Holt Merchant, of Manassas.

Following the marriage a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents for the young couple, who were assisted in receiving their guests by Mrs. Ratcliffe, mother of the bridegroom, who was gowned in wine-colored lace, and Mrs. Samuel Palmer Senior, of Bridgeport, Conn., who wore a model of black velvet. Out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mrs. Senior, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Newman, of Bridgeport; Mr. and Mrs. Enos Newman, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin C. Hazen, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kincheloe Ingley and Mr. and Mrs. Hobert Newman, of Washington; Representative and Mrs. Howard Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Taylor, of Alexandria.

The bride is a former student of Fredericksburg College and is a graduate of the National School of Fine Arts in Washington. Mr. Ratcliffe is a graduate of the Swavely School in Manassas and of Lafayette College at Eastern Point, Pa. He is a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity. A number of social affairs were given in honor of the bride previous to her marriage. Among the hostesses were Mrs. Joseph Lyon, Miss Susan Start Gibson, Miss Anna Bruce Whitmore, Mrs. William Cocke, Miss Rose Ratcliffe, Miss Lucy Arrington, Mrs. Paul Arrington and Miss Janet Trussler.

Dry 'Shampoo' Is Precaution Against Colds

Swedish Powder Absorbs Oil, Leaving It Soft and Glossy.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

ON THESE DAYS between a balmy fall and a chilly winter, obnoxious head colds prey on us if given the least provocation.

They often besiege us after we've washed our hair and plunge us into the depths of discomfort. They drive us to drinking gallons of hot lemonades and soda, and to dosing up on pills and bitter tonics, and all too frequently sap our energy and will-to-do.

But for the sake of comfort and our appearance we must keep our hair clean, light, and fluffy. Now, thanks to modern science, we may do this without risking a shampoo, when a cold is in sight and the weather threatening. We can turn with assurance to a certain Swedish hair powder known for years as one of the best hair dry cleaners on the market.

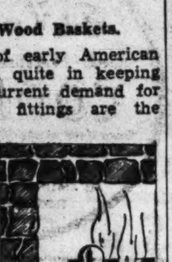
It's a blessing to women who have hitherto found it necessary to shampoo two or three times a week in order to keep their hair as soft and glossy as it should be. Such constant washings dry the natural oil from the root. With this powder it's different. It absorbs the oil from the hair leaving it soft and glossy, but at the same time retains the oil at the root, where it is so much needed to give life and nourishment.

Here's how to use it: Separate the hair into parts or strands and dust in the powder with a powder puff. Allow it to remain about ten minutes. While waiting, brush the scalp with short rapid strokes to loosen dead skin or dandruff. Then brush out dust, dandruff and powder together. The scalp and hair are in this manner cleaned at one and the same time.

The powder is a sanitary, vegetable absorbent that removes dust, grease and superflous oil. You may use it with confidence as it is absolutely harmless.

Decorative Wood Baskets.

SYMBOLIC of early American charm, and quite in keeping with the current demand for early American fittings are the wood baskets woven of coarse reed strands. These, low and roomy, are decorative and no end convenient to place on your hearth to hold kindling or small logs.



You'll find these shown in the notions department of a downtown store. They're filled with pine cones which have been especially treated to make multi-colored flames.

What more ideal present for that friend with the open fireplace? If, of course, you can resist one for yourself.

Iridescent Eye Shadow.

NOT LONG AGO came a query to this column that we thought might interest lots of you. It was: What advantages does an iridescent eye shadow have over the plainer type?

The answer is this: An iridescent shadow not only imparts a soft shading to the lids, but also a luminous quality. The tiny flecks or lights in it made for glamour, and accentuate or even create an illusion of sparkle, and brightness.

With this season's metallic gowns, and gowns metallic trimmed, needows, one beauty expert has recently put out one that is about the smoothest little beautifier we've seen yet. It goes on evenly and easily and does a nice job of flattering. It comes in little composition boxes that are the colors of the shadow. Available in blue, green, violet and gray. Blue for blondes, green for dusky blondes, violet for brunettes and gray for everyone, day or night.

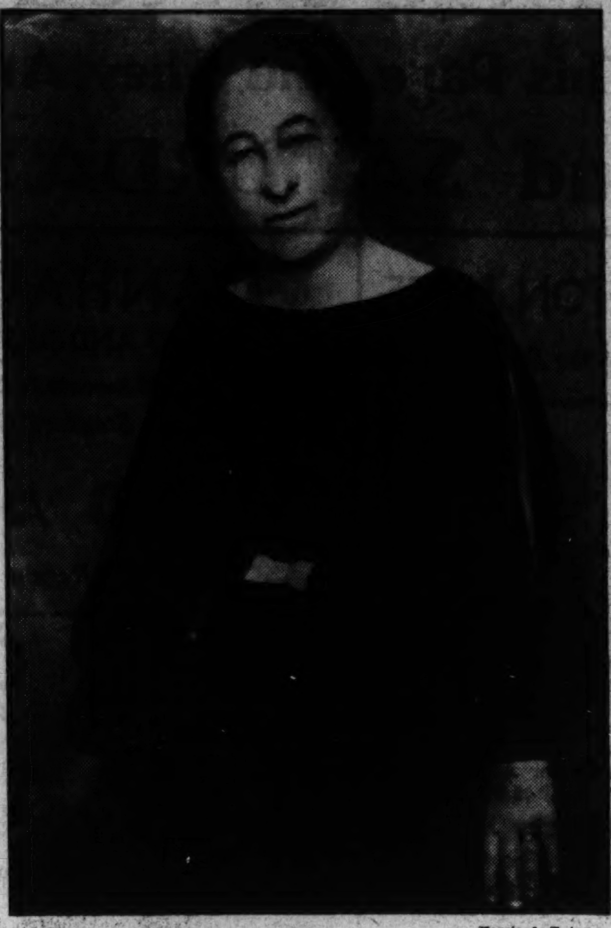
Three Platform Rules Given Women Speakers



MRS. ANNE TILLERY RENSHAW. Harris & Ewing.

Remove Hat, Keep Hands Off Beads and Limit Talk to 5 Minutes, Mrs. Anne Renshaw, Washington Speech Specialist, Advises.

By Dudley Harmon.

A WOMAN CAMPAIGN SPEAKER can be just as forceful as a man provided she observes three important platform rules.

These rules, according to Mrs. Anne Tillery Renshaw, Washington speech specialist, are:

Remove your hat before speaking.

Don't fuss with the string of bead around your neck.

Limit your speech to five minutes.

Mrs. Renshaw who before the last national election drilled numerous women speakers for both political parties will discuss the campaign speech in an address this afternoon before the League of Republican Women. Despite the present emphasis on organization work in parties, she believes campaign speaking still offers women their best opportunity for political roles.

"It is a type of party activity more suited to their abilities than organizing wards and precincts," she said. "It is natural for women to be crusaders. But they should remember to be feminine in their crusading. No matter how militant a woman speaker, she should never be masculine."

Construction Reform Paramount.

"On no account should a woman denounce from the platform," she said. "Her fundamental role is a constructive one, and she should concentrate on building up, not tearing down. Most of the constructive reform in history is the result of women's efforts, especially along social lines. Men are much more likely to carry out women's wishes if they express them as gracious behests than they are to be impressed by a strident speech is which the speaker is violently anti-everything.

"In keeping with the feminine qualities which she wishes to emphasize, a woman speaker's voice should be calm and low pitched. She must concentrate on reaching the back row, and realize that if she succeeds in doing this, the front row will take care of itself. She should never shout. The increasing use of amplifiers is making it more easy than ever for women's voices to carry without being raised to too high a pitch.

"The woman who clutches the back of her chair, twirls her beads, or fiddles with bracelets while speaking is never effective. Her dress should be simple, as jewelry and trimmings distract an audience's attention. She should not wear a hat, as this shades the brow and eyes and detracts from the general effect of her facial expressions. In other words, she should give her audience an earful, instead of an eyeful.

"Her gestures should be simple and spontaneous. Gone is the day of the teacher who trained her pupils to emphasize their remarks with exaggerated, mechanical wavings of their arms and hands."

Those who have twisted their faces into a forced smile after the tiresome "Pat and Mike" story, which precedes so many political speeches, will be interested to know that Mrs. Renshaw is against all jokes on the platform, especially at the beginning of a speech.

"Never jest with your audiences," she tells her women pupils. "And never on any account begin your address with a funny story. This relaxes your audience at a time when you want them keenly at attention. It is proper to weave in a few anecdotes of a humorous nature when they fit the context of the speech, but a joke, never."

Women More Zealous Than Men.

Mrs. Renshaw believes that women in politics take their role more seriously than men do. This, she says, is because of their crusading spirit, and once their interest is aroused, they are afire with the zeal to "clean up." They are more inclined than men to put the personal element into their speeches. A woman speaking for a Democratic campaign, Mrs. Renshaw said, is apt to go on at some length about her own losses in the stock market.

"A woman should use different tactics for different speeches," Mrs. Renshaw continued, "depending on whether her audience is masculine or feminine. If her listeners are men, she can sway them most effectively by appealing to their protective instincts and their strength to set things right. When she talks to women she should go after the 'house-cleaning vote.' By that I mean she should capture their fundamental interest in cleaning up a situation."

CentralAdmitting Bureau for Hospitals Directs Needy to Dental Clinics.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: A middle-aged woman of my acquaintance here in Washington is badly in need of dental work. Several of her teeth must be pulled and she needs an entire plate of teeth. However, she is absolutely without funds, and her daughter and son-in-law with whom she stays are not able to pay for such service, either.

• • • •

She may have to look for work soon, and of course, her bad dental condition will be a great handicap, not to mention the effect on her health. My question is this: Are there any free clinics in Washington that take care of such work? If so, do they charge for the materials and about how much would it be? Any information you can give along that line will be very greatly appreciated. Sincerely yours. L. E. S.

• • • •

DEAR L. E. S.: The best advice I can give you concerning this problem is to consult Mr. Charles H. Dexter, assistant executive director of the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals. The bureau, which is affiliated with the Council of Social Agencies, is located at Eighth and I streets northwest. The telephone number is MEtropolitan 3900. Mr. Dexter, with whom I have talked, says there are hospitals in Washington which render such service; that he will be glad to take this woman's case under advisement, and that some way will be found to supply her the service she needs.

M. H.

Letter for "Desperate."

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Your reply given last Wednesday to "Desperate" was an extraordinarily fine analysis of the situation and an excellent prescription for dealing with it. After having had a hostile mother-in-law in the house for the greater part of 22 years, I feel it may be helpful to "Desperate" to know that her problem is not unique, and that your suggestions are good. I am, therefore, inclosing for here a letter which I will ask you to look over and mail if you have her address and think it advisable. Sincerely, yours, E W.

• • • •

DEAR E. W.: Thank you very much for your intelligent, sympathetic and constructive interest in "Desperate's" case, as well as for your approval of my analysis and advice. I have taken the liberty of publishing the foregoing note in order to attract the attention of the woman who signed her plea, "Desperate." She gave no clue to her identity, and it will be necessary for her to furnish me with her address if she wishes to have your confidential letter forwarded. And for her benefit, I here say sincerely that it is a splendidly frank and helpful document, and I feel privileged to have been permitted to read it. I think it would be well indeed for "Desperate" to have it.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Midnight Blue Dress Suits for Men Are Biggest Innovation in Decades

British Fashion Tailoring Gives Added Comfort

Dinner Jackets Are Leaning More to the Double-Breasted Style.

By Robert Fairchild
(Of Men's Wear Magazine).

MIDNIGHT blue for evening wear, the most important innovation in men's apparel for nearly a century, has a particular advantage aside from its absolute style authenticity. Under artificial light this rich shade looks blacker than black. Evening wear is traditionally black and white, because this combination preserves the austerity and brilliance of the military background out of which modern evening dress derives, but ordinary blacks tend to look grayish, or even brown, sometimes, under Edison-given light.

Midnight blue perpetuates the authentic tradition better than does black itself. Correct evening attire at Thanksgiving week-end parties, whether tailcoats or dinner jackets, will be in midnight blue. That is the most important style note in connection with evening wear.

But there are other changes, important ones, which definitely mark off the evening wear of autumn, 1935, from that of previous seasons. I summarize here a few examples:

Trousers, whether to accompany dinner jackets or tailcoats, should be high-waisted, with one or two pleats on either side in front. This British tailoring is not only in good style, but is more comfortable and makes the trousers hang better.

Tails of Tailcoats Longer.

Another point in this connection is that waistlines in tailcoats are higher, necessitating higher-rise trousers.

The tails of the tailcoat are longer, and tend toward a more pointed end, whereas in previous years tails were short and stubby. A good length is about 4 to 5 inches below the knee joint.

Generous width lapels are the correct thing—narrow lapels are out. The smart style of evening coat has a full chest effect. It is never skimpy or tight fitting.

Shirt bosoms and waistcoats are shorter. The shirt is narrower, and the waistcoat has a smaller opening. Waistcoat lapels are wider, too.

The best dressed men both here and abroad prefer the bold wing collar that is high in back, not the low, small wing collar. The white tie is liked in straight-end club bow style, generous size knots being preferred.

The tall silk or opera hat, which is an essential with the tailcoat, should be really tall. The crown is belled. Low, straight crowns are out of the mode.

Dinner Jacket Follows Style.

Most of the points I have given apply particularly to tailcoats, but dinner jackets follow the same trend—higher-waisted trousers, shorter shirt bosoms, bolder collar wings. The black tie of the dinner jacket (which is smarter if it is midnight blue) is also best with a rather generous width knot. The opera hat or the black or midnight blue homburg is correct headwear.

Dinner jackets, by the way, seem to be leaning more and more to the double-breasted side of the picture. Fred Astaire, in "Top Hat," favored a peaked-lapel double-breasted dinner jacket, and most well-dressed men do the same. Some of them, however, like the shawl-collar double-breasted, with shiny silk instead of the dull facings on the lapels.

Fine Points on Evening Dress

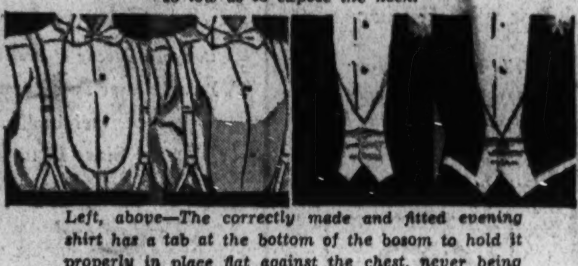
Left above—A bold wing collar and a generous size bow-tie are correct, not a small, low wing collar and a tiny short bow-tie. Right—The correct evening collar has considerable height at the back, never being so low as to expose the neck.



Left, above—The correctly made and fitted evening shirt has a tab at the bottom of the bosom to hold it properly in place flat against the chest, never being so long as to bulge. Right—The white waistcoat should never show beneath the fronts of the tailcoat. This is a common and egregious error.

Goiter May Appear Innocent, But It Will Bear Watching

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WHEN the glands of the body burst into flower, as it were, at the period of adolescence (the change from childhood to youth) the thyroid may fail to measure up to the demands made upon it and become a source of discomfort or even of actual ill health.

We have no accurate means of measuring the secretion produced by the gland as its products are poured directly into the blood. We do know, however, many of the constituents of this important fluid and, of these, iodine is regarded as indispensable. We ordinarily assume then that goiter is the result of iodine deficiency.

The thyroid gland forms an important link between the sexual system and the nervous system.

Those who have studied extensively enlargements of the thyroid gland believe that there is no such thing as an innocent goiter.

When it is certain that a goiter is not receding the time for treatment is before important symptoms such as heart damage manifest themselves.

Dinner Menus Given Variety By Wild Game

Quail, Venison, Opossums and Young Rabbits Make Tempting Dishes.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

THE TANG of frost in the air gives added zest to the use of game as food and a delightful variety to the menus. Contrary to usual belief, game is not reserved for the use of those with ample funds, but it can be obtained on even a modest budget, if its proper preparation is understood.

In Maryland and Virginia no dish is considered finer than wild duck. The gamy flavor is a real charm and to serve it properly it should be accompanied by wild rice and currant jelly.

Of course the partridge is found in most sections of this country and its flavor is delightful. In case of an unlimited supply, try broiled quail.

Recipe for Broiled Quail.

According to "Every Woman's Cook Book," this is the way to prepare them.

"Remove feathers without scalding birds; singe, wash, clean and draw carefully. Split down the back with a sharp knif, then force open flat. Season with salt and pepper. Place birds on wire broiler, either under a gas flame or over red hot coals, skin side down. When brown turn and cook on other side. Time required on each side about 12 to 15 minutes. Arrange birds on freshly toasted bread and pour melted butter over them. Serve on hot platter.

"Garnish with parsley, red jelly and slices of lemon.

"If skin is removed from birds before broiling, be sure and brush them all over with melted butter before broiling."

Recipe for Venison.

Clean and lard saddle of venison. Sprinkle with salt and paprika and cover with several strips of bacon. Roast the same as lamb, allowing 12 to 15 minutes to the pound.

Now for the opossum recipe. First of all it must be skinned, entrails removed and then thoroughly cleaned. Then season with salt, pepper, cayenne and one tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce. Dredge with flour. Place in baking pan, add three cups of cold water or less if the oppossum is small. Bake in moderate oven two and a half to three hours, basting often until tender and brown.

Here is a good method to roast a young rabbit. Clean and keep the liver for soup. Prepare stuffing, two large boiled onions, ½ pound fresh breadcrumbs, 1 tablespoonful of dry sage put through a sieve, two ounces of butter. Chop up the onions, mix with the rest in a bowl. Season. Stuff the rabbit and close with a skewer. Truss it and put it in a shallow baking tin with four ounces of beef dripping spread on its back, and wrap it up in a grease-proof paper. Bake in a hot oven for one hour or more. Baste every ten minutes.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE'VE HEARD many a tale about who designed the first Windsor chair and where—but to tell the truth nobody is quite sure. However, here is one version that is interesting and sounds logical. Once upon a time King George I of England was caught in a storm some distance from the castle at Windsor. And there he sat in a chair that—was quite new in design but charming in its simple grace. He discovered that it had been made by the village wheelwright on the principle of a wheel with spokes and a slender bent rim. So delighted was George with the chair that he had it copied for himself and thereby began the popularity of a chair that has been in demand ever since because of its comfort, beauty and usability. It has been adapted in ever so many ways since—and the colonial American cabinet makers used it so widely and with such originality of interpretation that it has become almost synonymous with colonial American furniture designs. They are made in maple, mahogany and walnut and even in oak.

And Windsor chairs fit so pleasantly in so many places. We think they will be just right to solve the decoration problem of a lady we know who has a blue bedroom. She has a simple bow-front dresser, a highboy and a draped dressing table—which makes quite a lot of furniture for a room that isn't so big in the first place. But she does need chairs—she'd like at least two comfortable chairs and a straight chair—and she can make floor space for them all right. The question is a type of chairs that won't look too bulky and yet serve the need. That's why we suggest the Windsors—two rockers and one straight chair. They are comfortable and yet light in effect . . . and, of course, entirely congenial with the furniture she already has.

Naughty Child Merits Right Of Explanation

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

BUT, mother, you won't listen to me! "Let me tell you why."

It was a useless protest every time. Mrs. Jones neither could nor would pay attention to what her small daughter said, and the child, overwhelmed by her mother's accusations, would burst into helpless tears. She finally stopped trying to explain herself, and took refuge in sullen silence, which her mother found even more exasperating than angry self-defense.

Adults are too prone to take the stand that they are always right and the child wilfully naughty and utterly wrong. Often, if they would but listen to the child's point of view, they would find what seemed to the child at least a reasonable motive for his behavior. After all, however outrageous the particular act in question, the important point is to get at the underlying motive.

In such cases it is more profitable for a parent, however outraged and angry he may feel, to curb his tongue and, with an open mind, listen to the child's defense. If he would take the position, not of an accusing prosecutor, nor even an impartial judge, but of a jury, the peers of the accused, he could be of great help to the child. Let him try honestly to put himself into the child's place, and with love and sympathy follow the child's mental processes. He will find, to his surprise, that, according to the child's logic, the youngster was acting quite reasonably.

WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1935

PUC to Hear Criticism of Transit Firm

Roberts Seeks to Force Free Transfer Plan on Companies.

Hearing on Protests Due at Commission After December 15.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday announced its purpose to investigate reports of unsatisfactory service afforded by the Capital Transit Co.

At the same time William A. Roberts, People's Counsel, announced he would seek to force adoption of a free transfer arrangement between buses and cars of that company and the buses of the Washington Rapid Transit Co.

Assumption by the Capital Transit Co. of the operation of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. was the alternative proposed by Roberts. Although there was no formal connection between the two announcements they admittedly were timed for publication together.

Determination to air the alleged deficiencies of the company service at a public hearing was based on reports of commission investigators and complaints which had been received from "individual riders, prospective riders, citizens' groups and the People's Counsel," the commission said.

Date for the public hearing will be fixed 10 days from now. The hearing probably will be held after the middle of December, it was said.

Roberts Critical.

Sharp criticism of service was voiced by Roberts. Citizens' groups have been "bitterly protesting the standards of service of the Capital Transit Co." for months, he said.

"It is my intention," he went on, "to supply specific evidence of unsatisfactory service with respect to schedules, over-loading equipment, sanitary condition of equipment, safety of equipment and convenient locating of stops and loading platforms and inadequate marking of routes.

"The great increase in riding has not been met by provision of new equipment and some of the new equipment is not adapted to the service in which it is placed.

"There are many questions of sharp discriminations in rates which should be considered and adjusted, and there remain inconveniences of transfer arrangement which will be brought to the attention of the commission.

Describes Plans.

"Among other things, the absence of transfer arrangement to the Washintgon Rapid Transit Co. will be presented to the commission and evidence to support a compulsory transfer arrangement or an assumption of the operation by the Capital Transit Co. will be made."

Blank forms are to be prepared and distributed to all citizens, and other civic associations desiring them, Roberts said. These will be used for the filing of specific complaints with the name of the complainant, details of the complaint and such other information as would serve as the basis for evidence in any court proceeding which might ensue, Roberts concluded.

First-hand investigation of Capital Transit service has been made by Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the commission, over a period of weeks. The company, it is said, has so poorly instructed its drivers they have had to appeal to passengers for route directions.

"If conditions are so bad at present time, what will they be when cold, rain and snow come?" asked one commission official. "Conditions threaten to become serious. Complaints cover all lines, cars and buses in all sections of the city."

Girl Shoots Pursuer Fleeing Holdup Scene

Post Staff Photo.

Miss Verdery Edwards, clerk of an ice cream store in the 1300 block of Eleventh street northwest, who was held up by a woman last night. She is shown reporting the robbery to Sergt. John E. Scott, of the Second Precinct. The woman shot a pursuer.

Fires on Crowd After Seizing $19 at 11th Street Store.

Armed with a nickel-plated revolver, a flashily dressed young colored woman robbed an ice cream store in the 1300 block of Eleventh street northwest late yesterday afternoon, then ran amuck as a crowd of passersby chased her, and wounded one of her pursuers in the arm.

The holdup occurred at the High Co.'s branch, into which the gungirl sauntered, apparently to make a purchase. Miss Verdery Edwards, 25, of the 900 block of H street northwest, the clerk, was alone in the store.

"Give me the money—all the money," demanded the robber, covering Miss Edwards with the pistol.

When Miss Edwards refused, the woman thrust the revolver closer.

"If you don't open the cash drawer I'll shoot," she warned.

At that moment a girl, Evelyn Gillette, 14, of the 1200 block of Twelfth street northwest, entered the store and bought a bottle of milk, while the robber hid her gun. In making the sale, Miss Edwards opened the cash drawer. As the child departed the young woman said:

"It's open now. Leave it open."

Scooping up $19 in cash from the drawer, the robber fled.

No sooner had she escaped than Miss Edwards rushed into the street, yelling. She commandeered a cab, while about 20 passersby, attracted by her cries, gave chase.

The robber fled down Eleventh street to N street and over N street to Twelfth, where she wheeled and started firing wildly.

In the confusion the robber escaped. Police scout cars, detectives and patrolmen on their beats were on the lookout for her last night.

District Pleads For Increase In Lump Sum

U. S. Budget Aids Warned Taxes Must Be Raised to Meet Costs.

With the District facing a heavy tax increase and the prospect of falling behind in public improvement needs, the District Commissioners yesterday pleaded with the Federal Bureau of the Budget to approve the $8,317,000 Federal appropriation they ask in their 1937 annual estimates.

Without an increased Federal appropriation, the Commissioners told bureau officers, the District cannot hope to meet steadily growing operating expenses and pay for necessary improvements even with increased taxes.

They pointed out that since 1932 the Federal appropriation had been slashed from $9,500,000 to $5,700,000 for the current fiscal year. In addition, District revenues have been cut by $2,600,000 a year by reduction of the real property tax rate. Another $1,500,000 loss in revenue annually has been due to decrease in the value of taxable real estate. There has been a drop of approximately $100,000,000 in the assessed value of real estate in the last few years, they said.

Plea of the Commissioners closed the hearings on the estimates. It was the first time such a thing had been done.

Need for increasing the $1,700,000 estimate for relief next year, because Federal funds had been shut off, need for new apparatus to replace fire apparatus, needs of the Police Department and other items were called especially to the attention of the bureau officers.

ABC Board Studies Case.

The Alcohol Beverage Control Board yesterday took under advisement the case of Carl Berger, proprietor of the Tower Pharmacy, 1000 Fourteenth street northwest. The board proposed to revoke his license because of two arrests of persons on gambling charges in his store.

Mrs. Cugino May Clear Up Wilson Case

Widow of 'The Stinger' Questioned by Police on Murder Charge.

Pugh May Call Special Grand Jury Session in December.

Police yesterday questioned Mrs. Frances Cugino, 23-year-old widow of "Tony the Stinger" Cugino, to determine whether she can help them convict some of the suspects held in the murder of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route agent.

Cugino, who committed suicide in jail last September, has been named by one of the suspects as the "trigger man" in the killing.

Another man who took part in the murder plot, aimed at Edward (Mickey) McDonald, a local gambler, also is dead. He was Claude Bailey, who was shot while trying to escape from Lorton Reformatory.

Held as Witness.

But the police still have four men they believe had a hand in the death of Wilson, who was brought down when the gangsters mistook him for McDonald as he delivered a morning newspaper at the gambler's Takoma Park, Md., home October 19, 1934.

It was in the hope that Mrs. Cugino could help convict some of these men that the widow was arrested in New York two days ago.

The Federal warrant which Lieut. Floyd Truscott and Detective Sergt. Earl Hartman took to New York to arrest Mrs. Cugino charges her with conspiring with her husband to murder McDonald.

The officers emphasized, however, that she agreed to return voluntarily and that they did not have to serve the warrant. Consequently, it was assumed that her role in the case was to be that of a witness.

Two Overt Acts Charged.

Two overt acts are charged in the warrant—one that she received long-distance telephone calls from her husband in connection with the killing, the other that she concealed Tony after the crime.

Yesterday Mrs. Cugino was being held in the Police Women's Bureau. Lieut. Truscott, Sergt. Hartman and Lieut. Fowler, head of the so-called Wilson squad, talked to her, but declined later to say what they learned, if anything.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh, of Montgomery County, who is expected to prosecute the Wilson murder case—the murder happened just over the District line—said yesterday that he plans to talk with Mrs. Cugino.

He added that he may call a special session of the grand jury the first week in December.

Ickes' Auto Looted.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes lost a plush lap robe and a cushion to thieves who broke into his automobile while it was parked on Eighteenth street, near the Interior Department Building yesterday, his chauffeur, James L. Jones, 1525 Q street northwest, last night told police.

As students at George Washington University voted to set up a "union" to discuss stands on public issues. One voter is shown entering the booth where the voting machine was located. The apparatus on the left is used to demonstrate how to cast a vote on the machine.

Voting with machines on national issues took place in the District of Columbia yesterday for the first time in history.

It was an election conducted by students of George Washington University, voting to set up a George Washington Union to discuss stands on public issues in what would be virtually a "little Congress."

Nearly 1,000 cast ballots, pulling down levers of voting machines that many of them, as residents of the voteless District, had never seen the like of before.

They voted for party labels—Right, Center and Left—and when the results are tabulated tonight, after the second day's voting ends, party managers in caucus will name representatives to the union in the proportion to which their parties received votes.

Follow Oxford, Yale.

George Washington University is thus paralleling a student development that has precedents only at Oxford and Cambridge, in England, and Yale, in this country. It was the Oxford Union that conducted this year's nation-wide peace poll in England.

As long lines of students filed through the corridors of Corcoran and Stockton Halls and the Biological Sciences Building, the tall elections chairman, Charles Kiefer, outlined the party platforms.

"Briefly you could put it this way—that the Right stands for laissez faire, the Center for governmental regulation, and the Left for social ownership. And stress it that this is a vote on issues, not on personalities. There are no candidates running."

All over the clustered campus were election posters. On the green doors of Corcoran Hall, some one had placarded:

Just inside the hallway, the Center party had stuck up its cards: "A Vote for the Center is a Vote for Sane Progress and a Liberal Union. Put a 'Progressive' Label on G. W.—Not a 'Reactionary' One."

Only the Leftists didn't have any posters. They had first announced their resignation from the union on the ground of alleged faculty interference, but Kiefer explained last night that this had been a "misapprehension," that the party was being reorganized, that votes were being cast for it, and that it would be represented in the union.

John Willard is chairman of the Rights; John Bracken, of the Center, and Harvey Thirloway was director of the old Left Party. Ted Pierson has been general chairman of the organization committee.

The voting went on in booths protected by drawn curtains, with the voters merely pulling down a lever over the name of the party desired. The lever snaps back, and the vote is automatically and secretly tabulated.

The union will consist of 100 members, who will meet first on December 4, and every other Sunday from then on, to discuss the same problems as lie before the United States Congress. All students were eligible to vote.

7 Named to Represent D. C. at Harbors Parley

A committee of seven was named by the District Commissioners yesterday to represent the District at the forthcoming meeting of the National Rivers and Harbors Association in New Orleans.

Those named are John A. Remon, chairman of the rivers and harbors committee of the Board of Trade; John Small, Creed W. Fulton, E. W. Sapp, Kirby Smith, M. O. Leighton and R. A. Van Orsdell, sub-committee chairman.

Bank Appeals Order to Pay Damage Suit

American National Fights $27,500 Verdict Given Depositor Firm.

Introducing income tax returns of the George H. Price Co., attorneys representing the receiver for the Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co. yesterday sought to have set aside a verdict of $27,500 against the bank because of its alleged failure to honor a check of less than $2,000.

The bank's receiver filed an affidavit in which he charged the plaintiff had not accurately stated the firm's income. The true income, not available at the trial, showed a discrepency between what the firm claimed it made annually and what it reported as its income.

The Price Co., it was shown, had lost one of its most profitable accounts because of the dishonoring of the check. Justice Peyton Gordon took under advisement the question of a new trial, which at the same time he refused to permit attorneys for the receiver additional time within which to perfect their appeal.

Cary Hardee, receiver of the bank, contended the company did not have the earning power it claimed it had and which, he said, was the basis for the award by the jury.

Board to Buy Land for Use In New Parks

Tracts to Be Purchased Over City From $800,000 Fund.

Planning Body to Keep Negotiations Secret to Bar Speculation.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday approved plans to buy up land in small parcels in various sections of the city to expand park facilities.

While Thomas S. Settle, commission secretary, explained that, to avoid speculation, location of the sites could not be revealed, he indicated the areas were well scattered. The purchases are being made out of an $800,000 land acquisition program authorized by Congress.

At the same time, the commission's monthly meeting disclosed three other developments in the growth of the metropolitan area's park system.

1. Improvement of Theodore Roosevelt Island, in the Potomac, by Civilian Conservation Camp workers, is proceeding rapidly, with possible completion by mid-1936. An inspection visit showed brush and trash cleared away, a bridle path and hiking trail begun, and a setting apart of the old Mason House ruins to remain as a relic.

Parkway Speeded.

2. George Washington Memorial Parkway is being carried on from Arlington Memorial Bridge to Key Bridge, with a $25,000 appropriation from Virginia, $25,000 from Arlington County, and $350,000 from the Public Works Administration, as well as regular National Park Service funds. The work will include a bridge from Virginia to Columbia Island. The commission also has acquired land to carry the parkway from Key Bridge to Chain Bridge, and is seeking further financial aid from Virginia.

3. A plan to develop a number of small park areas in the District has been drawn up by C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, and will be submitted to the commission today. It involves $1,000,000 already allocated from PWA funds.

"We're moving along very nicely," Settle said.

A New Method of Trial and Error Proved Its Worth in Making New Marx Comedy

Troupe Toured In Comic Bits To Test Worth

Experiment Paid Its Way; About New Hayes Play; Amusement Chat.

By Nelson B. Bell.

It is not in any sense to reiterate surmise or repeat an idle speculation to reprint here and now certain things that were said in this space concerning the three Marx Brothers in "A Night at the Opera" in The Post of Monday, November 4.

For instance, the paragraph that said, in part "Quietly and without shouting, tumult or fanfare, the Marx Brothers slipped unobtrusively out of Hollywood as each comedy sequence was finished in script and 'tried it on the dog' in some remote and unsuspecting community to see whether or not an audience would laugh. If it did, the 'bit' went into the picture; if not, it went into the ash can."

Or those other few lines, a little further along in the piece, that said: "I doubt if there ever has been so skillful and so sustained an example of comedy construction as is revealed in 'A Night at the Opera.' At least four times during the development of this full length feature, humorous climaxes of imposing proportions are reached. Each is preceded by a logical 'build-up' that in itself compounds more than the average comedy's allotment of laughs."

First Eye-Witness Impressions.

Those statements were set down 24 hours after this writer had viewed the Marxian revels in the Century Theater, in Baltimore, as the guest of the Loew executives at ceremonies that even went so far as to include some very elegant banqueting. They still stand in memory as gross understatements.

There is a great deal to be said on the side of the unique plan pursued by the Marx Brothers, George S. Kaufman, Morrie Ryskin and the others concerned in the fabrication of this fabulous foolery in testing their laughs before they recorded them permanently in celluloid.

By taking the comic structure of their picture on tour as a road-show attraction, playing legitimate and vaudeville theaters, the sponsors of " A Night at the Opera" became the beneficiaries of an infallible series of audience reactions to situations that were intended to be funny.

Such of their comedy conceits as were found to be out of kilter with the cash customer's sense of the ludicrous were promptly scrapped. What survived, in the picturesque patois of show business, was "sure-fire."

That is what patrons of Loew's Fox Theater will enjoy, beginning this morning at 10:40, or some such hour, accuratey recorded in the "Film Time Tables," somewhere hereabouts.

Experiment Showed Profit.

There was another advantage to this unprecedented method of procedure.

The "road-show" not only paid its way, but returned enough of profit to strike off some of the production costs of the theater. Altogether, it was a swell idea.

The Mad Marxes, who aren't as mad as they might be, when you get right down to it, profess a definite intention to pursue the same course in the preparation of all their future screen comedies.

If they can all be made as funny as this one, it will be worth the trouble.

By this process of trial and error, in a manner of speaking, what is known to the trade as "comedy construction" beomes practically airtight. The elements of personal guess, speculation and sheer luck are automatically eliminated. The actor goes before the cameras and microphones knowing that what he is about to do is precisely what is needed in the instant circumstance.

That is about the equivalent of presenting a rich gold mine to a man in need of a dollar!

"Swing Your Lady," the current comedy at the National, which has a splendid basic idea for a roaring farce not too deeply obscured by its present circumlocutions, according to grapevine telegraph is to be taken off tomorrow night for revision of the script and, it is reported, recasting.

We have already unequivocally committed this column to the view that an altered treatment of the idea upon which "Swing Your Lady" purports to be founded will be an advantageous bit of plastic dramaturgy, but we cannot go along on the matter of recasting.

Try as we have, we cannot bring to mind from among the available contemporary players any to do better by the pivotal roles of this play than those already in them. Every mental substitution marks a recession from the farce's present highly effective casting.

If the present cast is to be torn down, the job might as well be made complete at the start by putting Helen Hayes and Ernest Truex in the roles of the lady blacksmith and the Greek wrestler!

"Victoria Regina."

Speaking—disrespectfully, as we were—of Helen Hayes, her new vehicle, "Victoria Regina," which Gilbert Miller will bring to the National Theater for the week of December 16, prior to its New York opening, encountered censor trouble at the time of its original London production.

Not that there is any laxity in the play based on the life of the Queen whose example made the word "Victorian" the synonym of prim propriety, but the public presentation of a play about reigning members of the English royal family, either past or present, is not permitted in Great Britain.

The result was that "Victoria Regina," which deals wholly with the reign and personal life of H. R. H. Victoria from the time of her accession until the close of her rule, 64 years later, was banned from the regular commercial theaters.

Price to Make Debut.

Laurence Housman, the author, succeeded, however, in having his play produced at the small Gate Theater, organized on a private subscription basis, thereby escaping the jurisdiction of the lord chamberlain, the British censor.

Vincent Price, who played the Prince Consort in the Gate Theater production, will come to this country to impersonate the same character in Miss Hayes' support. It will be his stage debut on this side of the Atlantic.

Incidentally, "Victoria Regina" will mark its star's third assumption of the role of a reigning sovereign. She played the role of the Egyptian Queen in George Bernard Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra" several years ago and, next prior to her new assignment, made her debut at the National in the title role of Maxwell Anderson's poetic drama of "Mary of Scotland," which subsequently served her a season in New York and a second on the road.

At the Cameo Theater in Mount Rainier, Md., tonight, Sidney B. Lust, foremost of the Capital's independent exhibitors, will inaugurate an innovation by presenting an amateur talent contest, in which contestants from the District and nearby Maryland will take part. The amateur aspirants for professional preferment will go on at 9 p. m. The customary awards will be made on a basis of audience applause. In consonance with the prevalent mania precipitated by Major Bowes, those of the Lust amateurs deemed worthy of the distinction will in all probability be accorded auditions by one of the major local radio stations.

After that, anything can happen—and usually does!

Tryouts Impend.

Tryouts will be held in the near future by the Players Club of Central Community Center for parts in several short plays planned for presentation in January under the direction of Lucy Ann Rogers.

The tests originally announced for next Tuesday night at Central have been postponed until Tuesday, December 3, at 7:30 o'clock, on account of the repeat performance of "The Poor Nut" scheduled for next Tuesday night at Roosevelt Auditorium at 8:30.

Resident actors and actresses who have no present dramatic affiliations are invited to become members of the Players Club at any Tuesday evening meeting at Central High School, Thirteenth and Clifton streets northwest.

Moroni Olsen, the ample gentleman cast in the role of Porthos in RKO-Radio's recent production of "The Three Musketeers"—and an imposing figure of a man he made—seems to have one of those ideal "breaks" that come only once in an acting lifetime in the forthcoming production of "Annie Oakley," in which Barbara Stanwyck is soon to be starred on the screen at RKO-Keith's.

Mr. Olsen is cast in the picturesque role of that handsomest of flamboyant showmen, Col. William F. Cody, known to every kid elderly enough to "play Indian" as Buffalo Bill. If this role doesn't make Mr. Olsen, he might just as well give up and devote his bulk to wrestling, or the moving of safes or pianos, or something.

To one who, man and boy, has cherished a vivid recollection of once having met Buffalo Bill, along with a lot of his milk-fed redskins, between shows out in Chicago, Mr. Olsen seems to do right nicely by the part in the short "Annie Oakley" trailer already on the screen.

Miss Stanwyck breaks a mean glass ball, too.

Should Be a Wang!

Paul Muni, one of America's outstanding character actors, whether on stage or screen, has won the most important assignment of his career in the theater in the role of Wang in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's proposed picturization of Pearl S. Buck's novel of "The Good Earth." The choice of Muni is said to be the outcome of several weeks of secret tests for the part.

As Wang, Muni is to play the role of the Chinese peasant whose love of the soil of his native China eventually brings him great wealth and participation in stirring events that mark practically the full course of human existence from famine to riches and youth to the senility of tottering old age.

This part, it will be recalled, was played by two sterling actors during the week's engagement of the Theater Guild's stage version of the story at the National several seasons ago—Earl Larimore, who opened in the role, opposite Mme. Alla Nazimova, and Claude Rains, who succeeded him later in the week.

Now on Screen.

Yes, the same Claude Rains who now is making a name for himself as one of the foremost of the cinema's serious mimes, as witness "The Invisible Man," "Crime Without Passion," "The Clairvoyant" and, more recently, "The Last Outpost."

The screen version of "The Good Earth" will be directed by Victor Fleming. The filmization, which has been in contemplation for a matter of some two years or more, will entail the use of several thousand Chinese in climacteric scenes and demand elaborate location sequences showing intimate aspects of all strata of life in China.

If anything should happen to Muni, it would be my guess that Edward G. Robinson might reasonably be expected to get the part.

Hector Henri Mallot's famous novel, "Sans Famille," familiar to most French students, has been effectively translated to the screen and will be presented in the Foreign Language Cinema series in Pierce Hall tomorrow night at 8.

Hope-Dashed-to-Earth Note.

Those nutty Marxes and their Loew proxies—and you may spell it any way you like——didn't come through with those cocoanuts glace!

Probably they will attempt to set up the claim that that was another show!

Scores in First Stellar Film

Clean Out 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

Nature put over 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters in your kidneys to strain the waste matter out of the blood. Kidneys should pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.

When the passing of water is scanty, with smarting and burning, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your body may take up some of these poisons causing serious trouble. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the kidneys to flush out 3 pounds a day. Insist on Doan's Pills.

HOLLYWOOD FLASH! EXTRA! PREVIEW OF "A NIGHT AT THE OPERA" MARX BROTHERS COMEDY MAKES FILM HISTORY

"Night at the Opera" a hit; Marxes hilariously funny. Production and music rate extra high. The Marxian recipe for a crackelfest with song rings the bell again with topnotch punch features. The opus is high-marked also by Allan Jones who sings operatic numbers from "Il Trovatore", two dandy ballads, and "Alone" by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed, with his singing team-mate, Kitty Carlisle. In the supporting cast there isn't a weak spot. Miss Carlisle is all that one could ask. Walter King himself is a real tenor. The Marx Brothers will certainly build themselves into great favor as a result of this fine offering. —Hollywood Reporter

Great swells of laughter! Gusts of giggles at Marx Brothers roll through this musical farce. Among the big moments audiences will repeat around the fireside are scenes in a two-by-four cabin bulging with almost half of the passenger list before a gag ends a maniacal duel of Harpo and a moth; a rip-roaring finale at an opera performance with Groucho pursuing a rich widow all over the house, and Harpo going Tarzan trapezing in the flies as the backdrops change behind baffled singers. —Motion Picture Daily

A merry box-office number. Big laugh riot. A laugh fest with all types of audiences. George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind have supplied the comedians with excellent material. Of course, the biggest riot of laughs is in the final sequence, with the Marxes wrecking the opera. Chico and Harpo play baseball in the orchestra pit! —The Film Daily

Musical farce has been brilliantly adapted to the Marx Brothers as their best offering in "A Night at the Opera". It gives the comic trio plenty leeway for their distinctive cavortings, topping in wild climax at the opera where the patrons of romance snatch the menacing tenor off the stage to give Allan Jones and Miss Carlisle their chance at fame. Finale is a pip. —Daily Variety

Here is a riot of laughter. In addition to the Marx Brothers, the supporting cast is sure to win applause from any audience. The tempo is fast and furious with plenty of new gags and clever wise cracks all the way through. This young singer, Allan Jones, is the hit of the show, with his fine singing and pleasing personality. —Showmen's Trade Review

Pictures From Three Studios Comprise List

Films Range From Comedy With Music to Chills With Sabatini!

With the presentation of "So Red the Rose," starting Friday, November 29, Warner Brothers Earle Theater will inaugurate its "Pre-Holiday Show Parade," a six-week season of outstanding attractions on screen and stage.

Attractions from Warner Brothers, First National and Paramount are included in the last of features announced late yesterday by John J. Payette, general zone manager for Warner Brothers.

Margaret Sullavan is starred in the first production, "So Red the Rose," a Paramount picture, based on the novel by Stark Young. Her supporting cast includes Walter Connolly, Randolph Scott, Elizabeth Patterson, Johnny Downs and Dickie Moore. King Vidor directed this new film.

On the stage, Benny Davis will present his new "Star-Dust Revue," 20 entertainers discovered by the man who first introduced such present favorites as Ruby Keeler, Eleanor Powell, Hal LeRoy, Vilma and Buddy Ebsen and scores more.

Kay Francis' Best.

Kay Francis heads the cast in the second production, "I Found Stella Parish," which has been hailed as her best picture in many months. Ian Hunter and Sybil Jason are featured in support of the popular star.

On the stage with this attraction will be Ted Weems and his recording orchestra, a musical organization which is brought back for a repeat engagement as the result of a surprising number of bona fide requests.

One other Paramount Picture and three other Warner releases are listed by Mr. Payette for the other weeks of the season.

The Paramount production, entitled "Collegiate," features such capable comedians as Jack Oakie, Joe Penner and Ned Sparks in a mirth-provoking story of life at a young lady's finishing school. Frances Langford and Betty Grable are among others in the cast.

Another Gay Comedy.

Another comedy in the gay series featuring Joan Blondell, Hugh Herbert and Glenda Farrell—"Miss Pacific Fleet"—is included in the December listing. Humor and romance are said to be blended in this film, with Mr. Herbert finding bountiful opportunities for his famous funmaking.

One of Warner Brothers' most important productions of the 1935-36 season rounds out the list.

This is "Captain Blood," the Rafael Sabatini story of pirates on the Spanish Main, with Errol Flynn making his bid for film fame in the title role and lovely Olivia de Havilland cast opposite him. Guy Kibbee, Ross Alexander, Basil Rathbone and hundreds of others also appear in this exciting story of adventure and romance.

Additional stage attractions, soon to be announced, will add further attractiveness to this highly interesting group of pre-holiday shows.

Local Dancer in Broadway Hit

This smiling young siren, holding the cigarette merely for a suggestion of added insouciance, since the pesky thing seems not to be lighted, is Marjorie Mitchell, the Washington dancer who will return to her home town in comparative triumph when Vinton Freedley's production of "Anything Goes" arrives in the National Theater for a week's engagement, beginning Monday, December 2. In this musical hit, which will have rounded out a full year on Broadway, the costars are the crisp William Gaxton and the droll Victor Moore.

'Eastern Parade'

"THE EASTERN PARADE." The Eastern High School Dramatic Club, assisted by associated organizations, presents its annual fall show in two acts, produced under the general direction of Pauline Knee, assisted by faculty and student committees. Orchestra under the direction of Paul DeLong Gable. At the Eastern High School auditorium, November 21 and 22. Reviewed Thursday evening by W. A. Whitney.

In two spectacular settings, with a great variety of song and dance numbers, the Eastern High School Dramatic Club presented "The Eastern Parade," its 1935 fall show, augmenting its own talent with that from other organizations and from the student body at large.

With little effort at continuity, other than to present a reasonable excuse for staging the two revue acts in Radio City, "The Eastern Parade" offers an unusually good array of talent.

Enthusiastically received by an SRO audience, more than 35 solo and group selections were paraded. In the brief opening scene, to the tune of "Hello, Hello, Hello," composed for the occasion by Paul DeLong Gable, who also led the orchestra, it was explained that a group of Easternites was to give Radio City the double-o.

A Broadcast Tour.

The first part of that tour was "Amateur Broadcast," the second "Roof Garden," in both of which the same diversified demonstration of talent was made. Good singing and dancing, punctuated with moments of humor, marked the progress of the revue, a production excellently staged and performed.

Catherine Boswell, Ruth Thaler, Fred Farris, Raymond Berry, Ruth McCullough, Milton Hammer, Forrest Pier, Paul Bunyea, Harvey Major, Gerald Shupp, Roscoe Aull, Clayburne McLelland, John McCullough, Byron Sorrell, Robert Kobre, Marjorie McGaw, Audrey Barbour, Emma Massoni, Dorothy Smith, Jean Wurtz, Margaret Myerly, Fred Cordua, Constance Kreuger, Elizabeth Orr, Sylvia Berlin, Gwendolyn Hutchinson, Nancy Hamilton, Glenn Barton, Jesse Parvis, Arthur Dahl, Vera Sturiale.

Abe Cohen, Francis Moran, Val Scannell, Robert Rankin, Don Martin, David Miller, Mike Bresnahan, Jerry Ralston, Roma Lee Haun, Orpha Shaner, Paul Caslou, Julian Blincoe, John Whitesel, Jacob Baum, Loren Clarke, Ernest Payne, Letcher Connell, Doris Koons, Vivian Kern, Dorothy Goebel, Frances Goebel, Martha Sorrell, Emily Wahler, Lillian Ecton, Vivian Hudson, Jane Gatewood, Celia Goldsman, Jean Smith, Louise Evans, Talmah McConchie, Louise Whitney, Margaret Price.

"The Eastern Parade" will be repeated this evening at 8 in the auditorium of Eastern High School.

CAROLE LOMBARD, in "Hands Across the Table," in the rain sequence, comes out of the subway and is delighted to discover Fred MacMurray in a taxicab waiting for her. Miss Lombard, in her characteristic fashion, skips into the taxi. Soon she asks MacMurray where his overcoat is and he replies that he pawned it to buy food. And he points to the packages on the floor of the taxi, which are stacked to resemble a grocery shelf. Isidore Rauoff wants to know how Miss Lombard managed not to see the packages and how she succeeded in getting into the taxi without tripping over them. Carole Lombard is good at tricks.

In Joan Crawford's flicker, "I Live My Life," writes Dorothy Dres, she is seen in a restaurant in Greece, eating spaghetti with white kid gloves on. Is that the style or a flicker flaw?

Hugh O'Connell and ZaSu Pitts are at a hamburger stand in "The Affairs of Susan" and Miss Pitts is holding a box in her lap, says Ben Clark. When she gets up and walks away from the stand, Miss Pitts hasn't the box with her. However, insists Emmet O'Connell, in the following scene Hugh and ZaSu continue that walk and now Miss Pitts has the box under her arm.

In "Top Hat," Fred Astaire sings that ditty. He sings "I Just Got an Invitation Through the Mail" and, claims E. Summergrade as he says this, Astaire holds a telegram in his hand.

JOAN BLONDELL leaps from a motor boat in "We're in the Money" and Heaton Vorse wants to comment on the rapid changes of weather which occur during the water sequence. When Miss Blondell jumps, the sea is choppy. When the rescuers leap into the sea for her it is very calm. When they finally drag Miss Blondell to the gang plank of the yacht the sea is again choppy. Later, Joan is again tossed into the same sea—it gets to be a game—and there is hardly a ripple in the water. Anyway, the sea gives a varied performance.

The three gangsters are escaping from the police in "King Solomon of Broadway." They rush out of the house to the garage where their car is parked and the next scene, says Pearl Friedlander, shows them racing away from the house, but they have acquired a fourth man—a driver. There has been no hint of him previously in the flicker. It might have been that they needed a fourth for bridge.

O'Hara Buys Benning Option, Plans $2,000,000 Track Here

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

IN THE lexicons of the professional bookmakers and betting commissioners, there is no such item as an even-money bet. Only among the folks who make friendly and casual wagers between themselves, sans the bookmakers' commission, is a bet made on an even-money basis. Even on the flip of a coin, recognized as the No. 1 even-money proposition, if the coin is not a phoney, it is impossible to lay a wager with the bookmaking gentry on that basis. They want odds or—no bet.

POVICH.

Thus, when this department in a moment of curiosity bethought itself to request of Ryan & Co. of Wall Street, New York's most prominent firm of betting commissioners, the current odds on tomorrow's Georgetown-Maryland game at Griffith Stadium, I was informed tersely: "3 to 2 and pick 'em." Translated from betting parlance into a semblance of the King's English, Ryan & Co.'s message meant: "We will take odds of 3 to 2 against either team you chose to bet on."

"Three to two and pick 'em" means, plainly, that it is an even-money proposition, but that the betting commissioners demand the odds for the privilege of allowing the better to choose his team. Obviously there would be no percentage for a bookie or a commission firm to accept wagers on an even-money basis. There is the overhead to be met and the bookies operate from the vantage point of the other party making the overtures. But in recent years it has been the habit of the betting commissioners to inflate their percentage to the point where the better gets far the worst of the odds.

Time was when the bookies were content to offer odds of "6 to 5 and pick 'em" on even money bets and thus the better was getting only 16 percentage points the worst of the odds. In later years even-money bets drew no better offers than "5 to 4 and pick 'em," which meant that the better was taking a licking of 20 prcentage points on a wager that shaped up as an even-money proposition. But this season, particularly on football bets, the odds have been reduced to 2 to 3 on what is, admittedly, an even-money gamble, which means that the better is conceding 33 percentage points in the odds taken.

WHEN you hear odds of 7 to 5 quoted by the professional bookies against a team in the World Series, or against a fighter in a championship bout, that's only the half of it. You can't get a bet down on either contender at those figures. To provide for their own percentages, the bookies operate from a double set of odds. Thus, the fact that they were laying 2 to 1 against Max Baer in the recent Louis fight did not mean that they would lay 1 to 2 against Louis. No, indeedy, if you wanted to get down on Louis, why, it was at a price such as 2 to 5.

Thus it was in the last World Series between the Tigers and the Cubs. The Tigers were quoted, you remember, as 7-to-5 favorites. That meant only that the bookies would lay 7 to 5 against the Cubs. If you wanted to bet with the bookies on the Tigers you had to lay not 7 to 5 but 8 to 5, or, more probably, 9 to 5. It is the old bookies' percentage, calculated to let them balance their books, lay off the proper amounts and then sit back and watch the ball game in the comfort of the knowledge that they could not lose, even if their percentage was comparatively small.

I have seen the small-time betters in the Washington ball park hedge on their wagers with such shrewdness that they stood to win, no matter which team won or lost. I have seen a local gambler take $100 to $70 on Washington against New York and then, after Washington had taken a 4-run lead in the first inning, negotiate another bet in which he took $100 to $70 on New York against Washington after odds had shifted, of course. Then he sat back and watched the ball game, $30 winner no matter what the outcome.

Of course, to be able to take advantage from such a switch in the odds, the better must be taking the short end at the start, and be fortunate enough to see the odds change. But any professional better is always content to maneuver his wager into a sure thing at small profit rather than risk his own money on a gamble, no matter what the odds. That's how bookies are made.

In Short—

And when the race writers describe a 4-to-5 shot as "the public" choice, don't always believe it . . . as likely as not it is not the driblets from the pockets of the great majority that have made a horse the favorite in the mutuels, but the great gobs of dough wagered by the stable connections or the smart money . . . and despite reports that Jimmy Braddock was a 10-to-1 shot against Max Baer, no bookmaker ever laid more than 5 to 1 against Braddock, according to Jack Doyle, Broadway betting commissioner . . . who said that if as much as $600 had showed for Braddock, his odds would have been driven down to 3 to 1 . . . 10-to-1 bets were probably made, but only among friendly betters . . . This department's advice to Georgetown-Maryland betters: Bet on the team against which you can get any odds or as much as two points . . . at New Orleans a few years ago, the mutuel betting was so small that it required only $1,000 poured into the machines by the Capone gang on other horses to raise the odds on their even-money sure thing to 5 to 1 . . . the figures at which they collected from bets scattered among the bookies throughout the country . . . While the public prefers mutuels, the horsemen prefer bookmakers' odds because they can get bets down before the bookies revise their figures when a wad of money begins to show for a certain horse.

Dartmouth Increases in Favor As Princeton Meeting Nears

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Odds were hammered down tonight to 7½ to 5 favoring Princeton over Dartmouth for their perfect-record collision Saturday in the most significant game of the Eastern football season.

Increasing support for Red Blaik's Hanover Indians indicated that Dartmouth may take the field at Palmer Stadium only a 6½-to-5 underdog, according to Ryan & Co., Wall Street commissioners. Previously the Tigers were favored at 9 to 5.

This Princeton engagement is rated the second biggest betting game of the season, bowing only to the Notre Dame-Ohio State brawl in the amount of money planked down. A complete sellout of more than 58,000 seats was assured today. Nassau officials expect the biggest crowd in Princeton history.

Rose Bowl After All.

An important factor in this increased Dartmouth support was the unexpected revelation that Blaik's young men, after all, may be Rose Bowl candidates. During the past few weeks semiofficial reports trickling out of Hanover had Dartmouth ready to refuse a Pasadena invitation, even if the Indians completed their season undefeated. Hence, virtually all writers and fans dropped the Green team from the list of Eastern candidates.

But this week the situation was clarified by official explanations that Dartmouth's athletic council of nine members will decide the acceptance question if and when a Rose Bowl invitation is received. A large portion of the Hanover alumni and a majority of the council members are understood to favor the California trip. Prospects of such a journey furnish additional incentive for a Dartmouth victory.

Other factors boosting the Hanover stock were these: (1) Realization that Coach Blaik has uncovered virtually no double wing-back plays, thus far, and he is reputed one of the masters of double-flanker strategy. (2) Realization that the Indians have an excellent line, possibly superior to Princeton's. (3) Realization that Dartmouth's offensive play approaches perfection in its co-ordination and precision of execution. (4) Realization that the Hanover lads are strong on defense—particularly against an air attack, as was demonstrated so magnificently against Yale.

Sharkey Says 60% Of Old Skill Is His

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Nov. 21.—Jack Sharkey weighed 195 pounds and claimed to possess 60 per cent of his great boxing skill today when he completed training for his comeback campaign. He hopes for victories over Joe Louis and Jimmy Braddock, the current heavyweight champion.

Sharkey, in light training ever since he dropped his title to Primo Carnera more than two years ago, when he weighed 209, engages Eddie "Unknown" Winston, a busy and fairly consistent Negro battler from Hartford, Conn., tomorrow night in a 10-rounder at the Boston Garden.

New Offense Is Ready at Maryland

Team to Use Brand-New Attack in Contest With Hoyas.

Willis, Gormley Return to Give Squad Its Full Strength.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A PICKED squad of Maryland gridmen defeated an aggregation of Georgetowners last night in a spelling bee, and the tone of conversation following the titanic struggle indicated that the Terps are ready to repeat tomorrow on the gridiron of Griffith Stadium. But to Georgetown the radio spelling test was just so many words and the casual observer gathered that they will leave all the talking tomorrow to Maryland, while it occupies itself with making touchdowns.

Maryland's last strenuous practice yesterday was enough to satisfy the critics that it will have something more than a strong spelling team to pit against the Hoyas. Vic Willis and Johnny Gormley were back in uniform yesterday after several days in the infirmary where they were confined with an attack of grip, and the Old Line squad now is at full strength and in topnotch condition.

Maryland is going to show Georgetown an old team, comprised almost wholly of two-letter men, and a multitude of new plays. They have stuff that makes Thurston and his contemporaries look like rank amateurs, and unlike most teams dabbling in black magic, the boys use it deftly.

Not Like Old Team.

Coaches Frank Dobson and Jack Faber have devoted all of the week to perfecting the attack and it is safe to say that Maryland is going to look unlike the Maryland of previous games. Not that the old, reliable plays have been abandoned, but so much new football shrapnel will be used it may be quite a shock to the old guard.

Maryland intends to make good use of its sophomore backs tomorrow and the coaches have been working diligently with Waverly Wheeler, Bill Bryant and others to have them properly groomed for duty. But the real brunt of the burden will fall on the tried campaigners, Guckeyson, Headley, Ellinger, Stonebraker and the rest. There probably will be plentiful substituting in the backfield, but the coaches hope to stop Georgetown's running game with the first string line.

Lines Seem Equal.

They figure, and rightly so, that Maryland's line is as good as the Hoyas' from tackle to tackle, while Vic Willis, Lou Ennis and Blair Smith give them a slight advantage at ends. The trio does everything expected of an end, covering punts, receiving passes, breaking up plays, well enough to satisfy the most particular coach.

Georgetown, with Noonan, Snyder, Cavadine and Barabas, naturally thinks it is better protected at the flanks, but none of these lads can match the Terps in experience, and experience is going to count heavily tomorrow.

Callahan and Stalfort are tackles who know their business and act accordingly, while in Minion and Wolfe Maryland has a pair of guards who rank with the best. Young Frank DeArmey needs experience at center, but he has done well since assuming Bill Andorka's post and will be a worthy opponent for Georgetown's spectacular Red Hardy.

Both teams will conclude preparations for the game this afternoon with even lighter workouts than they had before. Both apparently have taken the game nonchalantly, but below the surface smolders an intense rivalry and when it bursts into flame from the heat of actual combat tomorrow, the fans will see two smart teams, well drilled for the occasion.

Riot Squad Quells N.Y.U Students After Tickets

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—A police emergency squad had to be called today to restore order when 4,000 students stormed the east building of Washington Square College, New York University, to purchase tickets for the N. Y. U.-Fordham game Thanksgiving Day. N. Y. U.'s football team is undefeated and untied.

The police organized the applicants in a line that extended for almost two blocks.

Hickey Retired As Head of Association

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, Ohio, Nov. 21.—Thomas Jefferson Hickey, "grand old man" of the American Association which he founded in 1902, surrendered today the presidency of that organization.

His action was voluntary as six of the clubs voted to retain him.

The 74-year-old prexy accepted an offer of a life-time job as chairman of association's board of directors—a new position created for the sole purpose of submitting it to Hickey.

New Head in December.

A new president will be named at the December 10 meeting in Chicago. There are a host of candidates for the job, but the most favored ones are Lou McEvoy, business manager of the St. Louis Browns; Judge Ed Norris, of Toledo; Francis J. Powers, Chicago sports writer; Ed Shave, St. Paul newspaperman, and Billy Evans, former general manager of the Cleveland Indians.

Evans was offered the job, but demanded a five year contract at $15,000 per year, at which the league officials shook their heads. Hickey has drawn but $7,500 the last few years and the loop moguls refused to consider doubling the salary.

"McEvoy can have the job if he wants it," said several of the association club owners. Rumor had it, however, that the American League will create a position of some kind within the next two weeks and offer it to the Browns' official.

President George M. Trautman of Columbus Club presided at the meeting at which Hickey surrendered the reins. An informal announcement said Hickey's salary would be $200 a month.

Hickey, as a floor walker in a Chicago department store, organized the American Association 33 years ago and piloted it to one of the strongest baseball organizations in the country. He served as president in 1902 and 1903. Ed Grillo, of Cincinnati, became president in 1904 and Joe O'Brien, of Toledo, served for the next three years.

Tom Chivington, of Louisville, was president 1908 to 1915, but Hickey was recalled to the league leadership in 1916 and retained it until today.

Red Sox Get Two Stars, Yanks Buy Infielder, Is Reliable Report.

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, Ohio, Nov. 21.—A whirlpool of rumors made every one dizzy at the minor league convention today, but it was learned from reliable sources that:

1. The Philadelphia Athletics had sold Shortstop Eric McNair and Outfielder Roger Cramer to the Boston Red Sox, and Third Baseman Pinky Higgins to the New York Yankees.

2. Bob Quinn had agreed definitely to serve as general manager of the Boston Braves, which team will be reorganized within the next few days on a basis that will surprise everyone.

3. Outfielder Al Simmons, of the Chicago White Sox, will play for Detroit next year if Mickey Cochrane can sell him to Walter O. Briggs, now sole owner of the world's champions.

4. Jimmy Foxx, star home run hitter of the Athletics, may remain in Philadelphia after all, still acting as the backbone of the club. Offsetting that information was a persistent report Foxx would go to the White Sox.

Reports Believed True.

These reports were received from men who have never been known to start a false rumor, men whose word is recognized as good as a cashier's check, but whose names cannot be mentioned without violation of confidence.

The "inside" of the big deals involving several of the outstanding stars of the American League was that Connie Mack at first meant to sell Cramer, McNair and Foxx to the Red Sox, but that other clubs made offers and insisted that such a deal would give too much strength to Boston.

After a number of huddles, it was learned from an impeccable source, Connie Mack agreed, and made the deals.

Simmons in Trouble.

Simmons angered the White Sox a week ago when he ripped up a new contract that was offered to him. He drew $25,000 last season and the White Sox offered him but $12,500 for 1936.

He ripped it up and uttered a

Magic Putter Gone, Bridge Expert Sad

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 21.—An aura of gloom tonight surrounded the ordinarily cheerful features of P. Hal Sims, who, when not competing at contract bridge, turns in impossible and prodigious performances at golf with an ancient putter.

The reason: Someone "accidentally grabbed" his lucky putting iron with the rest of the golf sticks from a parked automobile. In a newspaper advertisement Sims said the present holder of his sticks was welcome to everything but the greens iron.

"I will pay five times the price for the return of my favorite putter (original cost $5) and no questions asked," he offered.

California-Stanford Expected To Draw $300,000 Tomorrow

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21.—Football will open 90,000 pocketbooks Saturday to lose more than $1,000,000 in a spending flood surging around the California-Stanford game.

The annual gridiron joust between these collegiate rivals of 43 years becomes the "big game" in fact as well as fancy. For the first time since 1931 the huge Stanford Stadium is expected to be crowded. The bowl actually seats a few over 89,600. Two thousand ushers, attendants and others will nudge into standing room or blot out the aisles.

From this gathering the two universities will collect and split something over $300,000, and within a radius of 50 miles business people are trained and ready for a lively session on the financial gridiron where an estimated $1,000,000 will roam that day for the tackling.

The innkeepers, night club proprietors and all the others who deal in the intangible commodity known as "whoopee" are interested in the game—but not so much the outcome.

It is a case of how long and how loud will melodies of cash ring from the registers, not whether California will remain undefeated and go to the Rose Bowl or Stanford, by winning, make a deadlock of the Pacific Coast Conference championship and possibly take up the touchdown cudgels New Year's Day at Pasadena for the third straight time.

To account for the approximate $1,300,000 that will change hands on the week-end of the biggest game of the regular Far Western schedule, this region is prepared to accommodate the largest influx of persons in four years.

Scalpers look dumb when offered less than $50 apiece for tickets on the 40-yard line.

College Unit Strikes Out At Evils

Rigid Control of Sports Is Urged by National Association Here.

Hit Athletes' 'Soft Jobs;' Ask Players' Incomes Be Made Public.

RIGID control of financial aid to college athletes was advocated yesterday by the Association of State Universities at the opening session of its annual conclave being held this year in Washington.

Striking at the subsidization of skilled athletes, the association adopted an 11-point program, the handiwork of Frank P. Graham, president of the body and also president of the University of North Carolina, and pledged itself to work for its adoption by all athletic conferences.

The regulations, as pointed out by A. H. Upham, Miami University (Ohio) and secretary of the association, are not submitted as a code, but merely as suggested supplements to existing codes. The program will be placed before every conference of the Nation, as all States are represented at the meeting.

Pay Publicity.

Chief among the practices to come under the association's fire was that of paying athletes for sinecures. To combat this it adopted a measure requiring that a list of any and all awards, that is, employment positions, when made shall be published with amounts and rates of pay, in the student newspaper and daily press. Also that the rate of pay for any college job open to an athlete shall be at the regular rate paid other students for the same work.

To further curb the evil of subsidization it passed a resolution calling on faculty committees to obtain from each athlete in advance of competition a detailed statement in writing of the amounts of his financial earnings and income received during the college year, and the source of earnings.

Following are the 7 prime points among the 11 outlined last night for the government of eligibility standards:

1. Any student who, because he is an athlete or prospective athlete, receives preferential consideration in the matter of tuition, fees, room, board, clothes, books, job, etc., is ineligible to represent the institution in an intercollegiate contest.

2. The rate of pay for any college job open to an athlete shall be at the regular rate paid other students for the same work. A list of any and all awards, when made, shall be published, with amounts and rates of pay, in the student newspaper and daily press.

3. The faculty committee on eligibility shall in advance of competition require of each athlete a detailed statement in writing of the amounts of his financial earnings and income received during the college year, and their source.

4. Members of the athletic staff or department of physical education shall not, by the initiation of correspondence or by personal interviews, on their own initiative seek to recruit athletes or prospective athletes, nor shall they have anything to do with the award of any scholarship, loan or job.

5. No member of the athletic staff shall receive for his services or for any athletic purpose any money or other consideration except through the college authorities.

6. Every candidate for an athletic team must declare orally to the committe and in writing, upon his honor, his eligibility or ineligibility under each separate regulation.

7. No post-season intercollegiate athletic contest shall be permitted.

Bad Duck Shooting Laid To 'Blue Bird Weather'

Baltimore, Nov. 21 (AP).—"Blue bird weather," warm, mild and windless, was blamed today by State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte for the poor luck reported by Maryland duck hunters.

LeCompte explained that in good weather the ducks stay on the water all day "and laugh at the hunters," doing their feeding at night. He prophesied that the kill this year would be even less than the toll of 30,000 ducks reported last season.

Narragansett Owner Foresees Turf Sport Legalized in District

Millionaire Track Man Here With Architect to Further Plans.

Benning Races Ended in 1908; Course Still in Good Condition.

By Walter Haight.

A $2,000,000 racing plant will be built on the site of the old Benning track by Walter O'Hara, New England millionaire and president of the Narragansett Park race track, if the next Congress legalizes racing in the District, it was learned yesterday. O'Hara has obtained an option on the Northeast property and has a staff of architects ready to make the plans for a modren turf establishment.

The option will allow O'Hara to purchase the property within 90 days after the adjournment of the session of Congress which convenes next January. The deal was closed through the Eastland Properties, Inc., and the terms of the possible purchase price have been withheld.

O'Hara, who makes Washington his headquarters while his horses are running at Maryland tracks, is confident that racing will be legalized here at the next session of Congress, and it is understood he outbid several other interests seeking to gain control of the one-time turf center of the Capital.

Benning last was the scene of racing in 1908 when reformers were successful in ending the sport in the District. The track has remained a horse training ground, however, and the oval is in excellent condition. O'Hara plans to build a spacious grandstand, clubhouse and paddock.

The New England sportsman has made a sensational success of his first racing promotion venture. His

LeVan Returns To Princeton Backfield

Squad Cheerful as Last Drill for Dartmouth Is Completed.

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 21.—The good news that Gary LeVan would be at a starting backfield post against the Indians of Dartmouth Saturday was bruited about the Princeton campus today as the team drilled on fundamentals and individual assignments for the big game. The squad was in high spirits.

New Haven, Conn.—A dummy scrimmage was the order of the day for Yale, heading for its traditional battle with Harvard. The scrimmage was short but spirited. The team will leave early tomorrow for Cambridge, where it will run on to the Harvard Stadium to hold its last workout on the scene of the big fray.

Cambridge, Mass. — Harvard's starting backfield in the Yale game was still a matter of mystery as Dick Harlow released his charges in the darkness, after a long workout. The Crimson worked out behind locked gates again today, but the news leaked out that passing defense was stressed. The Eli's running attack was demonstrated by the scrubs.

Hanover, N. H.—The Dartmouth Indians entrained for Princeton, N. J., tonight with a varsity team that comprised ten men who had a taste of Princeton power last year, when the Tiger won, 38 to 13. The student body rent the air with stirring battle cries as the team pulled out, after a signal drill in which all of the party of 34 had participated.

Klick, Roth Even.

New York, Nov. 21 (U.P.).—Frankie Klick, of San Francisco, and Al Roth, of New York, are expected to climb into Madison Square Garden ring tomorrow at even money for their ten-round lightweight battle.

Jockey Wright Suspended for Meeting for Fouling at Bowie

Idaho Youth Leads U. S. Riders

Horse Disqualified for Bumping Chatmoss as Roustabout Wins.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

BOWIE RACE TRACK, Nov. 21. Wayne Wright, the little Idaho boy who is leading the Nation's jockeys for 1935, was suspended for the remainder of the Bowie season today for fouling in the stretch. The official ruling of the stewards read, "For carrying out and repeatedly bumping Chatmoss in the stretch." Wright's mount, Weston, which finished second in the race, was disqualified and Chatmoss, the favorite, was moved into second position behind the winner, Roustabout, a C. V. Whitney representative. Ashen, which finished fourth, was awarded third money.

Wright had set the pace on Weston, with Chatmoss moving up to challenge on the outside. Nearing the turn for the stretch, the two horses came on almost even terms but Weston swng wide and bumped Chatmoss toward the fence. From that point to the wire, Johnny Gilbert, Chatmoss' rider, and Wright appeared to lose all interest in winning and the two horses bumped intermittently through the last furlong.

Roustabout Is Winner.

Roustabout, an early trailer, went through on the rail when his rivals swung wide and, with Alfred Robertson riding straight and clear, had no trouble taking the purse. Gilbert and Wright were called before the stewards and, after being questioned, the ruling was announced.

The suspension was a serious blow to Wright's ambition to win the 1935 jockey championship. He has 182 winners to 170 for Joe Wagner and Charley Stevenson. Wright may have to remain "grounded" until the opening of Tropical Park, in Florida, next month.

Roustabout paid a $9.20 mutuel.

The scheduled feature race, the Bladen Handicap, was won by Tweedledee, owned by Mrs. M. Dupont Somerville. The winner is trained by Selby Burch and, as usual, his brother, Preston, had a much-beaten horse in the race in Commonwealth. Tweedledee paid $8.30.

Bread King and Miss Jones teamed to produce a mutuel of $67.30 in the daily double.

Bread King, with Dunbar in the saddle, won by a length in the first race. The son of Wisdom was a favorite at a $6.30 mutuel and took command at the head of the stretch. James Boy, a distant trailer for 3 furlongs, went to the outside entering the stretch and came with a belated rush to take second money from Grace Bunting.

lot of words that got back to his bosses via the grapevine rout. Manager Jimmy Dykes admitted all this and freely predicted that Simmons would be playing for the Tigers next year.

Dykes denied reports the White Sox had asked as much as $100,000 for the "Milwaukee duke," who hasn't had a very happy three years in Chicago. Cochrane praised Simmons, predicted he would make a great comeback, and then departed for Miami, Fla., to confer with Briggs.

With Simmons on the move, the report that Chicago would get Foxx gained wide circulation, but no one would lend any credence to it.

Out of the whirl of rumors and reports, this much was also definitely established:

President Ford Frick of the National League made a hurried departure for New York to aid the Boston Braves financial tangle, which has tied up baseball in Boston for two years. Frick said prospects for a fine settlement were "almost too good to be true."

It was definitely learned that the Giant-Cardinal "mystery" deal was Pitcher Roy Parmelee for Second Baseman Burgess Whitehead.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yanks admitted the discussed deal for Pitcher Mel Harder, of Cleveland, was off.

The White Sox announced that Carl Fischer, the inconsistent left-hander who pitched a one-hit game against Washington last summer, had been released on option to Kansas City. The Sox sold Third Baseman Marty Hopkins to Kansas City outright.

Indians Release Phillips.

Los Angeles purchased First Baseman Don Hurst from Columbus.

Manager Charlie Grimm, of Chicago Cubs, announced he would swap any outfielder except Augie Galan and Frank Demaree for a starting pitcher.

Chicago White Sox closed deal whereby Pitcher Lee Stine, a farm hand at St. Paul, will be sent to Cincinnati for Infielder Joe Morrissey, a Red hand at Toronto, and cash. Morrissey, in turn, will be sold to the Giants.

Sally League was reorganized with six clubs—Jacksonville, Fla.; Savannah, Ga.; Macon, Ga.; Augusta, Ga.; Columbia, S. C., and Columbus, Ga. Dr. J. Wilder, of Augusta, was named temporary president. Circuit will be Class B.

Giants are after Pepper Martin and First Baseman Johnny Mize, from St. Louis Cardinals.

Season's Last Golf Tourney To Rippy

Beats Ficco, 5 and 4, to End Competition on Public Links.

By Dave Herman.

TAPS were sounded on the local public links competitive golf season yesterday as Claude Rippy, District municipal champion, defeated Charlie Ficco, 30-year-old printer, 5 and 4, to win the East Potomac turkey tournament.

His game tuned up to a high pitch of scoring power, Rippy signed off with a brilliant 68, 3 under par, to blast the medalist's hopes for his first important golf victory.

Rippy was an "iron man" yesterday and proved convincingly why he is Washington's ranking municipal golfer. In the morning he shot a 74 to eliminate G. R. Gipe, 2 and 1, in a tough semifinals match.

Premature Finals.

Rippy had planned to play Ficco sometime next week, but he spotted Ficco on the driving range shortly after defeating Gipe, walked over to him, and said in his Tarheel drawl:

"Let's us get this over with, Charlie."

Covering G side in 34, 1 under, Rippy took a 3-hole lead on Ficco, who went out in 37. Then followed a streak of sure-fire driving, approaching and putting. Rippy played the next five holes of F course in 2 under par to end the battle on the fourteenth.

That Rippy's golf was perfect is evidenced by the fact that he was not over par on a single hole. Ficco finished with a 74.

Their cards:

Out—
Rippy.. 4 3 5 3 5 4 3 3 4—34
Ficco .. 5 3 5 4 5 5 3 3 4—37

Ficco.. 4 5 4 4 4 5 3 4 4—37—74

C. Trautner defeated H. A. Peel, 4 and 3, to enter the final of the second flight. He will meet Joe Stoddard. Bill Hefferner defeated James Luttrell, 5 and 4, in the third flight finals.

It will be a busy day at Beaver Dam Country Club Sunday, what with the Brightwood Ex-Caddies Association holding their postponed tournament and entertainment, the Beaver Dam first team playing host to Army and Navy Country Club's first team and the women participating in their annual turkey tournament.

The women's tournament will be held on the outside nine, due to the heavy traffic on the course. Pairings and starting time follow:

First Flight.

10:30—Miss Ellen Kincaid, Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Mrs. C. E. Purdy; 10:35—Mrs. William Labille, Mrs. A. W. Tucker, Mrs. R. E. Zuber, Mrs. N. J. Waldron; 10:40—Mrs. J. J. Mrs. Algie Gardiner, sr., has been elected women's golf chairman at Columbia Country Club. She succeeds Mrs. H. R. Quinter.

An entrance fee of $1.00 is being charged for the turkey tournament at Manor Saturday and Sunday. The proceeds will go to a fund for improvement of the wooded nine at the course.

Mt. Rainier Team Begins State Play

The first round of the State-wide soccer tournament to decide the Western Shore champions brings together Mount Rainier, Prince Georges County titleholders, and Jarretsville, winners in Hartford County, in a game to be played at Jarretsville today at 2:30 p. m.

Coach Arnold said yesterday that every man on the squad was fit for battle except Steve Mier, regular outside forward, bothered with a very painful ankle. Arnold intends to stand pat on the same line-up that carried the team to victory in the county series, except that Latimer Miller replaces Steve Miller.

The starting line-up: Earl Miller, goal; Richard Roland, right fullback; Kenneth Easton, left fullback; James MacGregor, right halfback; George Taylor, center halfback; Lawrence Finn, left halfback; Harry Wynn, right outside; Vernon Todd, right inside; Tillie Scott, center forward; Herbert Reed, left inside, and Latimer Miller left outside.

Capable substitutes to make the trip will be Bartlett Dorr, Paul Fullerton, Harry Miller and George Green.

Local Colored Football Play Attains Semifinals

The semifinal round of the District of Columbia Colored Gridiron Conference will be held on Sunday afternoon at Gonzaga Stadium, it was announced last night. In the upper bracket the Northeast A. C. battles it out with Navy Yard, and in the lower bracket at 1:30 p. m., the Willowtrees, defending champions, clash with the St. Cyprian A. C. immediately thereafter for lower-bracket laurels.

Bowie Race Track, Nov. 21.

Dear Al:

Since the earliest days of horse racing, those connected with the sport have disliked muddy tracks, but, like the weather, nobody ever did anything about it. From California recently came word that a West Coast chemist has found a soil preparation which will, he hopes, eliminate the necessity of horses running in going "a fetlock deep" and jockeys being struck in the face by flying clods. Now it is learned that Frank Brady, treasurer and general manager at Laurel, has been working on a gadget for drying out tracks. Brady thought and thought and then called in engineers, and out of the conference came a sort of "ironing machine." It is an apparatus along the lines of machines seen on our streets softening and removing asphalt. Heated to a high degree, the plan is to drag slowly over the track to remove the moisture from the soil. Most outdoor sports have provided means of keeping playing fields dry, and it is a wonder that racing has made no effort to eliminate the wet track. An invention that would assure a fast track for every racing would end the careers of perhaps a third of the claiming horses now in action, for they cannot do their best on ailing legs unless the course is soft. I might be letting out a secret, but those wonderful red flowers in the Bowie infield are artificial. But it is no secret that Bennings didn't have a winner today.

BILL.

First race—Aura appears to be the logical choice in this field. He has had a lot of education and recent races reveal that a graduation is not far away. He will have Joe Wagner for the saddle work and I see no reason for mistakes. Go Now comes from a stable of fit horses and has both workouts and races to recommend him in this company. Joan D. ran a good race at Pimlico and will be due respect.

Second race—Acautaw won the first race of his career at this track. Showed excellent form here last Saturday while downing a cheaper field, with the greatest of ease. Camino Real, a recent winner, appears to be the one to beat. Singing Heart ran in the deepest going last out and will do better on a fast track.

Third race—Coming Back ran two good races at Pimlico and seems well suited by conditions here. Robertson has been named for the saddle assignment and I expect no mistakes. Worthington begins to figure when the fields become cheap. He is fit and ready. Sambo Brown tired toward the end of a longer race here earlier in the week. Should improve at this route.

Fourth race—Mad Mahdi failed to regain New York form in his Maryland races, but has been working well since being placed in new hands. I'm going to string along. Wee Lad and Ugin will be ready to battle it out if the top horse makes mistakes.

Fifth race—Scotch Bun seems to be a standout here. He has operated in much superior company this fall and only a mishap can beat him. Swamp Angel showed an excellent second effort last out and is dangerous. Saintlite's last was a beaut.

Sixth race—Supreme Court gets in this race with 103 pounds and may do a lot of running for Jockey Horn. Jim John runs for a new owner an dis due to be a threat again. Bye Bye Mary to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Mary's May turned in a good race in her most recent outing and will have to be beaten before this purse goes to another. Silence III is dropping down and figures to be in the pay. Sun Drops, should Wagner ride, might have to be dealt with.

Option on Benning Taken by O'Hara

Narragansett, R. I., track which closed its second year last Saturday has had an average total daily betting of more than $400,000 and has crowds of from 50,000 to 60,000 on Saturdays and holidays.

O'Hara was occompanied to Washington by Architect Mark Linenthal, of Boston, who supervised the making of plans for Narragansett Park, considered the most modern turf plant in the East.

Black Bill Failed.

Although several mild efforts have been made in recent years to legalize horse race betting in the District, the most serious effort was that of last year when the bill introduced by Representative Loring M. Black, jr., of New York, was blocked on the closing day of the Senate. The Black bill was approved by the District Senate Committee, but opposed by the District Commissioners. The measure was passed by the House. During the last-minute rush of legislation in the Senate, Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, asked for consideration of the bill by unanimous consent. It was then that Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, cried, "I object." The objection killed the bill.

The Black bill, opposed by the Federation of Citizens Associations, would have placed control of the sport in the hands of the District Commissioners. The District would have collected a 10 per cent levy on admission and 2 per cent of the betting pools. The power to fix the amount of the purses and the control of their distribution was to have been given the Commissioners.

Horse racing in the area now covered by the District of Columbia is believed to have had its birth in 1769. The track was located in Georgetown and a "May race meeting" is referred to in the history of the District. It consisted of a gathering of a few gentlemen owners of horse. Their events were for all ages and some of the events were at a gruelling 4-mile route. Racing continued in Georgetown until 1798 and although it undoubtedly was popular the exact location of the track is not known.

From Georgetown, a separate city at that time, racing moved to Washington. A track was built over a mile course which included the present site of the State, War and Navy Building and Lafayette Square. The judges' stand was located on F street in the vicinity of Nineteenth street. President John Adams, history says, watched races from the window of the White House. The events were open and betting was a gentlemanly affair. It was before the day of the bookie.

With the abandonment of this track, racing moved to upper Northwest early in the nineteenth century. The track was located on the Halmead Farm and reached from Tenth street to Sixteenth street over what is now Columbia road. Racing at this track ended with the coming of the War of 1812.

In 1822, the sport of kings again flourished in the District and Congress and Government bureaus declared holidays on stake days probably at the same North Washington location. Later tracks were built on East Capitol street between Fifth and Eleventh streets, Brightwood, Anacostia and on Massachusetts avenue between Fourteenth and Sixteenth streets northwest.

In 1870 the racing scene shifted to Ivy City and 50,000 people are said to have witnessed one program there. This track gave way to Benning in May, 1890, which was operated by the Washington Jockey Club with August Belmont and Col. W. P. Thompson as the guiding hands. It became a society center of the Capital. Racing ended there on April 12, 1908.

Title Defense Is Begun by G. W. High

Fredericksburg Eleven Is Champs' First Foe in North Va. Series.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Nov. 21.—George Washington High School finished preparations today for their invasion of Fredericksburg tomorrow, where they will engage Fredericksburg High School in the first game in the defense of their championship of Northern Virginia.

This afternoon's practice consisted of a signal drill and light exercises, Coach Given taking no chances on injuries upsetting his regular line-up. The local eleven will be out after their seventh straight win tomorrow, and their ninth in ten starts. The lone smirch on their otherwise perfect record is a loss to the powerful Massanutten Military Academy.

Their last time out, the Fredericksburg team overwhelmed Warrenton High by a 40-to-0 score. The chief cog in their offense is Bud Fenlon, flashy field general, whose unerring passes have been responsible for the majority of the Fredericksburg scores this season.

The George Washington team will step out in their new uniforms of blue and gold, the recently adopted school colors. The bulk of offense will be divided among Paul Shu and Lee Fones, two fine backs who are being boosted for all State recognition.

The Old Dominion Boat Club Basket Ball Team wishes to cancel a scheduled game with the Washington Marines on Friday night. If the manager of the Marines will call Jake Mendleson at Alexandria 1303, between 6 and 7 p. m., a game for later in the seson can be arranged.

The Columbia Fire Department basketballers have two games listed in as many days. Friday they tackle the post team at Fort Myer, while Saturday they travel to Fort Belvoir, where they will play the Company A unit.

The Alexandria sports world lost a prominent figure here today with the death of Albert Dreyfus. Mr. Dreyfus was at one time an officer in the Dreadnaught Athletic Club and has always been prominent in local athletic activities.

The Post's Consensus at Bowie

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE interhigh series signs off today with all the healthy gusto annually furnished by a football game between Tech and Eastern. The two rival schools of the Northeast section will be scrapping for second place in the series standings when they meet at Central Stadium, and there is every reason to believe that it will be a rough-and-ready engagement which escorts this 1935 series into the time-honored inter-high records.

It was Eastern and Tech last year who fought to a memorable 0-to-0 tie when the Lincoln Parkers sprang a surprise by holding the rampaging ball carriers of Tech's inter-high champs without a score. An equally stubborn fight is due to get underway at the 3:15 p. m. kick-off today.

Crimmins Is Leader.

On the strength of their records, there is no favorite. On the strength of the power-house drive of Francis (Stonecrusher) Crimmins, Tech's big fullback, there is a favorite, however, and the favorite is Tech. The chief problem concerning Eastern today is to stop Crimmins. In fact, the Eastern camp has been more or less preparing with the idea that if it can stop Crimmins, it will stop Tech.

From a pro-Eastern standpoint, on the other hand, Coach Artie Boyd has in his possession the only backfield man who has crossed the Central goal line in the series. Jack Shugrue, the former ineligible individual, alone cleat-marked the Central end zone when he raced 82 yards for the most spectacular score of the series. Hence, it is highly possible that Tech vs. Eastern will simmer down to Crimmins vs. Shugrue.

Eastern Line Best.

Eastern enters the game with a line undoubtedly superior to the best Coach Hardell of Tech will be able to muster. Eastern enters the game, furthermore, with the best pair of ends in the series in Bob Brand and Allan Miller, and it is around the ends as well as off tackles that the Tech power plays or reverses are generally aimed.

In Earl Fox and Sid Cohen, Eastern has a couple of tackles who fortify the inside-end area formidably, and Coach Boyd also is lacking neither in capable guards in Bernie Herman, Jake Madeoy or Capossella or Billy Kemp.
John Gass, nor in centers in Len

Stanley Wells, the fast-traveling Tech ball carrier, adds spark to the punch furnished by Crimmins, and his passing looms on a par with that of Shugrue. It will be a rousing tussle, at any rate—a game virtually certain to feature smashing line play, headlong passing and some thrill-packed runs.

O'Donnell's, Marvin's, Congress Heights Win

Three basketball games were played last night in the Southeast Community Center League, at Hine Junior High School. The Northeast Business Men lost a double-header when they were defeated by O'Donnell's Restaurant, 23 to 22, and Congress Heights A. C., 49 to 24.

Marvin Methodists won from Sigma Mu Sigma, 39 to 30.

O'Donnell's nosed out the Northeasterners in the last few minutes of play through the efforts of Dave Junian, who tossed in three field goals in rapid succession. The combination of "Big Six" Timmons and Mike Sugrue was too much for them in their second game. Roman for the Marvin's was their high-point man with a total of 17.

G. W. Freshmen Face Terror Cubs Today

For the first time since 1931 a George Washington University freshman eleven will appear here in competition when the Colonial Yearlings meet Western Maryland's Cubs today at 2 p. m. on Gridiron No. 2 in West Potomac Park.

Coach Jean Sexton will start the same team that defeated Carney's Point (N. J.) Y. M. C. A. last Saturday, 28 to 0—namely, Innes and Berry, ends; Collins and Grbovaz, tackles; Czech and Renzaglia, guards; Benenson, center; Stamus, quarterback; Sampson and Faris, halfbacks, and Boring, fullback.

Post Staff Photo.

Ryan gymnasium at Georgetown University last night was the scene of a noisy rally as Coach Jack Hagerty, the Rev. John Kehoe, S. J., faculty moderator of athletics, and the Rev. Vincent J. McDonough, S. J., prefect of discipline, addressed the students in a show of confidence in the varsity team which takes the field against Maryland tomorrow.

Star Bowlers Vie in Dixie Tourney

THE Capital will see the Nation's leading duckpin event this week-end with the opening of the fifth annual Dixie Sweepstakes tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the Convention Hall Alleys. The classic will attract more than 60 bowlers—from Atlanta Ga., to Willimantic, Conn.—and calls for 15 games in five sets, and will be held at three different duckpin establishments. The second block will be rolled at the Arcadia Alleys at 3 p. m., and the final five games at Lucky Strike at 7:30 p. m.

Hostilities will be suspended in the Southern Intercity Duckpin League, so that practically all its roster of star bowlers can compete. Nick Tronsky, ace bowler of the country last year, will lead the famous Blue Ribbon five of Connecticut in an effort to cop the Dixie for the first time. Other Nutmeg stars who will support Tronsky in an effort to bring the title North are Jack White, Mike Bogino, Bill Tato, Joe Gacek and possibly Carl Frisk. All have made numerous appearances in this city, and local fans are familiar with their exploits.

Two From Philly.

Philadelphia, which has never been represented in any duckpin event in Washington, will have two capable entrants in Richard Collins and Francis Carrigan. Lou Dewey's Connecticut Yankees, of Bridgeport, Conn., will be ably represented by "Doc" Williams, Bozo Dente, Gus Kimberley, Ben Kosky, Joe LaMastra, Jimmie Sheridan and Tony Iannarone. Atlanta has two entries in Al Liebler, 18-year-old sensation, and Howard "Strikes" Parker.

Washington, Baltimore, Richmond, Annapolis and Norfolk should contribute about 50 bowlers. Twenty from the first two cities have already entered.

George L. Isemann, N. D. P. B. C. secretary, will receive entries up to starting time. The entry fee is $25.

Bill Arnold, of Annapolis, is the defending champion, winning the event last season with a total pinfall of 1,907. Astor Clarke holds the record for the Dixie, winning in 1933 with 2,001.

48 Mount Rainier Courtmen Report

Mount Rainier High School held its first practice session in basketball yesterday with 48 candidates reporting to Coach Perry Wilkinson. The Mounts were champions of the county last year and reached the finals for the Western Shore title before being eliminated by the strong Pennsylvania Avenue team, of Cumberland, Md.

Of ten men awarded letters in basketball last year, nine have returned to take up duties in their old positions. Four were first stringers. Jimmie Glyn, star forward and long-shot artist, was the only member lost by graduation.

The veterans returning are: Tillie Scott, guard; Earl Miller, guard; Steve Miller, forward; Jimmie MacGregor, center; Steve Ager, center; Vernon Todd, forward; Leo Baldwin, forward; George Taylor, guard, and Richard Roland, guard.

Other boys trying for first-team positions are Bartlett Dorr, Latimer Miller, Edgar Shinn, Paul Fullerton, all forwards; Harry Miller, Lawrence Finn, Herbert Reed and Kenneth Easton, all guards.

Feminine Bike Rider Cajoles Press Into Disastrous Race

By George Considine.

HER name is Marjorie Ward. She's small and feminine. She's the champion bicycle rider of the Dominion of Canada. And she's in Washington to compete in the 6-mile Women's International Race of the National Capital Bicycle Sweepstakes, which will be held day after tomorrow on the Ellipse roadway.

Miss Ward and her sister, Joan, were on hand yesterday at the polo oval to instruct embryonic pedal-pushers in the science of cycling and, needless to say, the press was copiously represented. As a matter of fact the press was so copiously represented that the poor embryonic pedal-pushers had to be contented just to overhear their instruction.

Well, anyway, Miss Marjorie was very tactful about the whole thing. Evidently seeking relief from the barrage of fool questions that the press was hurling in her direction, she wearily raised a hand and suggested a race by the inquisitive ink-stained wretches. It was to be once around the oval, a distance of nine-tenths of a mile.

Gus Romm, local bike rental impresario, offered the required number of bikes and everything was in readiness except the gentlemen of the Fourth Estate. There, it developed, was a real problem. One had to get back to the office. Another was wearing his Sunday suit. Another hadn't ridden a bike since goshknowswhen. Another needed a month or three to get in shape. Still another never heard of a bike race.

But, somehow, Miss Marjorie wheedled the boys into trying. And so, amid wagers and squawks they took their places. The signal was given and the entire field was left at the post. After a deal of chin-jutting, they were away in a flurry of velocipedes.

Half an hour later a lone, breathless, starry-eyed gent walked his bike across the finish line. The Canadian champion stifled a snicker and asked the survivor if he were going to enter the 62½-mile Pre-Olympic race next Sunday. A pair of very tired legs buckled at the knees and their breathless, starry-eyed owner joined the oblivion of his prostrate colleagues.

'Y' Swimmers Travel.

The Y. M. C. A. junior swimming team will meet the Baltimore Y. M. C. A. junior team Saturday evening in Baltimore. It will be the first meet for both teams. The Washington team will be selected from Richard Baker, Emett Brown, Robert Burruss, Bruce Etchison, Roy Gibson, Eddie Griffin, Kenneth Kinsella, Chris Mullady, Edgar Sheppard, Robert Gooding, Ralph Metera and Jack Frost.

Hold Water Carnival.

The preps swimming class of the Y. M. C. A. will hold a water carnival for boys from 9 to 11 years of age tomorrow, from 10 to 11 a. m., in the boys pool.

Va. Foes Today For Central, Western

Today's High and Prep School Games.
Tech vs. Eastern, at Central Stadium (3:15 p. m.).
Western vs. Washington-Lee High, at Western Stadium (3:15 p. m.).
Central vs. Petersburg High, at Petersburg, Va.
Landon vs. Friends, at Friends Field (3:15 p. m.).
George Washington High vs. Fredericksburg High, at Fredericksburg.

CENTRAL HIGH and Western today face powerful Virginia opponents as Tech High and Eastern square off at Central Stadium. Central's interhigh championship squad left at 5 p. m. by bus last night for Petersburg, Va., where the Mount Pleasanters will face the strong Petersburgh eleven, now occupying fourth place in the Virginia State High School League.

Western will meet Washington-Lee High's top-ranking team at Western Stadium at 3:30 p. m. in a game in which the Little Generals will be heavily favored to win.

Store League Banquets.

The fourth annual banquet of the Department Store Baseball League is to be held tomorrow at the Harrington Hotel at 7:30 p. m.

Keep Out Reds, Quinn Tells Eastern

Hearers Laugh, Applaud After Speech at Annual Football Banquet.

KEEP Communism out of football! The game must be kept clean! Down with all red-jerseyed football players!

Such, in effect, was the ringing message flung to some 200 tense hearers by Henry I. Quinn, prominent member of the Board of Education, at the annual Eastern High football banquet last night.

Of course, what Mr. Quinn said was all in fun and his hearers laughed and applauded as the present hue-and-cry anent Communism in the local public schools was cleverly satirized by the popular Board of Education member, who was among those to vote against the teaching of communism in the schools here.

Quinn's brief but well-timed remarks were the highlight of the banquet, attended by numerous school officials as well as coaches and players. Other speakers were Birch E. Bayh, head of the physical education system, and Jack Faber, University of Maryland football coach. Faber forecast impending restriction of the lateral pass, which, he declared, is detracting from the quality of the game.

Quinn's remarks went over with a smash—and a laugh.

"Now, I don't want any Tech or Eastern player tomorrow to come out there either wearing or waving a red jersey," he warned. "I don't know but what somebody would hang you. I've been hearing so much about communism lately that I'm beginning to get suspicious of anything with red in it."

The banquet was another tribute to Eastern's perennial hospitality. Principal Charles Hart again was toastmaster. Bayh expressed pleasure at the manner in which the series had been carried off this year. Capt. Bill Shelton of Western, Capt. Gil Sheroth and Coach Hap Hardell of Tech and Co-Captains Spiro Kolius and Francis Beamer and Coach Lynn Woodworth of Roosevelt were among the guests. The entire Eastern squad and Coach Altie Boyd, Coach Charlie Guyon and former Assistant Principal John Paul Collins also attended.

Holy Cross Wins.

Holy Cross Academy took the lead in the Catholic Girls School Basketball League yesterday by defeating St. Paul's, 46 to 10, on the Holy Cross court. Holy Cross defeated St. Patrick's last week. Betty Kline, Margaret Viehman, Shirley Moran and Eleanor Daly were among those starring for the winners.

Both Terps, Hoyas Seem Sure Things

Rival leaders of the Georgetown and Maryland football teams expect their hardest game of the season tomorrow when the two clash at Griffith Stadium, with each side confidently predicting victory.

Co-Captains Joe Meglen and Wally Herron, Georgetown, were unanimous in the opinion that Maryland "will know it's been in a football game, and I guess we will, too, for that matter. But, make no mistake—Georgetown's going to win."

Maryland's field captain is not elected until just before the game, but Lou Ennis, who led the team against Indiana, felt certain that "Maryland will win by at least one touchdown.

Charley Ellinger decided that "we whipped 'em last year and we can do it again," while Coleman Headley figured "Georgetown may be good, but we're better."

Turkey Shoot Planned.

A turkey shoot will be held by the Young Men's Democratic Club of the Twenty-first Election District of Prince Georges County, Md., tomorrow afternoon at the Dude Ranch, near Berwyn.

Sun Radio Booters Play Mitchell Bros.

Tomorrow the junior Sport Center players line up as follows: Georgetown at Rosedale, McMillan at Raymond, Burroughs at Sherwood "B," and Park View plays Sherwood "A" at McMillan. This last-named game brings together the pair of clubs now tied for the lead.

On Sunday, three attractive clashes are featured under Recreation League auspices. Littoria meets the fast young Silver Spring eleven, at 1 o'clock at Rosedale, and at 2:45 Mitchell Brothers opposes Sun Radio. Sabaudia and Occoquan meet at McMillan playground at 2:30 p. m.

Gold, Reserves Continue Rise To New Peaks

Total Gold 9.8 Billions, With Bank Balances at 5.7 Billions.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve member bank report yesterday disclosed that the recent heavy inflow of gold was resumed during the week ending November 20. A gain of $57,000,000 during the week, raising the total to $9,804,000,000, was reported. This level, the highest reached, is $1,728,000,000 in excess of the total at this time last year.

As a result of this gold movement, member banks reserve balances recorded a corresponding high of $5,782,000,000, a figure the board estimated to be $3,070,000,000 in excess of legal requirements. The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended November 20, as reported by the Federal Reserve Banks, was $2,491,000,000, an increase of $7,000,000, compared with the preceding week, and of $14,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

"On November 20 total reserve bank credit amounted to $2,471,000,000, a decrease of $21,000,000 for the week. This decrease corresponds with a decrease of $7,000,000 in money in circulation and increases of $57,000,000 in monetary gold stock and $10,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency, offset in part by an increase of $36,000,000 in member bank reserve balances, $7,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve Banks and $9,000,000 in non-member deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Member bank reserve balances on November 20 were estimated to be approximately $3,070,000,000 in excess of legal requirements."

$100,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for two series of Treasury bills to the aggregate amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts. One series will be 110-day bills and the other series will be 273-day bills. Both series will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or branches up to 2 p. m. on Monday, November 25. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

December Cotton At New High Level

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 21.—Cotton showed increased activity today, with near months leading a further advance which carried December up to 12.08, or 16 points net higher. This established the highest price reached by that position since last March, but there was some recession near the close. The market ended steady at net advances of 6 to 10 points.

Bank of France Ups Rate Again To Retain Gold

Rise to 5 Per Cent Follows Week's Loss of About $61,500,000.

Paris, Nov. 21.—The Bank of France raised its discount rate again today, changing it from 4 per cent to 5 per cent. It was the second increase in a week. The action was taken in a renewed effort to halt the outward flow of gold before it threatens the stability of the franc.

The rate for advances on securities was raised from 5 to 6 per cent and on 30-day advances from 4 to 5 per cent.

Fears of the eventual devaluation of the franc continued to find expression in the press with financial sources pointing to a drop in the value of government bonds on the bourse, the difficulty of borrowing money, and bad business as signs of fear.

Political Factors.

Technically, financiers pointed out, the franc is sound. They attributed the flight of gold from France to uneasiness over political animosities and budgetary uncertainty at the re-opening of parliament.

It appeared that speculators were staying out of the foreign exchange market since they "burned their fingers" in a futile attack on the franc last spring.

In its statement today, the Bank of France reports withdrawals 933,000,000 francs in gold (about $61,500,000) during the week ending November 15. The franc was valued on the New York market yesterday at 6.5875 cents.

This brings the gold withdrawals for three weeks to 1,768,000,000 francs with the outflow continuing at a heavy rate. The gold reserve on November 15 was 70,389,000,000 francs, providing a 73.82 per cent coverage on bank notes.

Gold Currencies Drop; Sterling Advances.

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Fresh concern over the immediate financial and political outlook in France led to the most pronounced weakness in gold currencies since last summer, both in New York and European exchange centers today.

The French franc dropped .00½ of a cent in New York to 6.58¼ cents, well under the level at which it is profitable to ship gold from France, but the loss was recovered before the close. Holland guilders yielded .41 of a cent at 67.48 cents, a figure at which gold also can be purchased in Amsterdam and transported to New York profitably.

The British pound sterling, meanwhile, was enjoying considerable popularity as a medium into which gold currencies were being converted on a large scale.

The Market By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Rails and Metals Lead New Advance; Wheat Jumps; Gold Currencies Fall.

New York, Nov. 21.—Financial markets looked better in most sectors. Stocks shook off their irregularity and moved moderately higher in a turnover of a little over 3,000,000 shares, more than half a million less than yesterday. Francs and the gold currencies had a bad time, as capital began to leave on fears of devaluation, but sterling was higher. December wheat closed 2½ cents higher at 99¼ cents a bushel.

Railroad shares were among the best of the list. Central set the pace, which was followed by the Northerns, Chesapeake, Santa Fe, and Union Pacific. Some of the lower-priced rails gained from 10 to 40 per cent in value. Motors improved, and the accessory group turned buoyant, rising 1 to 3 points. Homestake climbed rapidly on its $20 extra dividend, and other golds were firm. Copper rose with other metal and mining shares.

Telephone added to its previous best price. Radio held firm. Packing company shares were strong, the Wilsons going to new high levels on large trading. Connecticut Railway common and preferred rose 2 points. Southern Railway, Mobile & Ohio dropped more than 3 points. General Electric was quiet, at a yield of around 2 per cent. Directors are scheduled to meet tomorrow.

Losing Gold.

Since the Italian government has taken over all gold in the country and since the Bank of Italy no longer publishes a statement, no one knows how devastating have been the recent drains on the Italian gold supply, which virtually means the purchasing power of the country, for only spot cash, gold, is now able to do much for Italy. Sanctions will make the accumulation of foreign exchange more difficult, but at the same time it may tend to slacken the pace of the outrunning gold, if for no other reason because goods simply won't be for sale. As a counter to that, smuggling activities may be carried on at price levels, which will means as much outlay as before, but for less goods.

Meanwhile the drain on French gold continues. This week's statement of the Bank of France shows a fall of 933,000,000 francs in gold and also a considerable drop in circulation. The Bank of France is acting energetically along classical central banking lines to stop the loss and today put up the bank discount rate again, this time from 4 to 5 per cent. A further increase is likely. Whether the higher rates prove efficacious, they, at least, give notice that France is making an effort to stay on gold, which may offset the advertisement the higher rates give of the difficulty of the position. Bank of England gained some more gold and its reserve ratio rose with a drop in circulation.

Unfavorable Balance of Trade.

On the business side, in addition to higher dividend payments, the foreign trade news was encouraging. The fly in the ointment naturally is the uncertainty over the Government's stand on shipments of cotton, oil, copper and other goods that may go eventually to Italy. It is difficult to see how the Government can stop the trade, short of a new embargo law, but clearly the Administration dislikes the considerable rise in such exports. They doubtless accounted for the sharp gains in October exports, which were $23,000,000 over the preceding month and $14,800,000 higher than for the same month of a year ago.

Advice.

Members of the advisory council of the Federal Reserve Board were reported discussing excess reserves at their meeting with members of the board today. It was also reported that the council was preparing recommendations on the subject in which the board is much interested at the moment, may have a more sympathetic attention than did the recommendations formulated after another meeting of the council in September, 1934. Those recommendations included a return to the gold standard, budget balancing and an end of inflationary schemes. The board refused to receive them and told the council they dealt with matters which were none of its business. The council, under the law, could make recommendations upon any topic it pleased. Probably this will be the last meeting of a body whose conscientious conception of its duties in recent years has not been appreciated.

New York Central.

Although some investors would like to see a larger clearing ahead for New York Central, the road is making progress. Settlement announced today of the controversy which Chairman Jones has tried to keep alive over the bank and RFC loans to the road had a good effect on the market. Strictly from a financial standpoint, the new agreement appears to be somewhat of a draw as against the bankers and the RFC, and the road is ahead in that it will not be obliged to sell bonds at an inconvenient time or to see its loans called when it is unable to pay them all. By discharging a portion of the RFC indebtedness, Central secured a good extension of the remainder. Doubtless the banks which still hold Central's short notes were willing to see the RFC come first on repayment in order to stop the fortnightly dictation and threats.

Puts and Calls.

The put-and-call market does not indicate any great fear of a bad break in prices within the next month or so. Puts still are obtainable near the market in many active stocks. Chrysler is 5½ points away for a put and 7 for a call. General Electric is quoted 1 point away on both sides. Steel is 2 down and 3½ up. Telephone is 6 and 9. Radiator is a half down and 1 up. Smelters is 3½ and 5. U. S. Steel is 2 for a put and 3½ for a call, which is the same as the put-and-call market for General Motors, and fair enough for ordinary protection of long or short accounts, but not a great temptation to additional speculation.

Clearings Gain Here Exceeds Average in U. S.

32.5% for Washington Compares With 21.7% in 22 Cities.

The Washington Clearing House reports a volume of $20,648,599.94 bank clearings for the week ended November 20. This is an increase of $1,735,043.39 or 9.17 per cent over the previous week and a gain of $5,073,277.13 or 32.5 per cent over the same period last year.

The total for the 22 leading cities in the United States for the week ended Wednesday, November 20, as reported to the Associated Press by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $5,576,438,000, against $4,584,949,000 a year ago, an increase of 21.7 per cent. For the preceding week, the advance was 23.1 per cent.

At New York City, clearings were $3,407,508,000, an increase of 21.3 per cent over the amount reported last year, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York City of $2,168,930,000 was 22.2 per cent higher.

Clearings were very much larger at every city reporting than they were at the same time last year. The increase was especially heavy at some of the outside centers. The total for the week was in excess of that for the preceding week this year by $835,363,000, while for the same two weeks a year ago, the increase amounted to $724,673,000.

Gain a 4-year Peak.

Not since October, 1931, have aggregate clearings for the 21 leading cities in the United States, outside of New York City has been as large as they were for the past week, the increase at this time being particularly heavy at Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Chicago, Detroit, Louisville, Omaha, Kansas City, Dallas, San Francisco, Seattle and Portland.

Dividends Raised By 3 Corporations

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Directors of the National Lead Co. today declared an extra dividend of $1 per share on the common stock together with the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 per share. The regular quarterly distribution of $1.50 a share on the class B preferred stock also was declared. Directors of Chesebrough Manufacturing Co. declared an extra dividend of $1 per share and the regular quarterly dividend of $1 on the capital stock. In Chicago, directors of the International Harvester Co. raised its regular quarterly dividend rate from 15 to 30 cents a share on the common stock.

Bankers Present Middle West Plan

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—Reorganization of the Middle West Utilities Co., giant holding concern of the Insull system, appeared assured today when bankers presented a modified plan suggested by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

Walter A. Shaw, utility expert representing the court, recommended approval and the judge set November 26 for arguments. For each 100 shares, common stockholders under the plan would receive one share in a new company, plus a warrant for purchase of one more share, at $8 the first year, $9 the second and $10 the third. Preferred stockholders would get one share of new stock for each four of the old, plus one warrant.

SEC 1935 Releases Total 1.5 Billions

Securities released for sale under the securities act during October totaled $406,086,507 as compared with $319,874,100 in September, bringing the aggregate of effective statements in 1935 through October 31, to $1,510,497,680. Sixty-five per cent of the October registrations were composed of secured bonds and debentures registered for refunding purposes, over 20 per cent were certificates of participation, beneficial interests, etc., mainly of investment trusts, and almost 14 per cent were for various stock issues.

Of the estimated net proceeds, 69 per cent are proposed to be used for the repayment of indebtedness.

Earl Bailie Heads Blue Ridge Corp.

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—A new board of directors for the Blue Ridge Corporation, announced today, lists Earle Bailie, Waddill Catchings, C. M. Finney, J. Russell Forgan, George Murnane and Francis F. Randolph.

Bailie, a partner in the banking firm of J. & W. Seligman & Co., will act temporarily as president. Control of the corporation, an investment trust, was obtained jointly last week by interests connected with Harrison Williams, Field, Glore & Co. and the Seligman firm.

Con. Gas. of N.Y. Defies Holding Company Act

Argentine Heat Drives Wheat 3 Cents Higher

Sharp Upturns Abroad Precede Advance in Chicago Pit.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—Soaring swiftly today near the closing hour wheat values gained almost 3 cents a bushel. Fears that extreme high temperatures threatening in Argentina would cause worse damage to crops already at a precarious stage did much to stimulate broadened speculative buying of wheat futures. Higher prices were also promoted through evidence of improved domestic milling demand for red winter wheat both here and at Kansas City.

Wheat in Chicago closed strong, 1½-2⅝ above yesterday's finish. December, 99¼-99⅜. Corn ⅛ off to ¼ up; December, 60⅜-60⅝. Oats unchanged to ¼ higher, and provisions at a rise of 10 to 20 cents.

Vigorous upward swings of foreign wheat markets pereceded the upturns here. Liverpool reported a scarcity of sellers abroad, with Argentine shipments curtailed and better call for Canadian and Australian wheat. Argentine wheat exports this week were estimated as totaling only 1,176,000 bushels against 3,824,000 the corresponding time last year.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Trading was quiet on the stock exchange yesterday, operators being occupied with week-end settlements. Far Eastern bonds, gilt-edged securities and oils were firmer. Speculative issues were unsettled on continental selling and transatlantic shares eased on Wall street news. The closing was irregular.

Paris—Quotations on the bourse turned irregular yesterday under the influence of Wednesday's weakness in Wall street and the raising of the discount rate by the Bank of France. Rentes slumped, while international issues held generally firm. The market closed irregular.

Berlin—The bourse opened dull but low prices caused traders to come into the market, which closed sustained.

Bank of France.

Paris, Nov. 21 (AP).—The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes in francs: Gold, decreased 933,000,000; sight balances abroad, unchanged; bills discounted at home, increased 279,000,000; bills bought abroad, unchanged; advances, decreased 14,000,000; circulation, decreased 664,000,000; current accounts, increased 157,000,000; 30-day loans on government collateral, increased 40,000,000. Rate of discount, 5 per cent.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Foreign exchange markets were featured yesterday by a sharp drop in French francs. The decline followed another boost in the discount rate of the Bank of France from 4 to 5 per cent. It was also disclosed that the French Bank lost 933,000,000 francs in gold in the week ended November 14.

The franc lost .00⅝ of a cent at 6.58⅝ cents in New York dealings, which was the lowest since October 4, last. In Paris the dollar closed higher at 6.583 cents to the franc.

Guilders and Swiss francs, in New York, were heavy apparently in sympathy with the French currency. Guilders were off .34 of a cent at 67.55 cents, and Swiss funds were down .05 of a cent at 16.91½ cents.

Sterling rallied a cent in the American market to $4.93¼. At London the dollar ended at 4.92 5-16 to the pound.

Louis Eckstein, Opera Sponsor, Is Dead at 70

Publisher and Merchant Devoted Large Portion of Fortune to Fine Arts.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—Death today claimed Louis Eckstein, 70, a director of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, and for more than 20 years the principal patron of summer opera at Ravinia, near here.

He died of pneumonia in his hotel apartment. With him at the time of his death was his wife, Mrs. Elsie Snydacker Eskstein.

Eckstein spent a substantial part of his fortune sponsoring the "Opera House of the Woods," to which he brought world-famous voices. His friends estimated his contributions to the Ravinia opera totaled $1,000,000.

For many years he was director of the enterprise, personally casting the performances, the last of which was held in 1931. The previous year he met $139,107 of the deficit incurred in furnishing Chicagoans fine music.

Born in Milwaukee, Wis., in 1865, Eckstein worked his way up from messenger boy for the Wisconsin Central Railroad to general passenger agent.

In 1904, after he had resigned and come to Chicago, he entered the publishing business and introduced the Red Book, Blue Book and Green Book magazines. He was credited with encouraging Rupert Hughes, Peter B. Kyne, James Oliver Curwood and other writers in their early days.

In 1929 he sold the Red Book and Blue Book to McCall's Corporation. Publication of the Green Book had been discontinued earlier.

Until his death he retained the presidency of a company dealing in real estate.

Eckstein was a director of the Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. and the Emporium-World Millinery Co. He was decorated twice by the King of Italy, first in 1928 as a chevalier of the Order of the Italian Crown and again two years later as a commendatore of the same order. His election as a director of Metropolitan came in 1932.

Private funeral services will be held here Friday.

Gen. Dimmick Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Full Military Honors to Mark Burial Service of Veteran Officer.

Funeral services for Brig. Gen. Eugene D. Dimmick, U. S. A., retired, who died Saturday at his home in Palo Alto, Calif., will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow from the Fort Myer Gate of Arlington National Cemetery. He will be buried with full military honors in the southern section of the cemetery. Chaplain Ralph C. Deibert will conduct the services.

The following will be honorary pallbearers: Brig. Gen. David L. Brainard, retired; Commander T. G. Dewey, U. S. N., retired; Col. Charles W. Taylor, retired; Lieut. Col. George J. Newgarden, retired; Maj. Loveland and Capt. Robert G. Carter, retired.

Gen. Dimmick was born in Athens, N. Y., July 31, 1840, and served as an enlisted man in the first year of the Civil War. He was made a lieutenant and then captain before the struggle ended. Entering the regular Army in 1867, as a second lieutenant, he served through the various grades to colonel. He was promoted to brigadier general, retired, after his retirement on March 2, 1903. His decorations included the Silver Star "for gallantry against the Spanish forces at Santiago, Cuba, July 1, 1898."

Gen. Dimmick is survived by his daughter, Miss Estelle Dimmick, of Palo Alto.

A. B. Dinwiddie Is Dead at 64

Heart Disease Is Fatal to Outstanding Figure in Southern Education.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 21.—Albert Bledsoe Dinwiddie, 64, president of Tulane University since 1918, died today of a heart ailment.

He had been associated with the university since 1906, first as assistant professor of astronomy and applied mathematics.

The serene, snowy-haired "Prexy" was an outstanding figure in Southern education. In his administration, Tulane's enrollment grew from 1,789 to 3,133 students, the faculty and staff from 329 to 511 and receipts from $417,699 to $1,021,374.

Tulane is best known for its school of medicine and it football teams. It survived the malice of the late Huey P. Long and a Carnegie investigation into the subsidizing of athletes.

Dr. Dinwiddie remained active until the close of the last school term, which was Tulane's centennial. He planned to retire at the end of the 1935-36 term. Dr. Douglas Anderson, dean of the College of Engineering, was named acting president when Dr. Dinwiddie's health failed.

He was reared in Lexington, Ky., and educated at the University of Virginia. A wife and five children survive.

BUICK'S THE BUY and HORNER'S
the place to buy it
We have in our used car stock 36 Buicks, all traded on the 1936 Buick. All reconditioned according to the high standard demanded by Stanley H. Horner, they represent big values at bargain prices.

TYPICAL VALUES

BUICK 1935 "46s" Coupe. Beautiful deep rich black finish. This is the "sport" model with rumble seat and trunk rack. Actual mileage 2,400 miles. A one-word description of this car is "NEW." It's not even well broken in, but you can save plenty at a full price of $795.

BUICK 1934 "46s" Coupe. This is the sport model with rumble seat. Not a mark on its pale-green finish, perfect chrome, dual horns, practically new tires, spotless interior, mechanically guaranteed. Full price, $695.

BUICK 1933 De Luxe Sedan. Original black finish like new; 6 wire wheels, fender wells, metal wheel covers, all new tires, trunk rack, extra-heavy whipcord upholstery, dual horns, parking lights. A spotless car with exceptionally low mileage. Unusual value at the price, $645.

BUICK 1932 "57" Sedan. You will think it has new finish, but this car has had so little use that its original black finish shines like new. Equipped with ride control and other extras, this car, driven by one owner, is as clean as any 1934 car in our stock. For a full price of only $445 this is the most outstanding value in our entire stock.

BUICK 1932 "58" Victoria. This is the 5-pass. model with built-in luggage compartment. Perfect black finish, maroon pin stripe, perfect chrome, all new tires, relined brakes, mechanically it gives new-car performance. See this very clean car before you buy. $425.

BUICK 1931 "87" De Luxe Sedan. It's a '31, but if age was based on mileage this car would be listed as a '34 De Luxe equipped, 6 wire wheels, fender wells, trunk rack, spotless black finish, even the upholstery shows hardly any wear. Big value for little money. $365.

Mrs. Otto to Address Rector's Aid Society

Using a model of the Hebrew Tabernacle erected in 1220 B. C. at the foot of Mt. Sinai to illustrate her lecture, Mrs. Annie Carpenter Otto, Bible student and research worker, will address members and friends of the Rector's Aid Society of St. Thomas Episcopal Church, Eighteenth and Church streets northwest, at 3 p. m. today.

Mrs. Otto is niece of the late Adda Carpenter Ulen of Laramie, Wyo., who built the model several years ago. In recent years the lecturer has taken it before church groups and theological schools throughout the country for lectures upon its construction and symbolison.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Characters.

New York, Nov. 21.

MOST vivid of the Broadway residents are some of the characters who enliven the stem, give it tone and color and warmth . . . If it weren't for them, Broadway would just be a collection of paving blocks and mazdas; they clothe the alley in flesh and blood . . . For instance, there's Red Nose Whitey and Mother MacFadden and Cheesecake Ike . . . there's Swifty Morgan and Broadway Sam, Cockeye Beck, Commodore Dutch and Louie the Louse . . . there's Dollar John and big Dick Butler, Two Per Cent Sam and the Sunny Faced Kid . . . Sir Joseph Ginsberg, Prince Mike Romanoff and the Count give the street a touch of jovial royalty . . . some of the nicknames interpret themselves . . . Dollar John, once wealthy, got his by giving away dollar bills to stemmers in the days of his effulgence . . . Mother MacFadden, who now rents out a private car in front of the Hotel Pennsylvania, got his by mothering Vincent Lopez when he chauffeured for him . . . Commodore Dutch is a snaggle-toothed admiral without a navy, and once a year his friends attend the annual Commodore Dutch ball, which stakes him for the ensuing year . . . Two Per Cent Sam won his sobriquet by his betting system . . . he bets for and against, laying off one against the other so that he always is sure of a 2 per cent profit.

* * * *

Cheesecake Ike undoubtedly has eaten more cheesecake in Lindy's than any five New Yorkers . . . Peer into the booth here he sits and you will see him topping off each meal with a slice of the cake employed in his christening . . . Dick Butler is the bulky West Sider who smuggled Harry K. Thaw out of Matteawan . . . Butler used a milk wagon as his Trojan horse to get inside the asylum gates, and when his steed clanked out of the courtyard, Thaw was hidden in the wagon . . . Broadway Sam is one of the town's better-known ticket specs . . . Six feet 4 inches tall, always immaculately attired, with a flower in his lapel and an expensive cigar in his teeth, Broadway Sam looks like money from home . . . The big fellow is very charitable, staking dozens of former actors, now down on their luck . . . Sir Joseph Ginsberg attached himself some years ago to the retinue of Willie and Eugene Howard, and they've kept him for laughs, just as W. C. Fields once employed Vince Barnett.

* * * *

Newspaper offices are familiar with Johnny Uptown, who for 40 years has supplied editors with their batches of papers, from edition to edition . . . He knew the elder Bennett, Dana, Munsey and Stoddard, and he recalls the days when funerals used to pass over the Long Island bridges, with troupes of professional mourners uttering loud laments for the deceased—though they had never seen him . . . Artie Hitchman is another ticket spec, who attempts to rival the gorgeous apparel of Broadway Sam . . . When Jimmy Walker, Artie's idol, returned from Europe, every photo showed youthful Hitchman standing directly behind Walker . . . He probably had to fell hundreds of others to get within focus, but he got there . . . Swifty Morgan, a great friend of mine, is about 5 feet 3 inches short, and a character who might have stepped out of a Wilson Mizner folio . . . He sells jewelry or real estate or horses, and it's a pleasure to buy from him, just to hear his amazingly picturesque language.

* * * *

Senator Wild Bill Lyons, who first bobbed up around here with Jack Kearns and Jack Dempsey, and is now a friend of Postmaster General Jim Farley, is a great character . . . He says he is the first white child born in Texas, still carries the six-shooter which he alleges he used with the Texas Rangers, and startles you by yanking a sword out of the cane he carries with him . . . Pitzy Katz is a little chap in great demand around town for his Jewish dialect stories . . . He travels with a chap, whose name I forget, who has a deadly fear of fish, alive or dead . . . Pitzy, when the evening gets dull, sends a waiter out for a fresh mackerel, produces it suddenly, and his pal goes into a frenzy . . . Violinsky is another raconteur, but my pet dialectician offstage is Sam Lyon . . . Two-Gun Murphy is still around town . . . He used to be a narcotic agent, but now works for a private detective agency . . . And Sam Boston, the betting commissioner, must not be overlooked in any such poll, nor Broadway Rose, who applies the bite for quarters and half dollars . . . Apple Annie, Runyon heroine, is dead.

Fourth Death Is Attributed To Poison Soda

Three More Ill as San Francisco Continues Search for Stuff's Source.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 21.—A fourth death and three more illnesses ascribed tentatively to poisoned baking soda spurred authorities tonight to intensify their search for the source of the lethal compound.

George Purnaras, 45, a dishwasher, died in convulsions today, a few hours after taking bicarbonate of soda.

Deputy Coroner Anthony Trabucco said the soda was from a different source than that blamed for three other recent deaths and 21 illnesses.

He investigated to determine if the dishwasher might have died from another ailment, however, when the proprietor of the restaurant reported he had been using the soda in cooking. None of his customers had complained, the restaurant owner said.

Trabucco seized the package Purnaras used for chemical analysis.

The latest death came as officers were attempting to determine how 800 pounds of household soda, repacked from damaged packages by a salvage company, had become contaminated by two deadly poisons.

Theories of accident and mass murder plotting were advanced, both without substantiation.

Coroner T. B. Leland advanced a theory the original 800 pounds of poisoned soda might have been scraped from the hold of a ship or the floor of a freight car, becoming contaminated in that way. The salvage company that repacked it does not deal in poisons, he said.

Joseph Rosenthal, proprietor of the store where the soda was retailed, and Nick Manno, head of the salvage company, were arraigned on charges of selling contaminated food. Their hearing was delayed until December 2 to permit time for an inquest.

Postlude . . . .

By Ray C. B. Brown

National Symphony Orchestra, Hans Kindler, conductor; Sylvia Meyer, harp soloist; Constitution Hall, Thursday afternoon. Program: "Fingal's Cave" Overture (Mendelssohn), "Danse Sacree et Danse Profane" (Debussy), Introduction et Allegro (Ravel), Symphony No. 1 in C minor (Brahms).

Since the occasion when she played several harp solos to illustrate the tone color of the instrument at one of the concerts for young people was not a formal one, the appearance of Sylvia Meyer yesterday afternoon was her debut as soloist with the organization of which she has long been an invaluable member. The hearty welcome she received at her entrance, the demonstration between her two solo numbers, the sheaves of floral tributes, and a half dozen recalls represented the auditors' appreciation not only of her immediate delivery, but also of her faithful service.

With her virtuosic mastery of the harp Miss Meyer combines fine musical taste and intelligence. Her technique, so assured as to seem second nature, is the servant of musicianly instinct, and her readings have genuine accents of poesy. No harpist uncertain in dexterity could essay either the Debussy or the Ravel work without trepidation, and no one without as sure a sense of tonal beauty as Miss Meyer's could play them with the finesse she displayed.

To hear compositions of Debussy and Ravel side by side, as it were, was to be struck afresh by the fundamental differences in their temperaments. Opposite the dreaminess of Debussy, amounting almost to intellectual indolence, stood the Voltairian keeness of Ravel, acute and ironic. Debussy was most at home in the twilit regions of music, and even his bursts of brilliance have the evanescence of rockets against the night. Ravel sought the brightness of noon, and even his moods of quietude are lit with flashes of wit.

So pervasive are these traits that they are dominant in music designed to demonstrate virtuosity. Debussy wrote these dances to order, as test pieces for conservatory students of the chromatic harp, yet they are as indelibly imbued with his personality as though he had composed them in an irresistible impulse of inspiration. Ravel's Introduction and Allegro is also a test piece—for the performer in a concert hall—yet it sparkles as though he had been unable to repress his corruscating epigrams.

Dr. Kindler began the concert with that overture in which Mendelssohn came most closely in contact with a Wordworthian feeling for landscape. This is open-air music, unmistakable in its fresh and breezy atmosphere. One hears the surge of the sea in the undulant movement of the first measures, the crash of waves against cliffs in the crescendos, and the raucous cries of gulls wheeling above the tumultous waters. It is music filled too with that awed excitement which grandeur can awake where land and water meet in struggle, a stirring of emotion akin to joyous melancholy or sobered exultation.

That same lifting of the heart against a sombre weight of thought is discernible in the last movement of Brahms' C minor symphony. There are doubts in this symphony, questionings addressed to an inscrutable universe, complainings of the tribulations endured, longings for an elysian peace, strivings against odds, yet all these fall behind when the theme of faith sounds forth. The meaning of the symphony may well be the triumphant emergence from a bewildered search, and that was the meaning that came from the fine reading which Dr. Kindler and his men gave it.
